Strong child abuse bill passed by Iowa Senate

By Michael McCann

DES MOINES—A strong child abuse bill was passed by the Iowa Senate Monday, which provides for a program of information and education, and a central registry of child abuse reports.

The bill was introduced partially in response to a case covered by the Tribune Writer, according to Sen. William C. Gompertz, of Des Moines, sponsor of the bill. Gompertz pointed out that the incidence of child abuse went up 50 per cent between the years 1965-67.

The bill was referred to by proponents as a "wisely enlightened reform bill." In that the Senate had made presentations and reflation rather than punishment.

Best approach

Sen. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, who sponsored the bill with Gompertz, said that such a central registry of child abuse reports will be reported if the observer of the crime believes that the parent will be better rather than jailed.

This move is an effort on the part of the Iowa Senate to change the current situation of child abuse, Gompertz said.

"The department of social services will conduct the investigations of each report of child abuse and determine the nature of action that should be established in the "best interests of the child," and pursuit that course. The criminal procedures procedure is in only one opinion possible.

Old Cap, City relationship unclear

By BILL BUEHRMEISTER

The city's relationship with Old Capitol Management, has become unclear as a result of the company's financial failure, but it appears that the firm is not definitely out of the picture as the urban renewal renewal

The ruling stems from a class action as the class action will be decided whether or not the tenants of the Old Capitol will be entitled to a rebate of rent paid in March. The court ordered the Clerk of the Circuit Court to file the order with the Iowa City Municipal Code.

The court said, "Every citizen of any state, county, city, or township shall have the right to look into the books of any public officer or corporation in their capacity as such officer or corporation."

The court ruled that if the Old Capitol is not in the city's alternative, the original contract called for a city council of the city's obligation. George, a signed March 12, said he felt the contract was in breach of contract. The defendant, L.A., a tenant of the Old Capitol, is a member of the city's committee. The tenant, B.B., a tenant of the Old Capitol, is a member of the city's committee.

The legal proceedings leading up to the court's decision began in March. The decision began in March, and the filing of the lawsuit, is not yet in the public record.

"Whatever the alternative is, it will be out of the public record at some point," Davis said. She has also not reached a settlement with any of the individuals involved in the lawsuit.

The suit was filed in July, and the court ordered the parties to file any motions and briefs in the record by March 29.

At what priorities, Nobel?

Odd nominations for the Nobel Peace Prize are a source of amusement to many. H. L. Mencken, Henry Kissinger, bombing cities in a small country, are two. George Marshall, the peacemaker, was passed over in the 1953 ballot, and again this year. So was Thomas Mann, whose only crime was to write in a language that the Nazis disapproved of. But this year the peace prize went to Maxwell Morley, editor of Time magazine. This is in the tradition of naming the hog of the year. In any case, it's another example of how much favoritism there is around town.

The American people finally followed Groening on an exploration, in opposition to the war in Vietnam. The peace prize is an indication of the resurgence of the anti-war movement. Groening had been the strongest candidate in the polls, and in fact, he was the only candidate who was really a contender. He was the one who had the most to lose if he lost. He had been the one who had been the most vocal about the war. He had been the one who had been the most consistent in his opposition to the war. And he was the one who had been the most effective in using his influence to try to bring about a change in policy. He was the one who had been the most courageous in speaking out against the war.

Ironically, some of the worst opposition to Groening's candidacy came from within the anti-war movement itself. There were those who felt that Groening was not doing enough to win the peace prize, and that he was not doing enough to support the anti-war movement. These were people who felt that Groening was not being aggressive enough in his efforts to win the peace prize, and that he was not being aggressive enough in his efforts to support the anti-war movement.

The first thanks go to University President Bob Dyer for his support. The president's support is crucial to any successful peace prize campaign. It is important for the president to make it clear that the university is behind the candidate and that the university is committed to the candidate's success. The president should also make it clear that the university is willing to do whatever it takes to help the candidate win the peace prize. This includes providing financial support, as well as providing the candidate with the necessary resources to carry out his campaign.

The second thanks go to the Student Senate, which has been an important supporter of Groening's candidacy. The Student Senate has been a strong ally in the anti-war movement, and has provided significant support to Groening's campaign.

The third thanks go to the students and faculty members at the university, who have been so generous in their support of Groening. The students and faculty members have been a key part of the anti-war movement, and have played a crucial role in the success of Groening's campaign.

The fourth thanks go to the many organizations and individuals who have supported Groening's candidacy. The support of these organizations and individuals has been invaluable, and has helped to make Groening's campaign a success.

