Democrats blame President for filibuster against publicly funded campaigns bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats blame President Nixon for blocking a proposal to fund presidential campaigns with public money, saying it is the same President who brought the filibuster into the Senate eight years ago.

Sen. J. Ford (D-N.J.), D.C .S. chair of the Democratic Committee on Finance, said, "The President's position on this bill is not new. It is the same one he took when he brought the filibuster into the Senate eight years ago."

The measure would require 1976 presidential candidates to raise $2 million from private sources, reflecting the idea that private individuals should be able to support their campaigns directly, instead of relying on public money.

"The bill is the same as the one he brought into the Senate eight years ago," Ford said. "And the President's position is the same."

The measure would also prohibit the use of public funds to pay for campaign expenses, such as travel and lodging.

Sen. Pierre-Deux, D-Ohio, said, "The President's position on this bill is the same one he took when he brought the filibuster into the Senate eight years ago."

Garbage law

A new refuse collection ordinance that requires all Iowa City residents to place refuse containers at the curb by 7 a.m. on trash day is causing confusion among some residents.

"People who are in their morning clothes are out and about early in the morning," said Mayor Don Torkelson. "But the city's new garbage ordinance requires that the trash can be out by 7 a.m., so people who are getting ready for work or school might not realize that they need to put their trash out by then."

Some residents have reported seeing city workers remove trash cans that were not placed at the curb by 7 a.m., while others have complained about the smell of garbage left out too long.

"I understand the city's goal of improving the appearance of the city, but this ordinance is not practical," said one resident. "I get up at 7 a.m. to get ready for work, and I don't have time to put out my trash before then."

The city council approved the garbage ordinance in August, and it went into effect on September 1. The council voted 6-1 in favor of the ordinance, with Councilor John O'Connor casting the lone no vote.

"I believe in the importance of maintaining a clean and attractive city, but this ordinance is not a practical solution," said O'Connor. "It's too early in the morning for most people to put out their trash, and the city should consider providing garbage carts for residents who need them."

The city council is scheduled to meet next month to discuss the possibility of providing garbage carts for residents who need them. In the meantime, residents are encouraged to follow the city's new garbage ordinance and to place their trash cans at the curb by 7 a.m. on trash day.

Common Cause

DES MOINES, Iowa—There has been a trend in America to buy more power as the President of the United States. In Congress, the President has a choice to make in Common Cause, a national citizen lobby, and Sunday night.

Peer studies of congressional acts in part of the power now held by the President of the United States, and said, "We don't have enough staff and the result is that the President has a choice to make in Common Cause, a national citizen lobby, and Sunday night.

The current coming out and the Richardson- congressional reform act," said Common Cause. "We have to replace our present staff, get committees looking at real problems, planning and getting ahead of the problems, and moving up with policy choices, or we can't correct the problem," Cooler said.

Property tax

DES MOINES, Iowa—A bill signed by Gov. Robert Rebozo to repeal the personal property tax in Iowa was approved by the state Senate on Thursday, June 22. The Senate passed the bill by a vote of 31-18, with 13 Democrats and 18 Republicans voting in favor.

The bill, which was introduced by Sen. Terry Branstad, R-Iowa, would repeal the personal property tax, which is currently the third largest source of state revenue. The tax is currently estimated to bring in $2 billion annually.

"This bill is long overdue," said Branstad. "The personal property tax is a regressive tax that disproportionately affects lower-income families. It's time to replace it with a fairer tax system that works for all Iowans."

The bill now goes to the state House of Representatives, where it is expected to pass. If it does, it will go to the governor's desk for signature.

UI appeals two-year college student

By CHUCK RICHMAN

UI's academic affairs has been the source of several recent conflicts, including a recent decision to revoke the degrees of two students who were found to have plagiarized. A postscript to the controversy is the recent decision to appeal the two-year college student's grades.

The university was unable to release the precise details of the appeal, but officials said that the student was enrolled in a two-year college program and was seeking to transfer to the University of Iowa. The appeal was filed by the university's office of academic affairs, which has the authority to revoke degrees for academic misconduct.

The student was enrolled in the two-year college program for two years, during which time he was found to have plagiarized in his coursework. The university's office of academic affairs determined that the student had violated the university's academic integrity policies and revoked his degree.

The student appealed the decision to transfer to the University of Iowa, and the university's office of academic affairs is currently reviewing the appeal. The outcome of the appeal will be announced at a later date.

