Lack of bids challenged—

In an inter-office memorandum between McBalt and Bartel, sent in the county attorney, and Gov. Robert Ray, it was pointed out that the law demands the competitive bidding of all contracts and services where the cost is over $50. McBalt states: "The major exception of this section is the local service contract, which allows the county to purchase goods and services from Iowa Data, the county's computer service provider. It is argued that the state's competitive bidding statute is not intended for such local service contracts, which generally do not exceed $50 in cost. McBalt is recommending that the county attorney look at contracts that are not competitive, such as those involving computer services, and determine if they are not intended to be competitive. If they are not, then the county attorney should be able to apply the state's competitive bidding statute to them. McBalt is currently examining this issue and expects to make a decision in the near future."

By C. D. S. C. R. C. E. K. I. N.

A proposal is in development to establish a center at Iowa State University devoted to the study of coal use. The proposal was introduced as a legislative resolution by Rep. D. C. E. W. D. I. N. in the Iowa House of Representatives.

The center would be located in the School of Mines and Mining Engineering, which is part of the University's College of Engineering.

The center would focus on research related to the use of coal in energy production, including the development of new technology for coal conversion and utilization.

In an interview, Rep. D. C. E. W. D. I. N. said, "The proposal is a response to the growing concern about the future of coal as a source of energy. By establishing this center, we can attract the best minds in the country to work on solutions to this critical problem."

The center would be funded through a combination of state and federal grants, as well as private donations. The exact amount of funding has not been determined yet.

The center is expected to bring economic benefits to the area, including job creation and increased research and development opportunities.

The proposal is currently being reviewed by the state legislature, and a decision is expected to be made in the coming months.

Travel industry told fuel crisis improving

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Energy Office officials Thursday that the period in question production cutback may be less than expected because the petrochemical shortage is not as great as was feared.

William A. Johnson, director of industry relations for the energy office, said it may be necessary to only reduce production by about 5 per cent instead of 15 per cent, which was the original estimate.

He also said that "evidence is clear that there will be little shortage of gasoline in the country.

Johnson told travel industry representatives at a Commerce Department-sponsored conference Thursday that there was a bill from the beginning because oil and gas producers have been "working overtime" to get supply up to the pre-crisis level.

"We can handle gasoline, and we can handle the increased demand," said Johnson.

Johnson said that the travel industry should not receive credit for the increased production.

The industry has been told to expect a gasoline shortage of about 10 per cent, which will be "very little." He said that the industry should take advantage of the situation to improve its public relations.

Riders of Purple Sage tell of troubles

Drummer Spotify Dryer, keenly aware of the influences that heaped their version of the story of the Purple Sage, says, "We just took the book, loaded it up onto our truck, and started driving the rest of the way."

The book, or rather the "story of the Purple Sage" as it is sometimes called, was first published in 1920 by Zane Grey. Grey was a prolific writer of Western novels, and the Purple Sage is one of his most famous works. The story is set in the American West, and follows the lives of a group of pioneers as they try to establish a homestead in a region controlled by outlaws.

"I've always loved the story, and I think it's a great story," says Dryer. "It's a classic of the genre, and it's still relevant today."

Little Princess tops women's pro field

By STEVE HOLLAND Staff Writer

Nicknamed the 'Little Princess,' Jean Balukas is the only woman in the Point Blue Billiards Invitational Pool Tournament this weekend at the University of Iowa campus housed in the old Gymnasium.

There is The Dreamer, 'The Kid,' 'The Deacon,' 'Lady Liberty,' and 'Machine Gun Lady.' Lady pool players just don't go for that stuff. Jean Balukas, however, is a different breed. Jean Balukas is, in many ways, the last of the great women pool players.

Miss Balukas has been beaten by a high run of the high scoring female players in the world at the Iowa Memorial University Invitational. She is the versatile female performer who has been winning tournaments and competing at the highest levels of the game. Jean Balukas is the player that many pool players look up to as the standard and the measure by which others are judged.

Jean Balukas, who has been playing the game for over twenty years, has been able to persevere in the face of overwhelming opposition. She has been able to overcome the obstacles that have been placed in her path. She has been able to overcome the self-doubt that has been a constant companion throughout her career.