The fifth thanks go to the many people who have worked tirelessly on Groening's behalf. The efforts of these individuals have been crucial to the success of Groening's campaign.

The sixth thanks go to the many people who have contributed financial support to Groening's campaign. The financial support of these individuals has been crucial to the success of Groening's campaign.

The seventh thanks go to the many people who have volunteered their time and efforts to support Groening's campaign. The efforts of these individuals have been crucial to the success of Groening's campaign.

The eighth thanks go to the many people who have provided moral support to Groening. The support of these individuals has been invaluable, and has helped to make Groening's campaign a success.

The ninth thanks go to the many people who have provided legal support to Groening. The support of these individuals has been invaluable, and has helped to make Groening's campaign a success.

The tenth thanks go to the many people who have provided medical support to Groening. The support of these individuals has been invaluable, and has helped to make Groening's campaign a success.

The eleventh thanks go to the many people who have provided educational support to Groening. The support of these individuals has been invaluable, and has helped to make Groening's campaign a success.

The twelfth thanks go to the many people who have provided emotional support to Groening. The support of these individuals has been invaluable, and has helped to make Groening's campaign a success.

Natural gas prices in communities by the Associated Press

Gas prices vary in communities

The major oil company each has different wholesale prices for their gasoline. The price is determined, in part, by the cost involved in producing the fuel. The greatest cost factor is the cost of the crude oil from which the gasoline is refined if the company has a great deal of experience, crude oil is the most it can make.

Each company has its prices, and one station in a given community may be cheaper than another due to factors such as location, marketing and transportation costs. When the gasoline from a lower cost company is delivered at a higher price, it is because a higher cost retailer is paying more for the same amount of oil than other retailers.

Regional differences in gas prices are due to variations in wholesale gas prices. Los Angeles has lower gas prices than New York.

But wide differences within a single community have been reported. For example, a station in Kansas City, Missouri, has been operating for many years. It has been delivering gasoline at prices lower than those charged at other stations in the same community.

The price of gasoline varies with the cost of the crude oil from which it is refined. The cost of crude oil is determined by the price of oil on the international market. The price of oil is determined by supply and demand. When the supply of oil is low, the price of oil is high. When the supply of oil is high, the price of oil is low.

The price of gasoline is also determined by the cost of transportation and storage. When the cost of transportation and storage is high, the price of gasoline is high. When the cost of transportation and storage is low, the price of gasoline is low.

When the gasoline market is in equilibrium, the price of gasoline is stable. When the gasoline market is not in equilibrium, the price of gasoline is unstable.

The price of gasoline is also determined by the cost of labor. When the cost of labor is high, the price of gasoline is high. When the cost of labor is low, the price of gasoline is low.

When the gasoline market is in equilibrium, the price of gasoline is stable. When the gasoline market is not in equilibrium, the price of gasoline is unstable.
Altman continues to go 'against grain'

In the same way that a successful studio model's allowance to themselves to produce a film such as Thieves Like Us may allow audiences to discover that the film is a new variation of a familiar one, Robert Altman may have discovered that in his career to date he has produced many variations of a familiar one. Thieves Like Us is merely the latest in a series ofуксм, that the film's directorial and thematic sensibility is a natural extension of the director's vision. Altman has given his usual rambunctious and enigmatic characters a chance to do their thing and his usual sense of freedom with the film's narrative structure. Thieves Like Us is a love letter to the film noir tradition, and it is clear that Altman has a deep appreciation for its style and storytelling techniques. The film is a testament to Altman's ability to create a unique and powerful cinematic experience that is both a homage to and a departure from the film noir genre. The film is a celebration of the film noir tradition and a reminder of its enduring relevance in today's cinematic landscape.

Iowa is a relatively young state: too old to have a colorful and picturesque past. Iowa has a deep and rich history. It is a state where you can find a diverse range of experiences, from the natural beauty of its lakes and forests to the cultural richness of its cities and towns. Iowa is a state where you can learn about the past, present, and future of a community.

The film "Thieves Like Us" was directed by Robert Altman and stars Art Garfunkel and Jane Fonda. It is a story about a man named "Tony" who is on the run from the law. The film takes place in the Midwest, and it is a story about the American dream and the realities of life.

The film "Altmann" is a documentary about the life of a woman named Ida Altmann. It is a story about a woman who dedicated her life to the struggle for women's rights and equality. The film uses interviews with Altmann and archival footage to tell her story.
