Rock fest

The eastern Iowa rock music festival planned for July 2-4 will be held in Muscatine County along the Mississippi River.

A promoter for Concept Investments, Inc. of Davenport said a site has been secured near the Wildcat Den State Park. The Muscatine County Board of Supervisors must now give their approval.

More than 40 rock groups have signed to appear at the festival. Promoters estimate between 40,000 and 60,000 persons may attend.

Gas rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior secretary Rogers C. B. Morton said Sunday that he expects gasoline prices to rise for the next four or five years.

But he said he doesn't expect the administration to seek a federal gasoline tax to encourage conservation of the fuel.

And he said he doesn't expect the price rise to reach levels as "dramatic" as 90 cents a gallon.

Morton said he doesn't believe large oil companies are purposefully holding back gasoline supplies to force small, independent stations out of business, as charged in congressional hearings last week by law-enforcement officials from six states.

Pressure

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. Henry A. Kissinger is likely to come under pressure at the Paris peace talks this week from another vote in Congress, possibly two, against continuing Indochina war operations.

The Senate, which already has voted to cut off all funds for U.S. war actions in Cambodia and Laos, takes up a proposal Monday to cut off the actions in all of Indochina.

House Appropriations Chairman George H. Mahon Friday rated prospects "excellent" that he could put a bill with a partial or full Cambodia-Laos cutoff to a House vote this week.

Stop war actions

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate report released Sunday sees little prospect for peace to be achieved in Indochina by political means and predicts a continued U.S. involvement in the southeastern Asian war.

The staff report prepared for the Senate foreign relations subcommittee on U.S. security agreements quoted Central Intelligence analysts as concluding there will be no general Communist offensive in the next four months.

But it added that in September the North Vietnamese are expected to emphasize ammunition in their supply flow and by late next fall they could again be in position to launch a major offensive similar to that in the spring of 1972.

The report, prepared by staff aides James G. Lowenstein and Richard M. Moose, contained previously undisclosed details of U.S. programs in Vietnam, Cambodia, Laos and Thailand. Sections were deleted by the State and Defense Departments and the CIA.

Extradited

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — The United States government has asked Costa Rica to extradite Robert L. Vesco, the American financier under indictment in connection with an unreported contribution to President Nixon's 1972 re-election campaign.

The Foreign Ministry announced Saturday it has forwarded the request to the supreme court. Sources said the court may decide Monday whether Vesco, a former New Jersey resident, can be extradited.

Vesco, a 37-year-old native of Detroit, has been indicted for trying to influence a Securities and Exchange Commission investigation of his stock dealings with an unreported $200,000 contribution to Nixon's 1972 campaign fund.

Explorer 49

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — A new Explorer satellite raced toward an orbit around the moon Sunday to record mysterious deep space radio signals which could reveal much about the early history of the universe.

The Space Agency's last scheduled moon flight in the foreseeable future was on course to the moon, a quarter million miles away, after being thrust flawlessly away from Cape Kennedy by a three-stage Delta rocket.

NASA officials reported the satellite, Explorer 49, is on target and "everything is going well."

"Quack!" the duck screeched when Barf stuck his paw beneath the displeasured mallard.

"Quiet!" Barf replied sullenly. "I'm just as unhappy about your problem as I am about mine."

Fleeing from the filthy flora Barf was heard to say, "Highs Monday will be in the 90's with a chance of showers through Tuesday."

CAMBUS may face cutbacks

UI lacks fuel oil contracts

By MARY WALLBAUM
News Editor

The University of Iowa CAMBUS system may face operational cutbacks or reorganization of its service for the remainder of this summer and the next academic year if UI is unable to obtain fuel contracts.

Although Iowa's three state universities sent out joint fuel contract offers to major oil companies in May, no bids to supply the fuel have been received, according to Ray Mossman, UI business manager.

John Dooley, CAMBUS director, said this is the first time Iowa universities have not received firm contract offers from first requests, but added a "crisis situation" does not yet exist.

Each of the state universities has decided to submit individual secondary contracts with a June 18 cut off date, Dooley said.

UI's current fuel contract expires June 30, giving the university time to negotiate for the 100,000 gallons of fuel needed for operations, Mossman said.

CAMBUS alone uses 90,000 gallons of diesel fuel yearly, and the remaining amount is used for university cars and service vehicles.

UI is having problems getting fuel contracts, said Wayne

Chadima, UI purchasing agent, because oil companies are unwilling to guarantee fuel delivery due to the unstable amounts of fuel currently available.

Also, the companies are including a clause in all contracts stating fuel prices and amounts can be changed subject to a 10-day written notice, Chadima said.

However, UI officials said the university should be able to obtain some type of contract, although it may have to accept monthly contracts with higher fuel prices, or re-submit for lower grade fuel.

Dooley noted that fuel prices have increased 50 per cent this year, and monthly contracts could raise the price higher.

He anticipates CAMBUS's operational expenses for the next academic year will increase $6,000.

However, he and other UI officials have not yet determined how higher costs will affect service, and will wait until receipts are in this September from student optional fees before any changes are planned.

George Chambers, vice-president for university administration, said that although he is "confident UI will receive a fuel contract, if contract costs exceed planned operational expenses the university has no funds available to cover the deficit.

Terming CAMBUS a "high priority service," Chambers said the bus system was essential for achieving the administration goal of a pedestrian oriented campus.

Shutting down CAMBUS could stop this project for 5-20 years, Chambers said, adding that "its survival depends on the student," who also considers the bus system a high priority item.

Chambers said if operational costs exceed expected limits, students can determine university priorities by choosing to pay optional CAMBUS fees.

