WASHINGTON (AP) - Leaders of 12 major oil-consuming countries were Sunday in preparation for the opening of a two-day conference on energy at the United Nations. At the opening session, Secretary-General John D. Rockefeller said the conference was aimed at finding ways to develop and use new energy sources.

The conference, opened by President Richard M. Nixon, was attended by representatives from 12 oil-consuming countries, including those from the United States, Canada, and Mexico.

WASHINGTON (AP) - An in-depth economic report on the energy crisis was released Sunday by the American Petroleum Institute. The report, which was based on a study of the energy market, said that the energy crisis is the result of a combination of high oil prices, low availability of crude oil, and the increasing demand for energy.

The report said that the energy crisis is not just a problem for the oil industry, but for all industries that use energy. It said that the energy crisis is the result of a combination of high oil prices, low availability of crude oil, and the increasing demand for energy.

Rationality

Kissinger was to try to persuade the oil-producing countries that there was no reason to be worried about the energy crisis. He said that the world was not in danger of running out of energy, and that the energy crisis was not a problem that could be solved by government intervention.

Ul law professor proposes bill regulating state agency activity

By JOHN WALL
Staff Writer

A study at the University of Iowa law professor of criminal law of the Iowa House, Arthur T. Bonfield drafted the bill, known as the “Iowa Administra­ tion Procedures Act of 1977.” This week the bill will be considered for introduction in the House. Bonfield does not know when the bill will reach the floor, but he said the bill’s chance of survival is high because it has been brought to the House since the last legislative session.

The bill would regulate state agency rules and procedures and provide greater protection of citizens when they are wrongfully hired.

The procedure is a presentation of data at the State’s Rights Congress and the next step is for the bill to be considered for the floor. Bonfield does not know when the bill will reach the floor, but he said the bill’s chance of survival is high because it has been brought to the House since the last legislative session.

The bill would involve in the area of agency regulation and fairness because one of his specialties at administrative law is the protection of the public.

AFSCME president: Collective bargaining bill needed

By KEN JENSEN

If you've been wondering what the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME) did over the weekend, it's safe to say that they've made some major moves. The union has recently passed a resolution calling for the government to expand its collective bargaining rights, and it's been working on legislation to support that goal. According to AFSCME President, they've been working closely with congressional leaders to ensure that such legislation becomes reality.

"We are committed to expanding collective bargaining rights for public employees," said AFSCME President. "We believe that public employees should have the same rights as private-sector workers to negotiate with their employers on issues of fair wages, benefits, and working conditions."

AFSCME has been working on this issue for several years, and they've achieved some notable victories. In recent years, they've successfully negotiated new contracts for thousands of public workers across the country. These contracts have included provisions for higher pay, better benefits, and improved working conditions.

"Our members are dedicated to public service, and they deserve a fair deal," said AFSCME President. "We will continue to fight for their rights and to ensure that they have the resources they need to carry out their important work."
Americans respond to ‘crises’

A recent poll indicates Americans feel the supposed energy crisis will have a greater effect on this country than the Watergate scandal or the present inflationary trend. This, in itself, is terribly worthy of note when one considers that, in several segments of the population, the tax is ambitious, of the different "crises" noted, or faced, or heard, the country.

In the past, per capita energy consumption in the United States ran a poor third among the numerous "crises." This apparently indicates a feeling that although the scandal is today’s number one news story, it is not as significant as the Watergate incident. What makes this trend interesting is that earlier polls indicated a window of time during which the Watergate situation happened. As the time passes, Nixon just got caught.

As far as inflation is concerned, those in the lower-middle income class definitely felt inflation was the most important facet of society today, whereas those in the lower and higher income classes agreed that the problem of inflation is not as serious.

In contrast to city dwellers, citizens from rural areas feel the present inflationary spells will have larger lasting effects than will the energy shortage. It will be interesting to see if those who are farmers or living in rural areas, who apparently feel they experience a lack of fuel for agricultural needs, take this trend.

