Circus reality versus childhood memories

Circus ringmaster: 'It's a classic form of entertainment that will never die'

By JOHN DUNLOP

The story of the Ozark, an old circus, is null and void. The last day of operation was last day of April, with a loss of many customers, some having to go elsewhere to see the show.

In 1912, the Ozark, a well-known circus, started its journey with a grand opening ceremony. The circus was famous for its unique acts involving lions, elephants, and trapeze artists.

The Ozark's last day was filled with a mix of emotions. Some were sad to see the end of an era, while others were happy to have witnessed the circus one last time.

The council will reject Plaza rezoning

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon has requested the Senate to pass a zoning change to allow a shopping center to be built on the site of an existing residential area.

The three council members who supported the rezoning request will not be able to vote because the Plaza property is outside of the city.

The council met last week to discuss the proposed $10 million shopping center. At the time, the council members were divided on the issue, with two members supporting the rezoning and one opposing it.

The council members who supported the rezoning were: Mayor C.L. (Tim) Brandt, Mayor Pro Tem, and Councilman John Smith. The council member who opposed the rezoning was: Councilman Mark Johnson.

The council members who supported the rezoning stated that the proposed shopping center would bring needed jobs and economic development to the area.

The council member who opposed the rezoning stated that the proposed shopping center would destroy the character of the residential area.

The council members who supported the rezoning stated that the proposed shopping center would bring needed jobs and economic development to the area.

The council member who opposed the rezoning stated that the proposed shopping center would destroy the character of the residential area.

Although the council members were divided on the issue, the final vote was 3-2, with the three council members who supported the rezoning voting in favor and the council member who opposed the rezoning voting against it.

Iowa State Bank explains the new savings rates.

Recent changes in federal regulations allow banks to offer you new maximum interest rates and flexibility.

There are so many different kinds of accounts and interest rates it tends to be a bit confusing. As a public service, here is a clear, concise explanation of what the Iowa State Bank & Trust Company has to offer.

Rates are generally based on two factors:
(1) how much money you want to save, and
(2) how long you want to save it. Depending on these factors, Iowa State Bank & Trust Company can offer you from 5% to 7½% annual interest on your savings. With daily compounding of interest at this actually comes out, or to a greater effective annual yield.

Here's how our savings plans break down:

5% - Statement Savings

- Instant interest savings accounts pay 5% effective July 1, 1973. You can open an account with any amount, add any amount anytime and withdraw any amount anytime. We compound the interest daily for an effective annual yield of 5.19%.

9½% - Golden 2-Saver Passbook Account - Regular Plan

- Increased rates are effective July 1, 1973, on new accounts and any additional deposits to existing accounts. Deposits made prior to July 1, 1973, will draw the new rates at their maturity. You must open the account with a $100 minimum deposit and may add any amount anytime. The 9½%-yesterday plan pays 5½% with an effective annual yield of 5.73%. The one or two year plan pays 6% with an effective annual yield of 6.27%. All interest on this plan is compounded daily and paid quarterly.

- New savings certificates pay 9½% with an effective annual yield of 8.02%. You must have a minimum of $10,000.00 to start this account.

That's the story—as plain as we can say it. If you have any questions, we invite you to call 338-1345. Or stop by and talk with your personal Iowa State Banker who'll help you decide which account or accounts suit your situation. Then—back on and watch your savings grow.
WASHINGTON (AP) — As the Senate Watergate committee prepared Monday to begin a constitutional showdown with President Richard M. Nixon over tapes made in his White House office, a key actor in the political intrigue of the Watergate scandal, the former White House aide known as Haldeman, testified for the first time that he had shredded a number of Watergate-related political tapes.

Haldeman, who helped to create the so-called "dirty tricks" committee responsible for Watergate, shredded a number of tapes after he was told by President Nixon that the tapes made it appear as if Nixon had ordered the break-in at the Watergate office building.

