Fee cuts 'call for re-evaluation' Grad education may suffer

CEDAR FALLS, Iowa—The quality and scope of graduate education at Iowa's three state universities will be jeopardized by funding restrictions, the state board of Regents was told Thursday.

The decision was reached in a 1-page report by the graduate dean of Iowa State University, which asked that the board of regents to vote on the budget.

The report stated that the board voted to revise the state's budget and the Graduate College's proposed US budget.

The dean also noted that all graduate education in the state was "doomed to the good of the state," and to appeal to the legislature in order to meet the needs of Iowa's residents.

In addition, the report noted that the university must respond to the demands of the state, and to provide a "viable" education to the people of Iowa.

Pedestrian campus in near future

By MIKE SELLING

Dedication cars and waiting area for 'Dinkytown' were among the latest in a series of changes that the University of Iowa is making to its pedestrian safety system.

These changes would not work in a pedestrian campus, but they are part of a new vision for the university.

According to John Helble, UI's director of safety, "There is a need to improve pedestrian safety on campus, and we are working on that."

The plan presented will provide a more pedestrian-oriented campus, he said, and to provide more parking for those who live on campus.

Arabs hope to exploit U.S. energy crisis

U.S. interests in Arab oil secure

By the Associated Press

The Arabs' struggle with internal problems may have some unexpected benefits for the United States.

The leaders of many Arab nations, including Egypt and Syria, are trying to exploit the energy crisis in order to improve their own political positions.

The Arabs are using the energy crisis as a means to wrestle more control over the international oil market from the United States and other major oil-producing nations.

In particular, they are focusing on the issue of OPEC's production cuts, which are expected to drive up oil prices.

The Arabs hope that by increasing their influence over OPEC, they can secure better deals for their own oil exports and exert more leverage over the United States and other energy-consuming nations.

The Arabs' strategy is based on the assumption that the United States, and other major oil-consuming nations, will be forced to rely more heavily on Arab oil as a result of the energy crisis.

The Arabs believe that by securing more control over the oil market, they can extract more benefits for themselves, including increased aid and loans from the United States and other Western countries.

The Arabs are also using the energy crisis to renew their demands for territorial revisions in the Middle East, particularly with regard to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

The Arabs hope that the energy crisis will make it more difficult for the United States and other Western countries to support Israeli actions in the region, and that they can use this leverage to negotiate more favorable terms for themselves.

In conclusion, the Arabs believe that the energy crisis presents them with an opportunity to secure more benefits for themselves and to exert more influence over the international oil market.

They are using this crisis as a means to advance their own strategic goals, and to enhance their position in the region.

Lorca's poetry to be theatrical life tonight

There's a special group that is present at any playgoer's forum. Mostly, one by one, the correspondents who write for the paper fill in the audience at a showing of a play. This is the group of writers whose names are always mentioned in the audience, and whose comments are always heard. None of the audience members, however, are aware of the existence of this group. They are, in fact, the ones who actually do the reviewing.

They are the ones who, for the most part, individually report on the plays, and who write the reviews that appear in the paper. They are, in a sense, the audience's eyes and ears, and they are, in another sense, the audience's voice.

The reviews are written in the following manner: after the play is over, the audience members are gathered in a room, and the reviews are read aloud. The audience members then have an opportunity to comment on the reviews, and to ask questions. The reviews are then revised, and are rewritten, and are finally published.

This process is repeated for every play that is shown, and for every playgoer who attends a showing of a play. The audience members are thus able to hear the reviews of the plays they have seen, and to participate in the process of reviewing the plays.
Michigan State's 1-0 shutout victory over Illinois in the NCAA Tournament final was a fitting end to a outstanding season for the Spartans. Illinois, coached by Dick Beigan, had a record of 24-5 and was the only team in the country to win a national championship and lose in the Final Four.

In the conference, the Buckeyes and the Wolverines squared off for the title, with the Buckeyes winning 92-76. The Buckeyes were led by forward Dick Schultz, who scored 25 points, including seven three-pointers. The Buckeyes' win eliminated the Wolverines from the title race, and put the Buckeyes in the Final Four.

Hawks end against Illini

By Dave Whiston

Two rental cars screeched to an end at the last second. When the Hawkeyes play last in the Fieldhouse, Tipoff is 7:30 p.m.

The game will be the last home game for Kevin Kunnert and Rick Williams, Glenn Angelino and Ken Angersola.

Iowa will be facing a team which has been the surprise of the conference. The Illini have won the last seven of their eight conference games, have a 19-2 season record and are in the NCAA Tournament.

A year ago the Illini took a 1-14 record into the last weekend of the regular season and upset Indiana in the first round of the Big Ten Tournament. This year they are the No. 1 seed.

A year ago Iowa, which is the No. 2 seed, was driven to extra periods by Illinois. With six seconds left and the game tied at 33-33, Mike Stoffleregen added.

The Illini's roller coaster ride to this year's Big Ten title is a far cry from the one year ago. Last year the Illini picked Illinois to finish fourth. The Illini picked Illinois to finish fourth this year, too.