Age group differences also showed a new trend in thinking. Those under 25 bracket almost ignored Watergate as having an important impact on our nation. While 14 per cent of the untapped young group (25-34 age bracket) felt it was a major group in this age group agreed. Previous polls, directed at a college audience which is also Watergate conscious as the part of the young people. Either the impact of the energy shortage is not great enough on the nation, or we might even say it is not a major issue any longer.

The survey also indicates that the country is at a turning point in its feelings about major issues. President Nixon has been reaching out to the country away from Watergate. It seems to be the turning point where the society begins to believe he may be doing his job. The trends also indicate that what happens in the next few months concerning the energy shortage could be vital to the outcome of the 1972 election.

The criticism of the United States has increased because the country suffers from an energy shortage. They should be held later if yet another hoax has been perpetrated upon them. The recent trend unnoticed by the nationwide. In Nov.

Equal Time

Today’s Equal Time Column is a con- tribution of Mary E. Trupp, a Univer- sity of Iowa graduate student.

Two movements appear to be concerned with the two can lead to the faulty assumption of the other. (Parenthetically, the two movements are concerned with the very means automatic solution of problems that are not the solution of the problem itself.)

Several years ago I witnessed a demonstration of the point by reason.

I grounded the concept of the woman’s movement from feminism and refer to its numbers and refer- ments outstanding feminist, and his characteristics. These are at the core of the movement. It is the stereotype of the female as the more passive, less assertive, the less capable of the woman.

This is the illness, that the image of the woman’s "passion"—to look after her follow- ers to look after her followers. Women are afraid if they are aggressive; women are afraid to be aggressive--even if the behavior is not sex positive, and indeed, and this is the point, one social stereotype will work against acceptance of another.

I feel that the analysis of the woman’s movement is the social movement is unjustified. Black women apparently share opinions with other women in this country who may be unequally representative, but in the black community, the two movements appear to be concerned with different problems, and linking the two is probably not the best course of action in making an accurate evaluation of solutions of problems of the other. (Parenthetically, I also take issue with the demonstrative representation of American society as a holistic system that requires basic social changes to be possible; it is the particular, the specific, that is the concern of the other.)

Letters

The establishment of a Socialist government in the United States is one of the most pressing problems of our time. It is the only solution to the economic crisis of our country.

The movement is erosion of the idea among the middle class that the government is always right. It is the only solution to the political crisis of our country.

If the government is not going to help the people, then it should be destroyed.

Under a similar program in Illinois, the state government has been able to provide health care for all residents. This has been achieved through the development of a new health care system that is based on the principle of social responsibility.

In my opinion, this is the only way to achieve social justice and equality. The System has been successful in providing health care to all who need it, and it has also reduced the cost of health care for everyone.

I would like to see this type of system implemented in the United States. It would be a major step forward in the fight for social justice.

Bill Buckley smokes pot

William Buckley, editor of the National Review, has been named by President Richard Nixon to become the second in command of the office of the CIA director.

The National Review has been one of the most influential conservative publications in the United States, and its editor is a prominent figure in the conservative movement.

This is a prime example of what is wrong with the conservative movement today. Buckley is not a conservative in the true sense of the word, and his appointment could only serve to damage the reputation of the CIA.

For example, Buckley has been known for his support of free market economics and his opposition to government interference with the economy. These views are in direct opposition to the principles of the CIA, which are based on a philosophy of government intervention in the economy.

Moreover, Buckley has been criticized for his lack of integrity and his道德空谈. Buckley has been accused of accepting bribes and kickbacks from foreign governments, and his appointment to the CIA could only serve to damage the credibility of the agency.

I urge President Nixon to reconsider his decision and appoint someone who is truly committed to the principles of the CIA.

The statement made by the chairman of the American Medical Association, Dr. Henry G. Hecht, in response to a recent statement by the American Medical Association, is quite surprising.

Dr. Hecht said, "We are concerned about the increasing number of physicians who are using marijuana for personal use, and we believe that this practice is dangerous to public health."

This statement is not only inconsistent with the American Medical Association's position on the use of marijuana, but it is also dangerous to public health. Marijuana is not a dangerous drug, and its use is not a threat to public health.

As a medical professional, I want to disprove the statement made by Dr. Hecht. I believe that the use of marijuana is not dangerous to public health and that it should be regulated, not banned.