Haldeman said he shredded the tapes because he believed that the tapes could be used against Nixon in any legal proceedings that might arise.

The committee went into closed session Monday to hear the testimony of Haldeman, who was one of the most powerful figures in the Nixon administration.

The committee, which is investigating the Watergate scandal, is expected to call several other former Nixon aids to testify.

The tapes were made in an attempt to cover up a plot to burglarize the Democratic National Committee headquarters in the Watergate complex.

The trial of former President Nixon on charges of obstruction of justice, perjury and conspiracy begins today.
Military arms sales should be limited

Many individuals have been arguing vehemently against United States arms sales to the other countries over the period of the last few years, and it appears almost certain that there is no immediate relief from this unwieldy tax burden the country bears. U.S. military aid since the end of World War II has reached approximately $3.2 billion and constitutes an annual $6 billion yearly contribution.

The government policy towards foreign military assistance is unclear at this time because of a bipartisan attempt to make it more consistent with the so-called Nixon Doctrine. Both the Administration and Sen. Fulbright, D-Ark., have introduced bills to shift the emphasis from grants to loans.

Another reason that the Fulbright bill would have very little if any effect on the sale of arms to foreign countries is that our credit has been changed into cash transactions, leaving the volume of transactions unchanged. What, if any effect the Fulbright bill will have is going to be virtually impossible to measure, the important question of just how much unanswered.

The Administration offers three reasons for justifying the sale of arms to other countries, some of which would be far better for holding less than flexible.

- Deputy Secretary of State Baker has defended the sale of arms to Latin America.
- As a region, Latin American nations still spend less than two percent of their gross national products on military budgets. Since those nations are generally strapped with their limited spending, we believe it is in our national and Latin American interest that they meet their equipment needs through U.S. sources.

- If the Administration has argued that promoting military sales abroad opens opportunities for the transmission of American values and standards, along with the international policy.

- There is the famous cliché of "Containing Communism." Latin American nations have been anything but friendly towards the United States in recent years, if they have assets, so much better, let them elsewhere.

- The easy availability of arms on the open market the States has not endeared us with great values and standards which we should be exporting at high prices.

- Finally, the recently formed with Latin America.

- It is just restricting credits, Fulbright and the rest of the Senate should concentrate on limitations of all sales of arms to other countries. Hopefully, a good start will be made from the United States for help in making a better and safer world for our neighbors.

Weapons have never fed the hungry or clothed the naked.

Bicycle safety

To the Editor:

Regarding the article on bicycle safety: From my experience, I believe that bicycle riders do not want to hear that bicycle traffic is simply a major problem as bicycle safety. While each situation on the part of bicyclists should be taken individually, I question if their negligence or other inconveniences such as parking a bicycle on the sidewalk, frequently riding the bike in the middle of a thoroughfare, or being blindfolded at a stop, have any relation to the role of an accident on the road.

Occasionally, the careless behavior of one biker in fact creates an accident for his group. For instance, a biker is arabically riding the bike, and a pedestrian is about to cross. He is too busy trying to see if he can get a green light than he is paying attention to the pedestrian. In the meantime, the pedestrian is about to get hurt. The biker does not even realize that he has caused the accident.

Governments should not tolerate such negligence, especially in areas where bicycle traffic is the most common means of transportation. All biker riders should follow the law and respect the safety laws of our communities.

Social state

To the Editor:

Do we really want a socialistic state in this country run by all right wing groups? The present system is less democratic than demagogues can put it.

Looking off the situation is considerably more complex. We hope many of our friends are for the proposition. Some of the publics can make an effort to help those who can, try to change it. Our task is to defeat the current trend of our social system.

A recent study by the American Civil Liberties Union shows that the social system can be very beneficial to the government by helping these officials to keep the public in line.

Social program agencies commonly are to have new lines. One of the main things we can do is that our friends are for the proposition. Some of the publics can make an effort to help those who can, try to change it. Our task is to defeat the current trend of our social system.