"If enough funds are opted in, it is possible CAMBUS service may be expanded," he said. Philip Hubbard, vice-president for student services, said the administration has shown its "first priority" support of CAMBUS in the past by:

—allocating parking revenue income for CAMBUS.

—making work-study money available for CAMBUS drivers.

—constructing CAMBUS garages.

—agreeing to cut back student activity fee support for certain university groups, and giving the money to CAMBUS.

Although work-study funds are being cut back from other departments because of reduced federal appropriations, John Moore, UI financial aids director, said no cutbacks, or very limited ones, would be made in CAMBUS work-study funding.

He explained that CAMBUS occupies a unique position in the University because it is staffed totally with work-study personnel and operates year round. Because the CAMBUS system needed summer drivers, many of whom would also work next fall, Moore said CAMBUS employees were asked to process work-study applications early this spring, relieving them from facing work-study cutbacks.

Moore added that CAMBUS must have a full complement of drivers in order to operate, allowing students to continue processing for work-study payment for next fall.

John Kundell, assistant director of financial aids, added that priority has been given to CAMBUS work-study funding because "it performs a student service and we want to continue that service as much as possible."

Dean alleges White House pressure

NEW YORK (AP) — John Dean III has told Senate investigators the White House pressured the federal judge in the Watergate civil suit to delay taking "some potentially explosive depositions" until after the election, Newsweek magazine reported Sunday.

Dean also alleged, Newsweek said, that President Nixon was personally aware of the Watergate cover-up and that he and his agents frequently lied about it. Dean has made similar statements in previous news reports.

Newsweek said Dean claims to have a sheaf of supporting papers and memoranda, no one of which "convicts" the President, but which taken together suggest a damning pattern.

Newsweek said Dean told Senate probers that Judge Charles R. Richey, presiding in the Democrats' $6.4 million suit against the Committee to Re-Elect the President for bugging their headquarters, engaged in off-the-record conversations with administration aides in violation of legal ethics. It said the judge thereafter delayed taking the depositions until after the election.

Richey, contacted at his Washington home, denied the Dean report.

Stop hearings

WASHINGTON (AP) — An administration spokesman Sunday called for a stop to the Senate's televised Watergate hearings, but the head of the Republican party praised them as one way of exposing the scandal.

Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton said the hearings are being turned into a dramatic production which casts suspicion on possibly innocent people, and which might make it more difficult to prosecute guilty parties. "I think the court can get the facts out," he said.

But GOP national Chairman George Bush said middle-level party leaders are being hurt the worst by the scandal. "We want to see it cleaned up," he said. "I feel the more information out on this the better. The less appearance of a coverup in any quarter, the better."

Bush spoke on NBC's "Meet the Press," Morton on CBS's "Face the Nation."

The Senate Watergate investigating committee already has unanimously rejected a request by special prosecutor Archibald Cox to postpone its public hearings for three months.

Cox has now asked for a court order to prevent live radio and television news coverage of the hearings, which are set to resume Tuesday.

The Gallup poll published new figures indicating that the scandal still threatens to hurt Republican office-seekers in next year's mid-term elections.

The poll showed 55 per cent of those questioned felt themselves likely to vote for Democratic candidates for the House next year, 35 per cent said they probably would vote Republican and 10 per cent were undecided.

In other Watergate developments: —The New York Times reported third-hand that former White House chief of staff H. R. Haldeman ordered the destruction of "pertinent documents" that would have shown Haldeman received "actual data" from the Watergate wiretaps.

—The Times also quoted former Presidential counselor Charles W. Colson as saying he warned President Nixon last January, February and March that former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell had a role in planning the Watergate raid.

—The Washington Post reported that Nixon's personal lawyer, Herbert W. Kalmbach, is ready to testify that Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman, Nixon's former domestic adviser, ordered him to raise money paid to the Watergate defendants. The Times reported the same thing a day earlier.

UI model daycare offers research, learning climate

During an afternoon at the model Hawkeye Daycare Center, children are looked after by as many as eight staff members: two teachers, three teacher aides, a full-time cook, the director and a child care consultant.

Editor's note—The care of children is a growing concern for working parents in this country. This article is the first of three exploring different daycare facilities at the University of Iowa. Today's article looks at UI's role in daycare and the model Hawkeye Daycare Center. Tuesday's explores student cooperative daycare facilities, and Wednesday's analyzes the need for daycare in Iowa City.

By GAIL COOPER
Staff Writer

"The University of Iowa is not obligated to provide daycare services to all who need or desire them."

In the same statement, issued April 16, 1971, the university also said its obligation in the field of daycare for children was one of education and research.

This position was formulated in response to requests made that spring by groups of students and faculty who asked the UI to furnish space and daycare, free of charge, for cooperative daycare centers and to all persons in the community who desired it.

Until that time, groups of parents had been operating daycare centers as a cooperative endeavor in church basements and various homes of the participants.

The requests for daycare facilities were made after UI Pres. Willard Boyd announced the intention of the university to enter the field of daycare. His statement said, in part:

"I believe it would be appropriate for the University of Iowa to participate in the creation of an experimental daycare model. While it is appropriate for us to develop research models, the general application of research is not within the scope of the university. Other agencies—private, public, or quasi-public—can be organized for this purpose. If we extend our service beyond teaching and research, it will be clearly at the expense of instruction.

"Moreover, I believe that the research effort expended on any model must have a significant impact on the instructional program of the university and involve the preparation of students for future careers."

Boyd requested that a faculty committee made up of members of related fields of child care be set up to advise the university on those things necessary concerning the establishment of a model daycare center.

The committee, composed of a pediatrician, two nurses, a psychiatrist, an elementary educator, a child psychologist and a social worker, recommended a staff, a budget and an ideal place for the model daycare center: Hawkeye Court Apartments, part of UI's married student housing complex.

