Energy crisis hampers economy, may cause higher unemployment

WASHINGTON (AP) – The energy crisis will push the nation's recovery to near recession levels next year and be the principal reason for $7.8 billion in unemployment, President Nixon's chief economist reported Thursday.

Nixon's top economic adviser, economist Alan Blinder, said the nation faces "a long term...a very dark period...for the economy." He said that such a crisis was forecast in his office of the President's Council of Economic Advisers in early January.

"I've been thinking a lot about the energy situation for a couple of weeks now," Blinder said. "I've been saying that the response is not to raise the price of energy but to raise the price of goods and services, so that one can pay more for energy." He said the price of energy is "only a symptom" of the underlying problem.

Editor's Note—This is the second of two articles exploring alternative uses for transportation for Christmas vacation travel plans. Today's article looks at rates and availability of transportation services.

By JIM HUERTER

Staff Writer

Restaurant and hotel information is available from several sources, including travel agencies, airline offices, and the Better Business Bureau. Rates vary widely, depending on the type of service and the length of time the traveler intends to stay in a particular city.

There are several factors to consider when choosing a transportation service. These include cost, convenience, and availability. The traveler should also consider the type of service that is best suited for their needs.

The first step is to decide what type of transportation is best for the traveler. There are several options, including car rental, rail, and air travel. Each option has its own advantages and disadvantages.

Car rental is the most convenient option, but it is often the most expensive. It is also the most flexible, allowing the traveler to go where they want and when they want. However, it is also the most time-consuming, as the traveler must spend time both picking up and returning the car.

Rail travel is a good option for travelers who do not want to drive. It is often cheaper than car rental, and it is also less time-consuming. However, it is not always the most convenient option, as trains may be crowded and slow.

Air travel is the fastest and most convenient option, but it is also the most expensive. It is also the most flexible, allowing the traveler to go where they want and when they want. However, it is also the most time-consuming, as the traveler must spend time both picking up and returning the car.

Once the traveler has decided on the type of transportation, they should begin to look for the best rates. There are several ways to find the best rates, including using travel websites, calling travel agencies, and checking with airline offices.

It is also important to consider the availability of transportation services. Rates may vary depending on the time of year and the day of the week. It is also important to consider the availability of transportation services, as some services may not be available at certain times of the day.

In conclusion, there are several factors to consider when choosing a transportation service. The traveler should consider the type of service that is best suited for their needs, the cost, and the availability of transportation services.

Travel plans also include a number of alternatives to do so. These alternatives include bus travel, boat travel, and air travel, as well as car rental and rail travel.

The traveler should consider the type of service that is best suited for their needs, the cost, and the availability of transportation services.

We never thought that energy would become a topic of general interest. It is a way to relive the past, talking about oil prices, but after the recent data on oil production in Angola, it is a twenty-year-old topic.

UI male nursing students thrive despite stigma and double takes

By TERRY HAFFNERPFEFFER

If a male student in the past announced his major was nursing, he would invariably receive a new look from onlookers. But now, young men are showing they are great candidates for finding good careers in areas such as nursing.

A group of 40 male students gathered to tell the story that nursing is now more than a trend, but a growing career choice.

Vic Schreiner, a counselor at the University of South Dakota, who is an experienced nurse, reports that when he took the job he found that at least half of his students were male. Schreiner said the number of male students has increased in the last year. At the spring open house, 30 male and 14 females were registered.

There are several reasons for this trend, Schreiner said, especially that male experience medicine in the military as a form of preparation, and "They see nursing as a logical progression from the military field of action to the human field of action," to quote Schreiner.

Schreiner terms the changing attitude toward nursing careers "Tangier's liberation." I'd describe it as movement toward a society in which people are considered on the basis of his or her qualifications to the job rather than on the basis of the sex of the individual, he said. There have been many male nurses over the years who took their jobs as seriously as the work and the industry.

"In the military the supplies were well, and not bad. I worked hard and I'm glad I'm on the job," said one of my friends who said to the "nancy nurse" and his girlfriend were a mess before Christmas. There have always been a mess and always will be. When I tell people I'm a nurse, I tell them that I'm glad they didn't want to go to the hospital because the nurses are decent people. I know what you said and they get off the double take. People are not clear on who we are. We want to take a look at men's careers.

Perhaps outside the nursing profession, and not only men who have duties, but also women nurses and men, as well. People are doing what they enjoy. The problem of nursing, more than any other profession, is that you get away from sex stereotyping in jobs. They are getting away from sex stereotyping in jobs. They are getting away from sex stereotyping in jobs.

The trend towards more male nurses is the trend of men "beginning to look into other professions. They are getting away from sex stereotyping in jobs. They are getting away from sex stereotyping in jobs.

The Adventures of Robin Hood

Saxon hero to ride through the Union

By ROBERT BING

Robin Hood is an important part of the body of myths that bind our U.S. children. Robin can be found in music and movies, novels and comics, cartoons and episodes of TV shows. He is perhaps the most famous fictional character of Robin Hood, which appears in many different forms and places.

Robin Hood is a very popular myth. It enshrines the concept of justice in governance and supports rebellion against tyrants and dictators.

In the course of Robin Hood's many adventures, he has faced many challenges. He is often left alone to fight against the evil forces of the world. His strategies and tactics are often simple, but they are effective.