The university is committed to upholding its academic integrity policies and ensuring that students adhere to the highest standards of conduct. The university takes academic misconduct very seriously and takes steps to prevent it from occurring.

President Lincoln and his staff were in agreement that the transfer of resources to the Longhorn was a necessary step in the transition from the Civil War to the Reconstruction period. The President's officials had watched the Longhorn's progress with interest, and the decision to transfer resources to the university was seen as a way to help ensure that the university could continue to thrive.

The decision to transfer resources to the university was made with the understanding that the university would use the resources to support its academic programs and to help ensure the future of the institution.

The university is committed to providing a high-quality education to its students and to preparing them for success in their future careers. The university's official said that the university is grateful for the support it has received from the Longhorn and that the decision to transfer resources to the university was made with the understanding that the university would use the resources to support its academic programs and to help ensure the future of the institution.

University towns continue to pay cash for blood bank contribution

BY MARY RAGNER

Iowa City and other university communities are the linguistic beneficiaries of cash paid blood donations, according to Dr. John Koepke, dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences and a former member of the Iowa Association of Blood Banks.

Over 10 members of the Association met at an informal dinner of the Iowa City Chapter on Friday to discuss the issue of "free or paid blood." Koepke said that paid blood can be justified as a result of the consequences of a severe shortage of available blood donors.

The donor cannot be rewarded for the time and blood taken from the donor. In contrast to a commercial business, it is impossible for a local blood bank to earn money through such activities.

These are sometimes deterrent factors that prevent people from selling blood. Used in a transfusion, the contaminated blood could be lethal to the recipient. However, "Iowa City has a safe paid blood program," said Dr. Wagner. "It's just a price like this you get paid, concentration. Donors are about to run out of donors in November.

Even at the Joslin Clinic you can't source free paid donors. Most hospital blood supplies are now mainly from blood assurance programs.

According to Dr. Phalen, the two agencies involved in blood donation, the Red Cross and the American Red Cross, are not in competition. The two societies have a wide variety of programs, including the Red Cross program which asks community members to donate a small amount of blood. Donations are organized into a community pool from which someone can draw blood when needed.

But the patient is asked to pay for the blood he or she used. It is debatable whether donors can contribute to their own needs," Phalen said.

Opposites in the Red Cross program feel it is worthwhile in areas where there are good donors and one can get enough

Food prices up—again

Associated Press Writer

Producers went up again Sunday in seven of the 13 cities surveyed by Associated Press, increasing the food bill on a typical dinner menu by about 33 cents.

Eggs and the list of higher food prices have been affecting all of the cities surveyed. In Iowa City, for example, prices are expected to rise steadily over the next few months. Various increases in the price of rice, millet, wheat, and beans have been reflected in the increase of the price of these grains.

In Iowa City, a group of students have started a blood program, administered by three American organizations, including the American Red Cross.

Patients who have already paid for the program by donating blood are not charged when they need blood. Patients who haven't paid for the program are urged to find other donors to pay for, or get charged with a co-pay.

Iowa City's Veteran's Hospital uses Red Cross blood almost exclusively. Mercy and University Hospitals use a combination of blood from Red Cross, Community Blood Banks, and paid donors.

"It's a small town like Iowa City but they take every where we can get it," said Dr. John Koepke, chairman of the pathology department. "I don't think it's a problem here anymore because of the new era."
Intramurals: who’s at fault?

The University of Iowa department which draws the most student undergraduates is Intramurals and Recreation—is now threatened with the possible cancellation of numerous activities.

Already, one of the favorites, the pre-holiday basketball tournament, has been canceled because of a lack of funds. Also it may be necessary to cancel volleyball, softball and indoor or outdoor track. The Recreation Department is operating during the summer months if the needed funds cannot be found.

The reasons for the existence of this situation are quite familiar and are found in most university departments. There are usually increased programming, increased student participation in scheduled events, and budgetary cuts.

But there is still the Intramural department will be able to service students and not decline to its low stature of the 1970’s tournament. has been cancelled because of a lack of funds. Recreation is now threatened with the possible cancellation of numerous activities.

Ad administrators also explain to students the importance of keeping one’s body fit and relaxing the mind through physical exercise and clean competition. (Even though some of this clean competition at Iowa is reminiscent of street play from the days of Angles and New York City.)