In a matter of time, everything was set up. By the following spring, two apartments were joined together to make the Hawkeye Court Daycare Center. The staff was hired. Toys, educational aids, air conditioners, indoor-outdoor carpeting, food, beds, diapers, medical supplies, games and arts and crafts were all purchased and put into appropriate places within the center. All that was needed now were the children. Recruitment from the students at Hawkeye Court took place and soon the waiting list grew to 100 children. The maximum number this center is licensed for by the state is 22 children.

Since the university's Institute of Child Behavior and Development had established a pre-school for research and training of four and five-year-olds, it was decided that Hawkeye Daycare Center would house infants and very young children, according to Margaret Weiser, professor of elementary education and member of the faculty daycare committee. The ages accepted are from three months to three years. After his third birthday, the child "graduates." From there the parent may enroll the child in a pre-school.

Sandra Cary, present director of the Hawkeye Center, explains the philosophy guiding the center: "Each child has a special adult that he is drawn to and we try to allow one adult for every four children. A lot of enriching experiences grow out of the small group sessions that are a part of each day's activities." Cary said that each day's activities are somewhat different, but there are "some planned activities such as open shelves with books, blocks, manipulative toys," and records are available for the asking. "There is a lot of individual reading to children," Cary explains, adding that the children help with activity planning. "Sometimes we act out going to the doctor's office," she said.

The center has eight staff members: two teachers, three teacher aides, a full-time cook, the director and a child care consultant. Cary noted that when the center first opened it quickly became obvious that eight hour shifts are too long for an individual to work so intensely with the children, so most of the staff are on six hour shifts.

In his statement on November 12, 1970, Boyd mentioned his hope that "one of the results of this model will be to assist the state in the development of standards for daycare centers."

Iowa is currently operating under 1954 standards for licensing daycare centers. There have been recommendations from Hawkeye Daycare Center and from the faculty committee to the Department of Social Services for suitable licensing standards to include ages from two weeks up instead of two years up, as it currently stands. As a result of these outdated standards, Hawkeye and the student cooperatives have all been granted provisional licenses by the state.

The Hawkeye model center is neat, clean, cool, exceptionally well-equipped and well-organized. Parents pay $50 a month and devote four hours each per week to the center.

The staff persons interact with the children almost constantly. As Cary states, "I think

Fighting continues in South Vietnam Paris talks stalled

SAIGON (AP) — President Nguyen Van Thieu recalled a top envoy from Paris Sunday for consultations on the Vietnam peace talks scheduled to resume this week in the French capital, sources reported.

Meanwhile, the shooting and bloodshed continued in South Vietnam. With no firm understanding among the four signatories on how to enforce the cease-fire agreement, key provisions continued to be ignored by Saigon and the Viet Cong.

The Saigon government said it was continuing "close consultations" with the U.S. It blamed the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese for the delay in strengthening the original agreement.

The Viet Cong have charged that Thieu's own regime is behind the lack of progress in Paris.

Acting U.S. Ambassador Charles Whitehouse conferred for 45 minutes with Foreign Minister Tran Van Lam, but the substance of their discussion was not disclosed.

Government sources said Thieu has ordered the deputy chief of the Saigon delegation to the bilateral political talks in Paris with the Viet Cong to return for "consultations." The deputy, Nguyen Xuan Phong, also was described as Saigon's key liaison with Henry A. Kissinger in the peace talks between North Vietnam and the United States.

No progress has been reported in the bilateral political talks for weeks, and government sources indicated issues still to be resolved include a precise timetable for elections and delineation of zones of control.

Government sources said the Saigon position is that there should be a direct link between an election timetable and establishment of the National Council of National Reconciliation and Concord provided for in the original Jan. 27 peace accord.

It is understood that Saigon fears that without a precise agreement, the Viet Cong will stall the balloting and the council will become in effect a coalition government during the interim, eroding Thieu's authority.

Kissinger returned to Washington Saturday night without reaching an agreement in the Paris negotiations. He said he will return to Paris to resume the talks Tuesday after discussions with President Nixon.

The Saigon military command reported another 162 alleged violations of the ceasefire by the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong during the 30-hour period ending at noon Sunday.

The biggest fight reported by the Saigon command Sunday was along the central coast in Quang Ngai Province

Nepalese airliner hijacked in India

NEW DELHI (AP) — Three armed men hijacked a twin-engine Nepalese airliner across the Indian border Sunday and escaped into the jungle with about $400,000, the Nepalese Embassy reported.

An embassy official said the money, which belonged to the Nepalese state bank, was being transported on a regular Royal Nepal Airlines flight from Biratnagar in southeast Nepal to the capital, Katmandu.

"The men got in as passengers and when the plane took off they showed the pilot a gun and said they wanted to go to Forbesganj," the official said.

The airline headquarters in Katmandu said the 20-seat Otter aircraft carried 15 passengers and a crew of three. Officials were unable to say if the passenger count included the three hijackers.

No one among the passengers or crew was reported injured.

The embassy spokesman said the hijackers did not appear to be politically motivated. He said the piracy appeared to be the work of "Nepali nationals who knew about the money and wanted some loot."

Forbesganj is in the east Indian state of Bihar, 15 miles south of Biratnagar and just across the border in India. The area is in the foothills of the Himalayas and is thickly forested.

Nepalese Ambassador K. B. Malla said the three hijackers ordered the pilot to land at a fair-weather strip at Forbesganj. The strip, built by allied forces in World War II, ordinarily is used only for emergency operations.

Malla said the trio grabbed cases containing the currency notes and drove away in a jeep waiting near the strip.

The Indian government began what officials said was one of the biggest manhunts in recent years in the three northern Indian states adjoining Nepal — Uttar Pradesh, Bihar and West Bengal.