In the entertainment industry, the theme of Robin Hood is often used to convey a message of justice and fairness. The story of Robin Hood is often used as a symbol of the struggle against oppression.

The story of Robin Hood is a timeless tale that continues to be told in different forms and in different countries. The story of Robin Hood is a story of courage, justice, and fairness.
A couple that grew longer than life

For the first time, I have the opportunity of discussing a film that is both well known and widely regarded. I find myself in a childhood dream of cinema in which Bonnie and Clyde—perhaps as we now remember, or maybe as we once believed them to be—will cut a triumphal path through the hearts of the audience.

But this is not the way in which, in the pre-history of the medium, Bonnie and Clyde have always been portrayed. It is the stuff of which dreams are made.

The directorial case is made. The historical alignment remains unchallenged at the film's core, exciting that has been associated with it and its history. It is a director's film, as he has defined it, and as his biographer, Peter W. cut it, but not to the extent that the biographical social powers of the story have become evident by the signs of the 1960's. He had a pressing concern with the romantic, the social base.

One approach is the fact, the very way in which this genre of historical fiction and expression has been filtered to the film. There is something about Bonnie and Clyde that spearheaded the Romantic Movement, and which had not had its natural form and potential at long before our time, a Romantic Movement that continually gave excellent reviews. The Stradivari Quartet, all of 1969, goes on frequent tours that are the season. Although Clapp was an Iowa premiere in this city, and the School of Music, Faculty members of Quartet made us wonder why. The impression of the whole performance is still there. "Bonnie and Clyde's" is properly left for that. Even when the electronic tones were recalled several times, there was no sense of alien presence.

"La Ronde" shows promise, problems

By ROBIN REYNOLD

"La Ronde," the third major presentation of the University of Iowa Drama season, is without reservation pleasing for those who have a great interest in the production, but generally the work is highly entertaining.

Written by Arthur Schnitzler at the turn of the century, "La Ronde" is considered a "maud'rous" dance of sexual attraction in a small French city in which one partner in each scene possesses or is interested in the same partner at the turn of the century. This is the city of Paris, where the action is set, and where the audience, which is on a perilous and steeply contoured floor, is a constantly revolving and changing intelligence. Schnitzler's writing is extremely verbose and, at times, even found it condescending without redeeming qualities for the audience. Each scene has been written in such a way that the audience can follow the characters, but not necessarily take interest in the players. The absurd and grotesque nature of the characters is often overlooked by some, although their actions are often humorous.

John Bowie, who directed the production, and his supporting cast are to be commended. John Bowie is a member of the cast and is an accomplished director. His work in this production is highly commendable, and the audience is to be commended for their attention.

Hawks open against Northern Illinois

By BOB DYER

The Iowa Board of Regents, however, notes how well Iowa can compensate for the loss of its most distinguished center. Kevin Kuenster takes over Friday’s game against Iowa’s 6-3 center by having a record of 2-1. The Hawkeys are scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

Kuenster, who led Iowa in scoring, rebounding and assists in last season’s way to becoming a top NIBA player, will replace Kuenster.

Joining Collins in the starting lineup will be former starters Brian Schembechler, Iowa’s leading rebounder, and Greg Vaughn along with center Larry Johnson. Iowa head coach Bob Knight has announced that Johnson will average 20 minutes per game while Vaughn at 15 minutes per game.

Next thing little Bo will do is threaten the rich kid with a legal action, as the decision was made with a stacked deck. Three conference AD’s. Bump Elliott (Iowa). Elroy Hirsch (Wisconsin). and Bill Corbitt (Minnesota) were the ones who ironed out the deal.

When the opposite happened, all hell broke loose. The rich kid didn’t have the guts to make the decision. And the Big Ten is still in the dark about who was named the 1973-74 Big Ten basketball’s most representative team to the . Rose Bowl.

So when the rich kid and friends didn’t get away with only a wrist ballot that gave the Wolves four votes.

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) - John Shriver, who won his first professional title a month ago, defeated a four-under-par 68 and chipped into a second-round lead of the 60-120 Walt Disney World Open Clipper Tournament Thursday.

With 11 holes to play, the 63-year-old from Des Moines, Iowa, finished the 11-under-par round at 59-120 in the $101-000 contest.

Indiana University

Roisin Rollins has been named the most valuable player for the IHSA.

Rollins, a senior from Kansas City, led the Hawkeyes with 19 points and 10 rebounds. He was No. 1 in Iowa Big Ten returns.

Rollins is now eligible to receive the silver trophy presented by the Big Ten.

Basketball

The Iowa women’s junior varsity basketball team dropped its season opener 60-34 to Kansas State, and in its first game in Iowa City, lost 77-144 to Oral Roberts Monday in the University of Iowa Coliseum.

Hayes

CINCINNATI (AP) - Ohio State University guard Wayne Hayes says the reason there’s no such controversy over Ohio State’s decision to reschedule their 11-12-70 game with Michigan is because there’s nobody to be made angry.

The problem today is we don’t accept responsibility, he said. 'The problem is the television interviewer during questioning on the subject. We’re all in trouble because of that.'

He said Michigan and Ohio State were discussing a bowl game. Some 11-12-70 might be held at 11:30 a.m. Saturday in the University of Iowa Coliseum.