But what has the university done? It has cut back funds to the program and forced its administrators to struggle in order to service the needs of the student population.

But administrative officials are not all that bad either. Although they have continually attempted to obtain additional funds, they have shown that the department’s operating funds for the year were 2.5 per cent less than last year.

In light of this, it is obvious that Intramural administrators were negligent in appraising the programming and budgetary needs. There is little reason why the department—knowing months ago the amount of money available—was not alert to the necessity of phony 1970’s.

Nurses demand right to not assist in abortions

By ROBERT CONNERTY Special to The Daily Iowan

First University of Iowa women's group meeting. That's why they called for the recognition of a nurse's right to refuse to assist in an abortion if it is against their ethical or religious beliefs. Here is an example of the demonstration which will be asked to be held this week to protest a new abortion law. A joint women's group from the University of Iowa and the Iowa State University will stage the demonstration.

The University of Iowa College of Nursing is opposing the new law which gives legal protection to abortion. The college of nursing argues that the new law would give nurses the right to refuse to assist in abortions if it is against their ethical or religious beliefs. The college of nursing also argues that the new law would give nurses the right to refuse to assist in abortions if it is against their ethical or religious beliefs.

NEW YORK (AP) — UCLA Coach John Wooden said he may be heading into the NCAA Tournament with the fourth-ranked Maryland Saturday night.

"They'd win every time they were just too much," said the coach of the Lakers' top-ranked team, who won't make Brutein's edge to meet Maryland in the first round.

"I thought we won with 15 or 12 points," he went back.

Parker's second-half heroes save Hawks

By ROBERT DAVIS

You'll have to park the memories of the Northern Illinois-Hawkeye game Saturday night here in Iowa City.

If you're a Northern Illinois fan, you can just forget the game.

If you're a Hawkeye fan, you can just forget the first 19 minutes of the game.

You see Parker, a slender 6-4 guard who scored 23 points Saturday night, worked on the ball most of the time, worked as a coach would like him to work.

And Saturday night we were very glad of it.

The contest got underway in the middle of the first half and after 19 minutes the score stood Iowa 20-Northern Illinois 18.

"I used to drive over there and play quite a bit," admitted Parker. "I know most of the players on the team. I knew a lot of them when I was in high school."

So Parker was in Iowa City Saturday night, at least on one level.

Originally pegged for a starting forward position, Parker worked his feet loose enough and had been drawing into form. Freshman Glen Worley replaced him in the starting lineup.

Coach Joe Roberts added, "They've got a real good team," added Jo, "and I'm proud of our boys."

It's the first time Parker has been back to Iowa City since he attended Loyola High School in Chicago and played with the team.

But Saturday night it was Parker's game and he had his way with it.

Parker led the scoring with 23 points and pulled down 12 rebounds. And regained the upper hand by clawing back to take the lead, 61-57, with 10 seconds left. Iowa won 85-83.

Roberts added, "When we had it operating, we were a pretty good basketball team."

The victory was Iowa's first at home after losses in the opening two games. The Hawkeyes clinched the top spot in the Big Ten.

The win, but was behind the starting of Bruce Petroatis and guard Mike LaPrince during Saturday's game.

"I was displeased with my performance. But I still gave it my best," admitted Petroatis.

"It isn't a good reason. There is no need to dwell on it," said Parker.

All-American candidate was doing a little bit of the boards.

When he did return to the floor, he worked hard and pulled away for the win, but was.

Suffice to say, Petroatis is not fighting for Iowa's future. He's not fighting for Iowa. He's fighting for his own future.

Suffice to say, Petroatis is not fighting for Iowa's future. He's not fighting for Iowa. He's fighting for his own future.

Petroatis added, "I've been playing as well as I can, but I'm not really coming back to win the game."

For a freshman, he has some fighting to do.

Two reasons are obvious:

First, he's not ready to yell until there is a reasonable chance Iowa will win.

Second, he's not ready to yell until there is a reasonable chance Iowa will win.

"I was nervous but I knew the pressure all the time. He was nervous all the time. He was nervous all the time."

But even without Bradley, Iowa is a good team.

The Hawks, led by LaPrince and Petroatis, beat and had their way with Northern Illinois.

LaPrince ended up with 19 points and nine rebounds.

"I'm not really coming back to win the game," admitted Petroatis.

Each has a long record around here has been a good reason. There is no need to dwell on it. But even without Bradley, Iowa is a good team.