Police said the robbery showed evidence of split-second timing and careful planning.

The propeller-driven plane returned to Biratnagar with the passengers and the airline sent another craft to resume the flight to Katmandu.

'Steiner Case' scandal rocks German politics

BONN, Germany (AP) — A cartoon in one of West Germany's biggest newspapers last week showed America's Uncle Sam and Britain's John Bull sitting in a laundromat, with bundles of dirty laundry labeled "Watergate" and "Lambton Sex Scandal."

Gingerly approaching with his dirty linen was Grober Michel, the peasant character with the tassel cap who represents West Germany. His bundle was labeled "The Steiner Case."

The cartoon reflected a homegrown scandal over espionage and alleged government vote-buying which has pushed Watergate off the front pages of West German newspapers.

If there's any resemblance to Watergate in the "Steiner Affair," it appears to lie less in the substance than in the way that each day brings some new, contradictory statement from a bewildering character cast.

The furor revolves around an obscure former opposition lawmaker named Julius Steiner.

From his temporary self-imposed exile abroad, the 49-year-old Steiner told several German publications that he acted as a double agent. He said he took orders from West German security men to maintain contacts with East German spymasters who wanted information on his Christian Democrat party.

Steiner also announced that he was one of two hitherto unidentified opposition lawmakers whose secret abstentions narrowly averted passage of a no-confidence motion in parliament in April 1972.

The no-confidence motion was raised by then opposition lower house floor-leader Rainer Barzel, in a bid to oust Chancellor Willy Brandt and halt his East-West drive toward detente at its most crucial phase.

Steiner's admission that he voted against Barzel's motion was immediately connected with unconfirmed reports alleging that two opposition men who abstained in the key ballot were bribed to do so by members of Brandt's ruling Social Liberal coalition.

Here are the major developments:

—Several opposition lawmakers swore they saw pencil marks on two abstention cards during the vote counting after the 1972 showdown ballot. They alleged that the marks could have been made by the supposedly bribed opposition men to show government tellers they had stuck to their bargain.

Whatever slender evidence of bribery might have resulted from a recheck of the cards disappeared when the parliamentary speaker told newsmen that an official, against regulations, had kept the cards unsealed in a tin filing cabinet for more than a year instead of in his safe. The speaker said the presence of pencil marks would prove nothing, since the marks could have been made later.

—Wilhelm Helms, 49, a lawmaker who switched from Brandt's coalition a month before the vote of confidence, said he was offered $30,000 to stay in the ruling coalition. The defection of Helms and four of his colleagues robbed Brandt of his ruling majority and helped set the stage for the confidence vote.

A former member of the smaller Liberal coalition party that Helms once belonged to said he offered Helms money not to defect. But he said he made the offer only to test whether the opposition had offered Helms a bribe and he said the party leaders knew nothing of his proposal.

'In' helps prison image

By MAUREEN CONNORS
Staff Writer

An ex-convict, with help from University of Iowa faculty and students, is publishing a magazine which serves as a showplace for talented convicts and a sounding board for penitentiary writers.

"In Magazine," a 72-page quarterly coming out in July and published by Wes Graham, 2313 Wayne Ave., an ex-convict, will contain fiction, poetry, plays and art work by convicts around the United States.

The magazine's purpose is to inform the public about convicts and to give convicts feedback on their work.

"We want to change the image of a convict as someone who can only pump gas or change tires," said Graham.

Graham, who became a self-taught writer and publisher of prison publications while in federal prison for eight years, came to Iowa City to be editor of Penal Digest International, also a collection of prisoners' works. Shortly after coming to Iowa City he decided to create his own magazine.

Funding for the magazine has come largely from personal contributions, but some support has also come from Iowa City businesses.

The magazine is a commercial endeavor, Graham says, "because working within the system you have to be the system." Magazine profits will be used to hire convicts for the magazine staff.

The first mailing list has 50,000 addresses on it and Iowa City residents may purchase subscriptions.

Convicts receive $25 for a published work but those whose work is not accepted will get more than rejection slips. Graham is contacting university personnel and students to help critique manuscripts received.

"Response, criticism and support" is what Art Rosenbaum, assistant professor of art, said he would give to prisoners showing potential. Rosenbaum also said he will be selecting art for the magazine.

Richard Braddock, rhetoric professor said he has volunteered his services to give reactions to works by people who generally don't have a chance to create.

Edward Schmidt III, A3, who selected three poems for the first issue from the 500 received, said the first issue will include an "unpolished sensitive poem by a 15-year-old heroin addict and a long polished poem by a well-educated professional criminal."

Graham says "In Magazine" is different from the already existing 247 prison publications because it utilizes talent "besides those convicts who hang around the prison library."

"In Magazine" tries to give the public insight into prisoners, and makes it easier for the ex-convict when he or she gets "out," Graham said.

Groundbreaking today

Construction of a $14 million addition to the north side of University Hospital will begin today with groundbreaking ceremonies at 11 a.m. outside the North Tower entrance.

The 168,000 square foot addition, scheduled for completion in 1975, will house expanded outpatient clinic facilities to accommodate the approximately 260,000 outpatients yearly served by University Hospital, according to Dean Borg, director of hospital information services.

The seven story structure will also provide an eight-room operating suite that will replace present facilities that have been in service since 1928.

The new structure will house the physical therapy, dermatology, thoracic, cardiovascular and neurosurgery clinics of the hospital. The obstetrics and gynecology clinics and nuclear medicine departments will also be transferred to the new structure.

In addition, the building will provide 80 additional beds for inpatient services.

Sharing groundbreaking duties today are Dr. Robert Chapman, vice-president of the Iowa Medical Society and Kenneth Hobson, president of the Iowa Hospital Association.

