Boost investigation of Rienow murder; urge safety methods

By MAIKE WALDMANN

The number of agents investigating the murder of sophomore nursing student Sarab Rienow has increased dramatically, according to Dr. Craig Beek, director of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation.

Dr. Beek said there were 52 hitherto undisclosed major breakdowns in the area and originally had thought there might be some relation to the Iowa State and UI hospital nurse. Authorities said Duffy had sported $1.7 billion aides to appear.

UI tragedy reaction

In the aftermath of a tragedy, it is easy to overreact, to take extreme positions, to become emotional.

It is even easier when the tragedy is a brutal, senseless killing of young people, as occurred for the first time here—in a university residence hall last week.

Most of us have had the experience of an overreaction nor an understatement. You can be too slow or too often. You can take self-defense courses. You can discuss security problems with your friends. You can fortify your home where you're going when you leave. In apartments or residence halls, you can publicly ask strenghen what they're looking for in a friendly determination of their purpose in the building.

Most of us have also been security officers. They don't require possible infringements on the rights of registered students, apartment tenants, or others. They needn't be a bother to residents.

They require no special training for each other, watching out for each other, with such other acts as an effective effort to meet what seems to be coming the social realities of the '70s.

Supervisors pass resolution affecting ‘music festival’

The Daily Iowan—Two resolutions, both passed unanimously and affecting the music festival, were presented to the University of Iowa’s student government Tuesday evening. The resolutions included a proposal to move the event to another location and a call for increased security measures.

The first resolution, introduced by the University Student Government’s (USG) Student Conduct Committee, requested that the festival be moved from its current location due to concerns about noise and overcrowding. The resolution stated that the current location is not suitable for the event and that an alternative site should be found.

The second resolution, presented by the USG’s Finance Committee, called for increased security measures at the festival. The resolution stated that additional police officers and security personnel should be hired to ensure public safety.

Both resolutions were approved without discussion, and the student body will now be asked to vote on whether to accept the proposals.

Warning on disposal of junk cars

The Daily Iowan—Drivers are being reminded to properly dispose of junk cars to avoid fines and penalties. The city of Iowa City has implemented new regulations to prevent abandoned vehicles from cluttering streets and parking lots.

According to the city’s regulations, owners of junk cars must remove them within 48 hours of receiving a notice from the city. Failure to comply can result in a $50 fine for each day the vehicle remains on the street.

Iowa City residents are encouraged to contact the city’s waste management department if they notice a junk car in their neighborhood. The department will arrange for the vehicle to be removed at no cost to the owner.
