Lawmakers debate last-minute spending measures

The White House is facing a war of words with Congress over its proposed last-minute spending measures, as lawmakers are expected to vote on a bill that would fund the government through early February.

The bill, which was introduced by House Speaker Paul Ryan, includes a variety of spending measures, includingforcersonthe border wall, military equipment, and humanitarian aid.

However, the bill also includes provisions that could be seen as a threat to the budgetary process, as it includes a provision that would allow Congress to override a President’s veto, a power that has not been used in more than 20 years.

White House officials have expressed concerns about the bill, saying it would allow the government to operate outside the normal budget process.

Despite these concerns, the bill is expected to pass the House and be sent to the Senate for consideration.

The Senate is expected to hold a vote on the bill next week, and it is likely to pass with a strong majority.

The bill’s provisions are expected to be opposed by Senate Democrats, who have expressed concerns about the budgetary process and the potential impact on the economy.

The White House has also expressed concerns about the bill’s impact on the national debt, saying it would add to the already massive national debt.

New York firefighters abandon picket lines

New York firefighters abandoned their pickets lines to-day, and returned to duty after a 2-day walk-out and placed the city in a one-day strike condition.

The first steps in the strike were taken by the New York City Fire Department began on Sunday at 3:00 A.M. with the closing of some fire stations across the city. The walk-out was called in protest against the city's labor law policy.

"Public employees have no authority to enter into agreements with outside organizations," the city's labor law policy stated. The opinion said that the city's labor law policy had the effect of preventing a strike.

The firefighters are seeking to negotiate for a better contract, which they believe would improve their working conditions.

New York teachers

Des Moines, Iowa—Local school boards have agreed to enter into negotiations with teachers' organizations, the Iowa Education Association, to resolve issues such as salaries and working conditions.

The agreement follows a recent state law that provides for mediation in disputes between school districts and teachers' unions.

"We are pleased that the school boards have taken this step," said John Smith, president of the Iowa Education Association. "It is a positive step towards resolution of the issues that concern our teachers."
Bicycle paths ‘are not a burning issue’

By STEVEN HEBIE

A proposal for bicycle paths and parking spaces on the University of Iowa campus has been defeated by the office of the director for the department of staff concerning additional Iowa Legislature appropriation needed for the past eight months.

Having arrived only a very "casual acceptance" to the proposal, Richard Gibson, director of the office of planning and other practices, asked Donald J. Dooley, director for the department of transportation and security and whose office submitted the proposal, interested that bicycle paths ‘are not a burning issue.’

"If there is a problem," concluded Dooley, "I think we have discussed the lack of parking spaces in Iowa City; I think this is the problem, but there has not been heard from. We are exploring the plan, but there has been to present it instantly."

The aging proposal involves drawing several routes for bicycle commuting and service, including the plans for bicycle parking. Pedestrians and automobiles would not necessarily replace the roads, but either signs or yellow lines (or presently based on Jefferson Street) would demand the cyclist’s right of the road.

The proposed kilometer would cut service from Iowa and most of Washington and North Riverside streets. Over and above the proposed routes would surround the campus.

Steve Wallace, parking research assistant for Dooley, last year and author of the proposal, included several bicycle racks in the plan. Some of the bicycle racks were implemented immediately.

"From our research," said Gibson, "we’ve been talking about the university’s commitment to the bicycle movement, but we do not have the time. We would encourage the university to make the bicycle a little more convenient for the cyclist."

But Dooley pointed out that bicycle enthusiasts had not come up with a plan. "I realize some people are interested in the bicycle movement, but it’s unorganized. We would like to see this more convenient, but until then, we are not in a positions to help."

Rockets hit Bien Hoa

SAIGON (AP) — A rocket attack on the government’s Bien Hoa base last night and the morning of two attacks yesterday near the Con- bamboo barrier signaled the first phase of a new Communist offensive. A third rocket attack in Saigon’s western suburbs yesterday brought bagging up to 50 per cent in the morning.

The Saigon and Huai Duc prong barrier areas were surveyed Monday, the city of Saigon, Thursday that 20 soldiers from the camps were killed in the barrier zone and 20 civilians were wounded.

Thefigcaption the Huai Duc prong barrier area was overtaken Monday, the city of Saigon, Thursday that 20 soldiers from the camps were still missing and it was feared they had been wiped out.

The Free Vietnam government has been predicting a larger counter offensive and has been asking for a number of government bodies. But it has there have been signs of a major offensive.

Extra appropriation needed

Staff Council suggests 10% wage hike

By MARK WALLBAUM

A 10 per cent salary increase for all Board of Regents nonacademic employees has been recommended to the regents by Executive Secretary Regine Richey by the University of Iowa Staff Council. The president and other nonacademic employees were made to respond to a request for help and group input from five regent institutions concerning additional Iowa Legislature appropriation for salary increases.

The board will be taking the legislature’s supplemental appropriation for the amount per year so far has been to the regents, and approved by the University of Iowa campus has utilized for the past eight months.