The North Tower entrance will be closed today and will remain closed until the completion of the addition. The north hospital road will also be closed for the first time since the University Hospital was dedicated in 1928.

The main entrance of the hospital was shifted to the south wing last year in anticipation of the addition.

Skylab crew views cities, sees growth

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Clear skies greeted the Skylab astronauts over the U.S. Midwest and Northeast Sunday and the orbiting tourists snapped scores of pictures.

They also scrutinized urban development and environmental problems using sharp-eyed remote sensors.

"We're getting a lot of good pictures in the Great Lakes and in New England this morning," said astronaut Paul J. Weitz.

Clear weather photographs of those areas were a continuing goal of Weitz and his crewmates, Charles Conrad Jr. and Dr. Joseph P. Kerwin. Clouds have obscured the northern part of the U.S. during much of their mission.

Weitz said they had shot so many photographs Sunday of the earth 270 miles below that they ran out of special exterior film. They switched to another film and changed the settings on their cameras.

Conrad, Kerwin and Weitz were in the 17th day of a 28-day mission on Sunday.

bored children are in need of more discipline and more things to do. The need, as we see it, is to stimulate them."

One mother expressed her approval of the center's positive approach in dealing with children. "I just wish that we weren't moving so I could get my son enrolled for next year."

Parents do have an input into the policy making decisions at the center through a committee made up of four parents, two staff members and two faculty committee members. They meet as the need arises to discuss problems and solutions.

Is the Hawkeye Daycare Center a success? From the administration's standpoint, yes. According to one official interviewed, who chose to remain anonymous "We have been successful in that we have accomplished what we set out to do. That is, we wanted to research the subject and train upcoming professionals in various fields of child care. In that we have been successful."

But if you approach the question from another side, the student cooperative's, you might find your answer in what one cooperative daycare center member said.

"Here we sit with all our children (ninety-two in all five co-ops) amidst our broken toys, with insufficient funds for all the necessary repairs, safety hazards all around us, scrimping to raise the $75 each month for the rent, and the university is pouring over $60,000 per year into Hawkeye Court Daycare!"

A staff member of the Hawkeye Daycare Center interacts with children to make play an educational experience, working generally with no more than four children at a time.

Campaign laws need revamping

The procurement and distribution of campaign donations is rapidly becoming the main problem of election year activities. And like it or not, it's not a problem that offers an easy solution.

Unfortunately, there are far more problems with campaign donations than there are possible solutions.

The problems have been talked about before, but it always helps to remind ourselves of those unfortunate off-shoots of campaign donations and the spending of them.

Money has turned election campaigns into little more than public relations work. It has become the same as trying to sell a packaged product with the emphasis taken off issues and tacked onto snappy advertisements.

Political contributions draw special interest groups like a magnet and often force the candidate in need of money to make promises, which are sometimes unfair to the and sometimes illegal, as in the case of Gov. Cahill of New Jersey. Fortunately, these facts were brought to the attention of the voters of his state and he was recently defeated in a primary election.

Campaign donations are basically an unfair practice because one candidate is always going to be able to out-spend his opponent which enables him to get far greater exposure. And as any candidate will tell you, exposure is half the game. In the race for governor last year, Gov. Robert Ray outspent his opponent, Paul Franzenburg approximately 2-1, and that amounts to a great deal of exposure.

A candidate's appeal for money turns an election into a cheap and shoddy operation, when in fact an election campaign should be little more than a free exchange of ideas.

What are the solutions, or are there any?

The Iowa Senate passed a stricter spending law last week that is far and away superior to the present law.

The present law is generally considered meaningless, because it only requires the candidate to report contributions of which he had personal knowledge. Many candidates finance their campaigns through committees, a system making it possible for them to deny any knowledge of finances spent on their behalf.

Gov. Ray reported receiving $53,000 in contributions, but approximately $75,000 was spent on his behalf by the Republican Central Committee alone.

The new bill requires political committee treasurers to report total contributions, total spending and requires all the names and addresses of individuals who donate over $100 in statewide campaigns.

Perhaps the best feature of the bill was an amendment introduced by Sen. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, that permits a candidate to spend only a certain amount on advertising, based on the previous presidential vote.

All of these provisions are a good step forward in the fight over campaign spending, but it still has one glaring omission—it sets virtually no limit on the amounts that candidates can spend.

Until we have a uniform law that limits spending and allows candidates to spend equal amounts, the problems arising from this issue will still be around.

Until we make it possible for everyone to run for office, instead of those who have easy access to big money, there will be no such thing as free elections in this country.

Until we do away with the excess campaign money, there will be problems.

Charles Colson, advisor to the President, said in an interview last week that the President had told him of his fears of what might happen because of all the money that the re-election committee had obtained.

The President's fears proved to be right.

Ryan off base

To the Editor:

I will always believe in freedom of the press but I never will condone abuse of press privileges. I feel Mr. Ryan of PAT has done this repeatedly. His column in the Daily Iowan, Tuesday, May 15th is a typical example of his lies and distortions of the truth.

He states that tenants in the Leased Housing Program have only one person to deal with in such matters as grievances, etc. This is a lie and Mr. Ryan knows it. On page 24 of the Statement of Policy Book of the Housing Commission, which all tenants in this program have a copy of, is a grievance procedure to be followed whereby they can come to the H.C. with any and all complaints.

For Mr. Ryan's benefit, in executive session last year (to secure the privacy of the tenant) we heard two complaints and both cases were settled to the satisfaction of the tenants. Had the tenant not been satisfied with the ruling of the H.C. then there are further avenues of appeal and in the end it can even be brought before the City Council.

