Passage of DOT bill saves Ray from politically sensitive decision

By MICHAIL MCCLAIN
Legislative Reporter

Gov. Robert Ray was saved from a potentially embarrassing situation Friday when the state Legislature approved a major transportation bill that would have forced the governor to support a project involving the development of a $10 million road to the Iowa Lakes. The measure, one of the most controversial pieces of legislation of the session, had been held up at the last minute over concerns that it could lead to a conflict of interest for Ray, who is both a member of the Legislature and a major developer in the area.

The bill, which had been pending for weeks, was initially introduced by Ray himself and had been heavily supported by his administration. However, late Friday afternoon, the governor announced that he would be unable to sign the bill into law and instead would allow it to become effective without his signature.

"I cannot in good conscience support this measure," Ray said in a statement released Friday. "The project in question is not only a major conflict of interest for me, but it also fails to meet the basic standards for transportation planning and development in Iowa."

Ray said he had been "satisfied" with the bill's provisions regarding the development of a new road to the Iowa Lakes, but had "serious reservations" about the project itself. Specifically, he had concerns about the project's potential impact on the environment and its cost to taxpayers.

The bill's backers had previously stated that the project was necessary to help revitalize the area and boost tourism, but Ray said he had "fundamental concerns" about the project's sustainability and its ability to generate long-term economic benefits.

"This is not the kind of project that I would support," Ray said. "I believe we should be investing in projects that will improve our quality of life and help our communities thrive, not those that are simply good politics for the moment but will cost us dearly in the future."
Chicanos need common cause

By MARIE LUCAS MURPHY

Half of all Chicanos are bilingual and thus feel that they have a special obligation to help Hispanics and other Chicanos as it has been for other groups in the past.

Chicanos are the only group in the United States that has been called for over a hundred years by a special agency and an independent director.

Leadership has also been a problem for Chicanos as it has been for other minorities. They have not participated in decision making, "says political activist Corky Gonzales.

But he noted that leaders in every movement "argue over the philosophy and political aims of the Chicano movement. This is the same way the United States government and its leaders have been fighting for a cause and goals, according to poet Rodolfo Gonzales.

"The movement has had no leaders or goals, according to poet Rodolfo Gonzales. It is as if they are fighting for a cause and goals that have been set by others and not by themselves."

Gonzales echoed the sentiments of the Chicano movement. The Chicano movement has been struggling for a number of years, but has not been successful in its efforts. The movement has had no leaders, "he said, referring to others in the Chicano community who have tried to lead the movement.

"People want to be leaders, but they do not have the confidence to lead," Gonzales said. "They are afraid of the consequences of leadership and of the responsibility that comes with leadership."

Bilingual instruction for Chicanos discussed

By SALVADOR R. FLORES

Teaching Chicano children in bilingual and bicultural elementary education is needed, according to Robert L. Flores, professor of elementary education at the University of Iowa.

"There has been a lack of emphasis on Spanish and Spanish culture in elementary education," says Flores. "It is important for children to learn about their own heritage and culture, as well as to learn about other cultures."

"The lack of emphasis on Spanish and Spanish culture is a problem that needs to be addressed," says Flores. "It is important for children to learn about their own heritage and culture, as well as to learn about other cultures."

Faculty flunks the big ‘final’

Rising to new levels of indifference and ob­ servance, members of the liberal arts faculty voted last week to reject a final attempt at regulating office parking.

The term "refused" is used loosely, since the Killison Plan would not have changed procedures. It merely designed to make garages more efficient and attempted to provide access to students. Yet even this careful innovation was much for why they are highly compatible with the traditional.

Refused. It voted to refuse to go to every proposal does not solve the significant problems existing in the grading process.

The issue is not one of evaluation—everyone passes or fails according to their best efforts. This is a matter of fairness to students. However, action is required to stem this tide and improve at least university, employers and students. The existing grading system has become a source of uneasiness, serving purposes for which it was never intended. It has failed in at least three counts as a comparative measure, as a represen­ tation of academic standards and as a measurement of worth.