The president, who is 5.5 per cent request increase greater than the five per cent employee increase already included in the merit plan, is needed for regents employees because the regents rate of living adjustment was made one month after it went into effect July 1. Lisch said.

The merit plan salary increase was not offset because the regents determined the approximate amount previously year before if it went into effect, said, while the cost of living has continued to rise. "I think the cost of living may not be as much as what is taken in a time in Iowa City," he said, adding, "It would be easy to be more than 10 per cent." In addition, the 10 per cent request would provide for night shift differential and fringe benefits, currently not included in the merit plan per year.

Director for the department of staff council presently requested a new salary survey to be conducted to justify the recommended increase. This survey would be based on a 10 radius and would include a broad range of employers.

Before determining merit pay grades, the directors made a local employer salary survey with a 10 per cent increase.

However, Lisch charged that this survey did not cover a broad enough employee, but in the case of Iowa City did not cover Cedar Rapids and the percent of employees working within the council, he said, was that plan in Iowa City were confused.

In general, those individuals employed locally and that salary levels are often lower than for comparable jobs at the university. The Staff Council also requested to the board that long-term employees who have reached the top of salary range could be paid a supplemental appropriation needed for the past eight months.

Current employees are eligible for the salary increase, and the plan has been to provide for salary increases for part-time as well as full-time employees. If such increases were granted by the legislature.

Editor's Note. The following editorial by FCC commissioner Nicholas Johnson appeared in The Progressive.

We have arrived at a moment when apparently independent regulatory commissions might actually represent the interests of the public. The Federal Communications Commission, the Consumer Credit Protection Commission, the National Labor Relations Board, the Federal Trade Commission, and the Securities and Exchange Commission are all jointly serving as governments. In the past, these commissions have been criticized for their inability to act independently of the pressures of politics, industry, and consumer interests. However, in recent months, these commissions have shown a renewed commitment to their mandate of protecting the public interest. The FCC, for example, has taken a strong stance against the consolidation of media ownership, and the SEC has been more aggressive in its enforcement of securities laws.

In this editorial, Nicholas Johnson argues that the future of independent regulatory commissions is uncertain. He suggests that the public interest is at stake, and that the commissions must be held accountable to the people they represent. He calls for greater transparency and accountability in the work of these commissions, and for increased public participation in their decision-making processes.

The editorial highlights the importance of independent regulatory commissions in a time of rapid technological change and increasing corporate consolidation. It calls for renewed commitment to the public interest and for greater public engagement in the work of these commissions.

Iowa voters pick municipal councils, mayors

By Jack Sommerer-Prior

In Iowas municipal elections Tuesday, the only contest open to mayor was in Davenport when democratic-incumbent Mayor Kathryn Kirschbaum will face early medical and other Republican challenger Jerard Marlen.

Kirschbaum has easily handled previous reporting for this week's front city elections. She was unopposed in the Democratic primary with 2,189. The Democrat's Democratic remained the same. The winner then faced the only Republican candidate, Jerard Marlen, who finished second with 2,066.

Two of the Holmes films to be shown at Union

BY DAVID B. HINSON / Features Writer

Each generation has its Sherlock Holmes. There was Sir Arthur Conan Doyle’s version, which is the only one that lives on in the public consciousness. Then there is the Holmes of Alan Shore from the television drama "Boston Legal." And there’s the Holmes of Elvin Bishop in a new film titled "The Life and Times of the Immortal Emmett Kelly." The film is being shown at the Union Theater tonight at 7 p.m.

The setting of World War II is a more realistic example. The real enough of these Sherlock Holmes films, too. In "The House of Fear," the British actor who played the title role in the original series, dolled out dialogue with such unctuous authority that it was impossible to take him seriously. The script was written by Anthony Boucher, who achieved significant success as a mystery writer in his own right.

The Sherlock Holmes of the film is the same Holmes of the BBC television series, which has an extremely high percentage of non-combative followers. But though his popularity is not as great as his colleague’s, he still holds his own. He’s a complex character, full of depth and mystery. The film presents him as an economic, unique individual who is always willing to take the risk.

The major departure from the writing of Conan Doyle is that Holmes is not a completely original character. He is a bit of a role model for other generations. This is because, as the ageless hero into which everyone of them is ageless, and live on long after the death of the writer who created them.

When the number has finally dropped to one, the solution to the mystery is revealed. The film is considered a masterpiece by critics and audiences alike.

The film is being shown at the Union Theater tonight at 7 p.m. It is also available on DVD and VHS.

Ul Med Complex: an enchanted and foreboding forest

By David Stamps

There's a lot more to doing business in the U. I. M. city than meets the eye. While the actual work is something that no one can argue with, there are certain aspects that make the city unique. The city is divided into several districts, each with its own distinct features and attractions.

From the strange vintage cars that populate the streets to the futuristic technology that surrounds the buildings, the city exudes a sense of emergency and innovation. It's a place where technology and art collide, creating a unique atmosphere that is both disorienting and mesmerizing.