Mr. Ryan, why don't you at least read the Policy Book we gave to you free of charge. Perhaps if Mr. Ryan would, he wouldn't put his foot in his mouth so many times and perhaps he could write a little more truthful and accurate column. He seems to delight in pointing out other people's mistakes but does not seem to see his own.

Mr. Ryan continually stated in his column that there are 209 persons in our program. How stupid can one get? We have 209 leases within the program and are probably housing between 400 and 500 people.

Now that the City Attorney, Jay Honohan, and the Johnson County Bar Association have both rejected the tenant-landlord ordinance in its present form, basically for the same reasons the H.C. rejected it, and then were judged unqualified in Mr. Ryan's eyes to do so. I can, hardly, wait to read Mr. Ryan's column in which he will judge these people unqualified and state also that they do not have the expertise to judge this code. Do you suppose someone in the Supreme Court has the ability to judge this, according to Mr. Ryan's wishes?

In conclusion, I would like to state I am still waiting for the answers to my three questions that I asked of Mr. Ryan in the Daily Iowan recently. I received a two page letter from him at home but in the eighteen paragraphs I found not one answer to my questions. I have had many phone calls from both tenants and landlords agreeing with the stand the Housing Commission took on both the tenant-landlord code and the Housing Commission's refusal to release the names of its tenants to PAT.

Respectfully submitted,
James P. Stier

Pen pals wanted

To the Editor:
I would like a pen pal from the readers of your newspaper. I read your newspaper in the foreign Newspaper section in Central Library in Lagos a week ago. I have been eager for pen pals in U.S.A., but was unable to get one. So, I seized this opportunity to write you to please publish my name and address in your newspaper for pen pals.

I am a Nigerian girl, 18 years of age, light in complexion and 5'2" tall.

I am a form V student and am hoping to graduate this year.

My hobbies are collecting foreign stamps, magazines, IRC, tape recordings, music, swimming, walking, I like playing netball, table tennis, basketball and lawn tennis, reading the bible, newspapers, magazines and writing letters far abroad.

I promise to answer all letters from any part of the U.S.A., whether they are old or young if they are willing to write to me.

Should this my humble request be fully granted, hence I will be very grateful.

Yours faithfully,
Miss Lola Akanni

the office of the President of the University, and to the Dean of the Graduate College.

I have more than just a "psychological commitment", as your editorial states, to the University of Iowa. I have invested nearly $500 in moving here from Minneapolis and in the apartment lease that I have signed and have now had to break, because I have to return to Minneapolis. The reasons: a. There is no NDEA money to be had by graduate students. None. b. Work study has also been slashed. c. The proposed $400 tuition increase. I realize that all of these things are now common knowledge, but I wanted to add my personal experience to the general protest.

When I received my BA in 1970 from Beloit College, I could not go on to graduate school because of Mr. Nixon's war. Simply getting my Conscientious Objector status took nearly two years, and then I was told that I had been put into a holding classification and that I'd likely never be called. I spent those two years doing actual CO work for which I never got credit. I had been planning this return to school now for nearly a year, and here I am once again screwed by Mr. Nixon's impoundment of funds.

At least I have been told that I can have my $2.50-hour job back. I fear greatly though for those students like me who have no jobs and I fear for higher education as a whole.

Ellsberg, Russo: political trial

LOS ANGELES (LNS)—The court room was quiet and tense on May 11 as Pentagon Papers trial judge William Matthew Byrne read his statement on White House interference in the case of Daniel Ellsberg and Tony Russo. Carefully, Byrne detailed how recent disclosures "demonstrate that governmental agencies have taken an unprecedented series of actions with respect to these defendants."

Then, shouts and tears of joy exploded from almost everyone in the crowded courtroom as Byrne concluded: "I am of the opinion that the only remedy available that would assure due process and the fair administration of justice is that the trial be terminated and the defendants' motion for dismissal (b) granted and the jury discharged."

Leonard Boudin, Ellsberg's chief counsel, remarked: "I think the decision was appropriate, necessary, justified, eloquent and dispositive." Prosecutor David R. Nissen, could only confess sourly that "it appears that the posture is such that no appeal will be possible."

Indeed, if Nissen had asked the jury, they would have told him that a retrial was not only impossible but unnecessary. A survey of the jurors revealed that 11 of the 12 would have voted for acquittal on all counts.

For the Nixon administration, Byrne's decision meant defeat in yet another political trial. Ellsberg and Russo had been charged with 15 counts of conspiracy to defraud the U.S., theft of government property, and espionage for copying the Pentagon Papers in 1969.

In his unprecedented decision, Byrne stated that "commencing on April 26, the government has made an extraordinary series of disclosures regarding the conduct of several governmental agencies." He explained that it had come to his attention that after the original indictments in 1971, "White House officials established a special unit (the Plumbers) to investigate one of the defendants."

Byrne said that this special unit operated with the approval of the FBI and warned that "we may have been given only a glimpse of what this special unit did regarding this case, but what we know is more than disquieting."

It was also revealed that the CIA, "presumably acting beyond its statutory authority and at the request of the White House" had provided disguises, photographic equipment and other paraphernalia for a raid by convicted Watergate conspirators E. Howard Hunt and G. Gordon Liddy in the office of Ellsberg's psychiatrist in September, 1971.

Abortion and liberalism

Congratulations to Harold Hughes for announcing his truly liberal stand on abortion. It is about time that the liberal leaders in this nation recognize, as Sen. Hughes does, that "the right of all life to be is paramount."

For too long the country's leading liberals and conservatives have side-stepped the abortion issue by ignoring the substantive question involved. Neither true liberalism, which promotes individual welfare, nor true conservatism, which advances individual liberties, can encompass a position which permits the destruction of actual or potential human life. Only those who are committed to neither can honestly support legalized abortion—unless they ignore the life issue.