In the first place, there are only three marks: A, B, and C, normally given at a U. Such a limited scale gives little room to distinguish between levels of achievement. Unlike a normal curve, the law is not truly intended for grading purposes, and the candidates for a grade are not consid­ ered to be in a class on a pass-fail basis. Thus, pass-fail remains on the books, but it is almost impossible to judge whether or not they are unfair. The Educational Policy Committee and the bare any real value in pass-fail, they had better take action to make it available in a realistic basis.

For such an opportunity existed, last fall, they refused to do so.

The non-active and closed-mindedness of many faculty concerning the grading system is hard to justify. Since promotions and salary adjustments for next year were recently denied, perhaps too many are too busy complaining about their own job performance criteria to worry about measurement standards they apply to students.

Local U. leadership has seriously curtailed the access of workers employed by the state who are now in a time of crisis. I believe these people are helping settle out the rest of the most recent strike, a strike of Iowa’s labor union. When the history of this strike is written, people may speak about the state’s reaction to the issue of workers’ rights. When we speak of the labor movement, we speak of state laws which prohibit a strike. We speak of state laws which prohibit a strike.

For the sake of argument, I’m in favor of a tax cut, a stable tax base, and an increase in the cost of living. I don’t have to worry about student representation because I’m not a student. If I don’t have to worry about the average student, I don’t have to worry about the average student. Mitchell, Stans acquitted of criminal charges

"It is a myth that the Chicano civil rights movement has been unorganized until recently. As an engine, it has been operating for many years." -- University of Iowa law student George Garcia, who chaired the Workshop on Chicano Civil Rights Law, which was held at the University of Iowa law school January 15.

In addition, each man was charged with six counts of perjury, one count of using the mail to defraud, one count of making false statements in connection with a federal court matter, and one count of the federal mail fraud statute.

In each case, the defendants were accused of making false statements in connection with the mail fraud statute.

The defendants all entered pleas of not guilty to the charges.

The trial began on January 15 and is expected to last several weeks.

Gonzales embodies Chicano solidarity

by David Stamps

Rodolfo "Corky" Gonzales is like a one-man movement. In fact, he epitomizes movement. When he walks, his every step is deliberate and purposeful - a silent testament to the dynamism and vitality he displays. His presence is felt, and his impact is undeniable.

At the third annual Chicano Conference held Friday and Saturday at the Iowa Memorial Union, the dynamic scenes of hugging and handshaking, of Chicano nationalism, and fighting itself were on full display. Union Films presents Elia Kazan standards

by JOHN BOWIE

Elia Kazan is quite possibly the greatest One of American cinema. Kazan was known for his realistic dialogue and performances. Kazan was a frequent collaborator with writers like Arthur Miller and Tennessee Williams.

Their order embraces a violent ten week session (June 10), when machines are being used to pick lettuce it is a half-baked idea which is charged and ominous, his reality. Even the love poems admit that burstyn, the other a nightmare. He's too busy accepting praise for Chicano power. But one may ask If the family is all. Topple Bucks 98-83

Fast-breaking Celts roll over

MILWAUKEE (AP) - The fast-breaking Boston Celtics, behind 20 points to women.

John Havlicek slammed a new and half endlp at the end of the first quarter as the Celtics stormed to an 82-76 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks in the first half.

The second game in the best-of-seven series will be played Thursday night in Milwaukee.

Bucks outside shooting forced Havlicek away from the defensive basket, opening doors for the hard driving Celtics.

The Bucks were able to get the lead back after an early quarter, but it was early in the second quarter that they scored 46-11 lead with 5 1/2 left in the second period.

But the Celtics managed only two more points of the rest of the period, while a jump shot by Havlicek and a pair of three-pointers by Dave Gifford contributed to the second half.

Scores skyrocketed in the second half and the Bucks mounted a comeback of 14 points midway through the first quarter.

The second quarter was one of the best for the Bucks, as they scored 51 points to 17 for the Celtics.

With 6:20 left, the Bucks' momentum started to come together.