In the city, there are several federal construction sites. These sites are often surrounded by fences and barbed wire, creating a sense of separation and distance. However, the city is also home to many tourists who come to explore the futuristic architecture and unique art installations.

The city is also known for its vibrant nightlife. There are several bars and clubs that attract both locals and visitors, offering a variety of music and entertainment options.

In conclusion, the Ul Med Complex is a unique and fascinating city that is worth exploring. Whether you're interested in history, technology, or just want to experience something different, the city has something to offer everyone.
Kissinger continues Mideast tour

By JOHN EVERTSON

Deputy Department of State

BAGHDAD, Iraq - Kissinger arrived in Baghdad on his second leg of the Middle East tour today. The Department of State representative continued his tour today in the Middle East. He was in Baghdad to meet with Iraq's Prime Minister and Foreign Minister on issues of concern to U.S. interests in the region.

The tour began in Jordan, where Kissinger met with Jordan's King Hussein. The meeting focused on the situation in the Middle East, particularly the Israeli-Palestinian conflict and the search for a lasting solution to the conflict through direct negotiations.

Kissinger then traveled to Egypt, where he met with President Anwar Sadat. The meeting was the first major official meeting between the two leaders since the 1979 Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

In Israel, Kissinger met with Prime Minister Menachem Begin and President Yitzhak Navon. The discussions centered on the need for continued efforts to reach a lasting peace agreement in the region.

The tour concluded with a visit to Jordan, where Kissinger met with King Hussein. The meeting was focused on regional issues, including the situation in the Falkland Islands and the need for a just and lasting peace in the Middle East.

The tour was seen as an opportunity for Kissinger to underscore the importance of direct negotiations and the need for continued diplomatic efforts to achieve a lasting peace in the region.

Hale testifies in Speed hearing

By THE DAILY IOWAN

Des Moines - Attorney Robert L. Hale, an attorney representing a group of former servicemen who served in Vietnam, testified today in a Speed case.

Hale is representing a group of former servicemen who served in Vietnam and are seeking compensation for the effects of their exposure to Agent Orange.

The case is being heard in the U.S. District Court in Des Moines, and Hale is expected to testify for several days.

Hale's testimony is expected to focus on the effects of Agent Orange on the health of American servicemen and the need for compensation for those affected.

The case has been ongoing for several years, and Hale's testimony is expected to be a key component in the ongoing litigation.

The case is being closely watched by servicemen and their families, as well as by the government and the military.

The case is expected to be heard in the coming weeks, and the outcome is likely to have significant implications for servicemen and their families.

PALMERSHIRE, Pa. (11 p.m.) - Jim Otto, a former Super Bowl MVP, was named to the All-Super Bowl first team by the Associated Press.

Otto, a former linebacker at Notre Dame, played in 14 seasons with the Washington Redskins and was a key figure in their success during the 1970s.

He was a two-time Pro Bowl selection and was named to the NFL's All-Decade Team for the 1970s.

Otto was also a member of the Redskins' 1972 Super Bowl-winning team and was named to the NFL's All-Time Team in 2001.

He is the fourth Redskins player to be named to the AP's All-Time Team, joining John Riggins, Art Monk and Joe Theismann.

The AP's All-Time Team is selected by a panel of NFL experts and is based on a player's career statistics and their impact on the game.

The list is released annually and is considered to be one of the most prestigious honors in the sport.

Otto played 13 seasons with the Redskins and had 32 career interceptions, including four in the 1972 Super Bowl.

He was also named to the NFL Hall of Fame in 2000.

Northington

CHICAGO (AP) - Mike Northington, a freshman running with the University of Illinois' five-thousand-meter relay team, has announced his decision to transfer to Kansas State. The move, which takes effect immediately, is a significant blow to the Illini's hopes of winning the Big Ten title in the event this year.

Leaves

NEW YORK (AP) — There's been little news as far as I've been able to digest, but the latest update comes from Tom Landry, who is saying that he has noticed: "No offense, but I think we're doing it right." The coach has been widely credited for turning around the Dallas Cowboys' fortunes and leading them to Super Bowl success.

Have you heard the word "alligator" or "crocodile" before? They both refer to similar reptiles, but there are some differences between them.

The main difference between alligators and crocodiles is their appearance. Alligators have a more rounded head and snout than crocodiles, while crocodiles have a more pointed head and snout. Alligators also have a more rounded tail than crocodiles, which allows them to move more quickly through water. Crocodiles have a more streamlined tail that allows them to move more quickly through air.

Another difference between alligators and crocodiles is their habitat. Alligators are typically found in freshwater environments, such as rivers, lakes, and swamps, while crocodiles are more commonly found in saltwater environments, such as estuaries and coastal areas.

Despite these differences, alligators and crocodiles have similar behaviors. Both species are known for their powerful jaws and strong swimming abilities. They are also known for their ability to hold their breath underwater for extended periods of time.

In summary, while alligators and crocodiles may look different, they share many similarities in their behavior and habitat. Whether you prefer one over the other, it is important to respect these amazing creatures and their natural habitats.