It is difficult to understand how any serious discussion of the abortion issue can take place without consideration of the fundamental question of life. Yet that is precisely what the advocates of legalized abortion have done. That is exactly what the Supreme Court did.

If abortion advocates desire to have an intellectually honest debate about the fundamental change they seek in the moral and legal standards of American life, they should not ignore the life question or fall on the error in fact that a fetus is not a human being.

They should, rather, face the fact that they are contending that the rights of one or more human beings to health or happiness may in some circumstances become so important that they take precedence over the very right to exist of another human being.

Many of the leading intellectuals supporting legal abortions are facing that fact. And while disagreeing with their position, I respect them for dealing with the real issue.

The integrity, the untouchableness, the inviolability of every human life is the cardinal principle and the centerpiece of the legal institutions of the English-speaking world, and, to a large extent, of every system of law devised by man.

However convenient, convincing or compelling the arguments in favor of abortion may be, the fact remains that the taking of a life, even though it is unborn, cuts out the very heart of the principle that no one's life, however unwanted and useless it is, may be terminated to promote the health and happiness of another human being.

Have we dulled our moral conscience to the extent that we permit the strong and dominant members of society to extinguish or terminate the lives of those individuals whose physical, mental or sociological development may, in the judgment of society, be substantially arrested?

Have we allowed the evils of our society—war, crime, human misery—to dehumanize us to the point that we are insensitive to life itself as well as to the importance of quality life?

Are we willing to permit this vital issue to be decided by a Supreme Court which virtually ignored the life issue involved?

It will be a tragedy beyond description if the question of abortion is finally resolved on the basis of sentiment, utilitarianism, emotionalism, a constitutional quirk or expediency rather than on the basic ethical issue involved—the immorality of the destruction of any innocent human being by other human beings for their own benefit.

Drama lab forced to charge admission

Patrons to pay for plays

By JOE PODUSKA
Staff Writer

University of Iowa students must now pay to attend Dramatic Arts Laboratory productions.

Although in previous years any student could get a free ticket for plays produced by students in the laboratory, inflation and resulting increased production costs have necessitated a ticket charge, said David Thayer, professor of dramatic arts.

"Last year alone we lost $6,000 because of rising costs," Thayer said, "and it's been that way for the last several years."

The laboratory has produced scores of plays since it was founded by the dramatic arts department in the early 1920s.

Regular tickets will cost $2.50, but students will be allowed a $1.50 discount, lowering the actual student price to one dollar, Thayer said. An added discount will be attached to season tickets that go on sale at the Union box office this fall.

Previously, the only cost to students who acquired tickets for laboratory productions was $50 for a reserved seat if they wished one.

Productions had been supported by student activity fees in the past, and the laboratory faced a crisis last month when its $24,000 share of the fee was diverted to the UI bus system CAMBUS. This amounted to a 75 per cent budget cut.

But the university administration provided the money, half of it from budgets under the direction of Philip G. Hubbard, vice-president of academic affairs, and half from the $55 million General Education Fund, managed by vice-president for university administration George Chambers.

"It is our intention to supply the needed funds permanently," Hubbard said. "However, they (Dramatic Arts) will have a difficult time because of rising costs."

Thayer said his department requested $36,000 for the laboratory next year, $12,000 of the budget will still be lacking.

Commenting on the practice of charging students for tickets, Thayer said, "No one (in the department) is in any way happy about it." But he added that "it was probably never appropriate" to be funded by student fees.

"We should have been financed by state funds, considering that it's a laboratory like the medical labs or the chemistry or geology labs. If you use that logic it should be supported by the state, but few people agree with that."

William Inge dies; won Pulitzer Prize

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Pulitzer Prize winning playwright William Inge died Sunday morning, apparently a suicide victim, police said. He was 60.

Detectives said Inge's body was found in his automobile, the engine running and the garage door closed. Death was believed to be by carbon monoxide poisoning, they said.

The body was discovered by the writer's sister, Helene Connell, who lived with him in the Hollywood hills.

Inge won the Pulitzer prize for drama in 1950 for his play "Picnic." He also won an Academy Award in 1962 for his screenplay of "Splendor in the Grass."

He reportedly had been distressed recently because of a lack of screenwriting work.

Investigators said Inge had been admitted to the UCLA Medical Center last week for psychiatric observation following a drug overdose. He reportedly signed himself out of the hospital three days later.

Funeral arrangements were pending.

Inge's other works included "Bus Stop," "Dark at the Top of the Stairs" and "Come Back Little Sheba"—his first play produced on Broadway.

U. S. spending up in Southeast Asia

WASHINGTON (AP)—The total value of U.S. defense contracts for goods and services in Southeast Asia was $3 billion higher on April 1 than it was when the Vietnam cease-fire agreements were signed, Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., disclosed Sunday.

Aspin said the largest contractor for the region is Air America, an operation, he said, of the Central Intelligence Agency with contracts out of Thailand totaling $41.5 million.

The time span of the contracts and when they were let by the Defense Department were not disclosed. Aspin said all his information came from computer read-outs supplied by the Pentagon.

After Air America, oil companies led the list of 118 companies doing $260.7 million worth of business in Southeast Asia. Twenty-eight contracts are for more than $1 million each.

The totals for Vietnam-only contracts show a drop of $3 million, Aspin's report said, to a level of $158 million 2½ months after the January cease-fire accords.

Contracts through the Agency for International Development, an arm of the State Department, were not included in the list.

The range of services involved runs from operation, fueling and service of aircraft to construction to housekeeping services and typewriter leasing.