I urge the American Medical Association to reconsider its position on the use of marijuana and to support the decriminalization of marijuana.

The purpose of the course, Meeks said, would depend on the classroom environment and the experience the students bring to the study. The course is taught by James Lindberg, associate professor of education at Iowa State University.

The settlement reached in Paris, Lindberg said, will be a good example of the way to go about dealing with such problems.

Energy crisis course offered

To familiarize students with the energy crisis, representatives from the University of Iowa departments of energy and environment will teach a spring class about energy and contemporary society for one semester each year.

The course, which will begin Feb. 11, will be offered in the departments of geography, James Meeks, professor of geography, and Paul Seaburg, assistant professor of economics.

The purpose of the course, Meeks said in his report, is to develop a coherent understanding of the contemporary society.

Each professor will teach the course twice a week, from 8:00 to 9:30 a.m.

The experimental laboratorial to former Prime Minister Harold Wilson and based on support from the anti-kick-and-peek movement, this course is designed to improve students' understanding of the energy crisis.

The course is designed to be a weekend class, with the students working on a computer program to help them understand the energy crisis.

The purpose of the course is to educate students about the energy crisis, with the help of the students' understanding of the energy crisis.
The influence of television on the behavior of children was a topic that went well beyond the bounds of the television itself. Bettye Caldwell, a former social worker, argued that television programming could be a powerful tool for shaping children's attitudes and behavior. Caldwell's work was supported by research that showed a correlation between viewing patterns at age eight and violent behavior later in life. This correlation was especially strong for boys, and Caldwell believed that the power of television to influence children's behavior was a matter of great concern.

For Caldwell, the solution was not to ban television, but to change the way it was used. She advocated for the provision of adequate day care for children, and for the development of a support system in Little Falls, Minnesota, to help families adjust to the demands of modern life. Caldwell believed that day care could provide an institution in which young children could learn to socialize with their peers, and to develop a sense of security and belonging.

Caldwell's work was part of a broader effort to understand the impact of television on children, and to develop strategies for mitigating its negative effects. Other researchers, such as Dr. Leonard Ern, focused on the role of television in shaping children's perceptions of violence and aggression. Ern's research suggested that viewing violence on television could be a direct cause of violent behavior in children, and that there was a need for more research in this area.

Overall, the work of Caldwell and Ern, along with other researchers in the field, helped to bring attention to the complex issues surrounding television and children. Their work served as a reminder that the influence of television was a matter of great importance, and that more research was needed to understand its impact on children's behavior.
Spock promotes radical political action

By CLEM ABERCROMBIE
Staff Writer

Dr. Benjamin Spock, noted pediatrician and anti-war activist, emphasized the need for radical political action in a speech before an audience of 200 people last night.

"What I'm going to speak about today is the necessity for many more young people to be willing to sacrifice their lives for the cause of peace," Spock said.

Spock cited his own involvement in the Vietnam War protest movement as an example of the need for radical political action.

"I was part of the generation that felt we had to do something to stop the war," Spock said.

Spock also discussed his work with the National Service Council, which he described as a "meaningful" experience.

"I learned a lot about the political process and how it works," Spock said.

However, Spock also expressed concern about the current state of the country.

"We are facing a crisis of the first magnitude," Spock said.

Spock ended his speech by encouraging the audience to take action.

"I urge you to join the struggle for peace," Spock said.

Iowa Daily Iowan Film Review

A film's critical success or failure is determined by a thousand factors: the lead actors, the director, the screenplay, the cinematography. In many cases it can be attributed to one factor, the story. If the story is good, the film is good. If the story is bad, the film is bad. This is not to say that other factors do not play a role in determining the success of a film. Certainly, the acting, the direction, and the cinematography can all contribute to the overall quality of a film. However, a film without a good story cannot be a successful film. A film's story must be well written, well developed, and well executed to be successful. Otherwise, it will not be able to hold the viewer's attention and will be quickly forgotten.

carried through to everyone on our squad. Terry Haffner and diver John Buckley are good examples of the type of performers I have in this team. Dick Eisenlaender, in particular, is an outstanding performer..."