AIM encampment continues; six days

Today will be the sixth day that Iowa American Indian Movement (AIM) members have been encamped on the lawn of the United Methodist Church headquarters in downtown Des Moines.

Thirty to fifty Indians belonging to the militant organization that sponsored the Wounded Knee takeover set up camp on the church grounds last Wednesday.

Since that time, while rumors of confrontation spread through the circle of onlookers, federal marshals and local police have been held at bay by church officials. AIM leaders and church authorities are now engaged in hushed negotiations concerning Indian demands for funding.

Harvey Majors, head of the Des Moines AIM, has been joined in the negotiations by AIM members from Sioux City, Tama and Cedar Rapids.

Apparently the action grew out of the church's reneging on a funding pledge to the Indians that followed an AIM takeover of Des Moines' Church of the Open Bible earlier this spring. And although information is scarce due to an agreement not to talk to the press during negotiations, sources indicate that the Indians' funding demands for various programs do not hinge up on the earlier pledge.

Joining the Iowa Indians at the camp site have been members of the national AIM organization, including Ron Petite of the national AIM office. Two representatives of the National Lawyers Guild—Duane Rohovitza, University of Iowa law student, and lawyer Jane Fox, 320 River St.—have gone to Des Moines to offer legal assistance.

The Indians and church authorities have met every other day since the camp-in, and according to Fox, negotiations will continue today.

report

A CAMBUS lost only paint, but a car driven by Elizabeth Shay, 48, 1822 Winston Ave., suffered an estimated $300 damage to its left side about 10:40 a.m. Friday when the car changed lanes because of construction on the south side of the Burlington Street bridge. No charges were filed.

Little Caesar's Pizza Treat, 127 S. Clinton St., reported to Iowa City police Friday morning that it lost $200 cash in a break-in.

Drinking cups worth $200 to $250 were destroyed recently by vandals who also caused $150 damage to a lodge house at Lake MacBride, the concessionaire there told the Johnson County Sheriff's Department Friday.

John J. Eckerman, 21, 3213 Lakeside, was charged Saturday with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol.

The car he was driving crossed the center line, struck a car driven by Robert J. Uhler, 35, 7 Mount Vernon Ct., and then rolled into the yard and came to rest at the front steps at 1326 Kirkwood Ave. about 3 p.m. Saturday, police said.

Eckerman, who also gave Route 2, Oxford, as his address, refused treatment for minor injuries.

Three persons were injured when a car went out of control about 2:20 a.m. Friday and plunged into the yard at 521 Melrose Court.

The driver of the car, Joe Donohue, 21, 2520 Potomac Dr., suffered head lacerations and was charged with failure to control his vehicle.

Two passengers were also injured, police said. Bob Zwicky, 21, 913 Cottonwood, suffered head lacerations, and Paul Dunlap, 21, 2018 Dunlap Court., suffered a hip injury.

Tom Weiskopf raises his fist over his head after sinking a birdie putt on the ninth hole of Sunday's final round of the Philadelphia Golf Classic. Weiskopf went on to win the event at Whitemarsh Valley Country Club, with a 14-under par 274 for the tourney. AP Wirephoto

Weiskopf overpowers Philly field

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Tom Weiskopf, suddenly the hottest player in the game, was never really challenged Sunday in his overpowering drive to the title in the Philadelphia Golf Classic—the third victory in his last four starts.

Tom, who insists he's a new, more mature man with a new, more positive approach, finished his brisk stroll over the 6,708 sun-splashed yards of the Whitemarsh Valley Country Club course with a one-underpar 71 final round.

That gave the 30-year-old Ohio golfer a 72-hole total of 274, 14-under-par, and provided Weiskopf with a bulging four-stroke victory margin. He led by three starting the final round, was on top by five most of the way and was never threatened.

The victory continued a string of incredible play that started five weeks ago in Fort Worth, Tex. He won the Colonial National Invitational there, took a week off, then came back and finished second to Jack Nicklaus in the Atlanta Classic. He followed that with a runaway triumph in Charlotte, N.C. last week and then breezed through this one.

In those four weeks, he has collected $117,145 in prize money and has a stroke average of 68.4.

Weiskopf, now a winner of eight titles in as many years on the pro tour, collected $30,000 from the total purse of $150,000 and puched his season's earnings to $151,867, third behind Nicklaus and Australian Bruce Crampton. It may have been the sweetest of Weiskopf's three triumphs this year. He finally beat Nicklaus.

Big Jack had been absent in his other two victories.

This week he was on hand and shot a final-round 67 for 280, six strokes back.

Jim Barber, the long-haired, obscure tour sophomore who led for the first two rounds, finished birdie-birdie and took second alone with a 70—278. His $17,125 check more than doubled his previous career earnings.

Final scores and money-winnings for the Philadelphia Golf Classic:

Tom Weiskopf	67-71-65-71—274	$30,045
Jim Barber	$17,126	65-67-76-70—278

Goolagong snaps Evert tennis jinx

ROME (AP) — Australia's Evonne Goolagong ended a personal jinx Sunday by upsetting top-seeded Chris Evert 7-6, 6-0 in the women's singles final of $135,000 Italian Open Tennis Tournament.

In three previous tournament finals this year, the 20-year-old Miss Goolagong had been beaten each time by the 18-year-old Miss Evert, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Miss Goolagong played a faster, more aggressive game than Miss Evert, who relied on methodical baseline shots.

Brewers streak to 8 of 9

ANAHEIM (AP) — Bob Coluccio's three-run homer capped a four-run Milwaukee uprising in the seventh inning Sunday that carried the surging Brewers to an 8-6 victory over the California Angels.

Coluccio's blast came off Bill Singer, 10-3, who was rocked for 14 hits before departing in the seventh. Jim Slaton, 3-5, got the victory with relief help.