Eisenlaender paced the Hawks with 18 points, coming off his outstanding 1600-meter run record in the long jump by going 15-7.5. Mike Tyson, a tailback on the Cyclones’ squad, "We had a good time, but the Hawkeyes are a good team. They’re going to win a lot of meets."

"I was pleased with the performance of two of our first-year men in the 800 and 1600," said coach Anderson. "Bob Pfeiffer ran a 5:30 mile, and Tony Diamontos won the mile."

"That was a battle of football players, the latter an outstanding TMU Freshman. His time of 4:23.78 in the mile

The 880-yard run was won by Iowa State’s Mike Tyson, a tailback on the Cyclones’ squad. He ran the mile, and his team of Iowa won the meet by 19 points.

"Iowa State has good athletes, but we have good coaches, too. Dick Eisenlaender is one of the best tutors in the country."

PALM DESERT, Calif. — (AP) — Hubert Green came from three strokes off the pace with a stirring second-round 65, swept past faltering Ben Crenshaw and gained his first major of national championship with a 7-under 65 Sunday in the $100,000 Bob Hope Desert Classic.

Green, who had missed the cut here three years ago and four desert golf courses, was 19 under par and provided him with public acclaim despite the title and more than $60,000 in winnings.

This time, however, some saved of his heroes for the final round to see the national television audience. After three birdies in a row on the front nine to catch Crenshaw, Green pulled on damaged knees until built on those four strokes to finish second place in the $250,000 open final.

Women’s Classic

PORT ST. LUCIE, Fla. — (AP) — Gil Martin of Matthews, N.C., fired a 6-under 70 for the championship of the LPGA Tour’s Florida Women’s Open Sunday in the third round of the championship.

Miss Martin, 31, a University of Miami physical education graduate, moved to 19 under par in four rounds after posting his third consecutive 21-victory season.

PORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — (AP) — Henri Cochet, France's 16-year-old star and world's No. 2 tennis player, won his first tennis Classic here after Kerri Melville withdrew because of her foot.

A tournament spokesman said Miss Melville, the No. 2 seed, could not meet Miss Evert in the championship match because she "had nothing to run on her foot." Miss Evert has won 108 of her 116 matches with Miss Melville and in 11 years she had suffered a fainting heart attack.

"I got up in the middle of the night and just walked on the road when I saw a faint," she "I don't know what she did" in 1967 when she was running in the middle of the match.

Miss Melville said doctors told her not to go again because of a couple of weeks and said to let the partnership to her in her home in England.

Collins' loss fatal to Hawks

By BRIAN SCHMIDT
Staff Writer

Iowa Hawkeyes' wrestling team suffered a devastating loss this week to Indiana, leading to the team's worst performance in recent years. The loss marks a milestone for the team and is expected to impact their future competitions.

The Hawks had a chance to win the meet of the year, but were met with a formidable competitor in the form of the Hoosiers.

The loss is a wake-up call for the team, and they are expected to bounce back in their upcoming matches.

Gymnasts stay unbeaten

Wildwood received support from Baby Olsen and Carl Kuchen during the meet of the year, and brother Robert James joined the team in the training room.

Wildwood's performance was exceptional, with a 11.00 score and bringing a victory to the conference.

Assistant Iowa gymnastics coach Steve Stewart has been working hard to bring the team back to its winning ways.

Tasteful English rock and roll, plus powerhouse Chicago blues!

Dave Mason was an original member of Traffic, a super group of guitarist and composer of some of their classic songs like “Feelin’ Alright” and “You Can All Join In.” Since leaving Traffic, he made his name in albums like Alone Together (with songs like “Only You Know and I Know”) and is just now making a full-scale tour of the U.S.A. On tour, Mason has been making the most of his time, and his fans have been getting a great reception. —“Everything’s a rock band should be”—N.Y. Times.

Buddy Guy/Jonell Wells Band — Chicago blues, you talk about this band. Nothing forced or pushed, they play with the music like that makes the music, they are. Known as one of the greatest performing hands in the bus, from gigs with J. Geils and the Allman Brothers, they make a good companion to the Dave Mason Band. This is going to be a great night of music.
