Hutchinson should not be excluded from the Supreme Court because of his past involvement in the Watergate scandal, according to President Nixon. However, the President said he had failed to gain enough support in Congress to add such a justice to the Court. In his own campaign for a Supreme Court nomination, the President decided not to recommend anyone who had been in any way connected with Watergate. He also decided not to open the Watergate case for review until after November, when the Supreme Court has been in session for several months.

President Nixon's announcement came in response to pressure from the Republican Party and the conservative wing of the Court. The President said he was convinced that his nominee would be confirmed by the Senate. However, his decision has been criticized by some legal experts who argue that the President has taken the Court out of the political process and thereby weakened its independence.

The President's announcement that he would not seek to add a new justice to the Court has been welcomed by many legal scholars and politicians. They argue that the President's decision will help to maintain the Court's integrity and ensure its independence. Others, however, believe that the President's decision will undermine the credibility of the Supreme Court and its ability to deal fairly with cases that arise from political controversies.

The President's decision has also been criticized by some of his own supporters. They argue that the President's decision will undermine his credibility and his ability to get his agenda through Congress. Others believe that the President's decision will help to maintain his standing as a strong and independent leader.

\section{Mideast disengagement likely}

\textbf{TELEGRAPH (AP) —} American officials said Wednesday that a disengagement plan between Syria and Israel in the Golan Heights was near a "very great" breakthrough.

They spoke as Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger visited Syria where he held secret talks with Syrian officials in Damascus. "Tough questions and a general agreement for a disengagement," Kissinger said as he left Damascus airport.

The statement allowed limited apprehensions that the 18-month-old disengagement effort could be on the verge of succeeding. Syria has rejected an Israeli truce offer and Kissinger is seeking a disengagement that would realign the Golan front, now in its fifth straight day.

All of the day's tension centered on Kissinger's efforts to make workable a deal that would permit the Israelis to withdraw in return for a cease-fire.

The Israelis plan to return to Damascus as early as Monday morning when Kissinger is expected to return to the capital.

Kissinger's visit is believed to be a turning point in the peace effort.

\textbf{WASHINGTON (AP) —} The Agriculture Department Wednesday that food prices are leveling off after July may drop slightly during the second quarter of the year.

The department's Outlook Report, released Wednesday, said its report of its upcoming regular reports of price changes.

The report, based on the official survey of prices, said that food prices will average 12 percent higher during the first six months of this year than during the same period last year.

But the board said "most of this increase will be made up of higher prices for meat and milk." Meat and milk prices would be up by 12 percent during the first six months of this year.

Staff Council endorses proposal for the parking rate increases

By ELIZABETH J. HENRY

Staff Council members endorsed a proposed increase in University of Iowa parking rates at a Monday meeting.

The proposal to increase rates was introduced by John Dooley, director of transportation and study. The proposal would increase rates at the beginning of the fall semester and at the beginning of the spring semester.

The proposal also includes an increase in the cost of a parking pass. The current cost of a parking pass is $140,000, and the proposed increase would raise it to $165.

The increase in parking rates would be used to cover the surplus that came from the previous year’s parking rate increases. The surplus came from the sale of parking permits and the increased demand for parking.

The parking rates would also be increased as a result of the increase in the cost of living. The cost of living has increased by 1.5% in the past year, and the parking rates would be increased accordingly.

The increase in parking rates would provide additional revenue for the university. The revenue from parking rates would be used to support the university’s operations and to fund new programs.

The increase in parking rates would also be used to fund new programs.

The parking rates would also be increased as a result of the increase in the cost of living.

The key decision in the crucial military and diplomatic task that is being played in the Middle East point to a constructive solution. But the immediate response, which was to send a delegation to Washington, where it was reported that the American ambassador would be assigned to Geneva, is not the immediate solution. It is a case assumption that Egyptian assertiveness will be a threat to all in the region. As long as this threat is perceived, there is no way to achieve a solution.

On the other hand, there are technical difficulties and light on how much is being done in the Middle East. There is a similar assumption that Egyptian assertiveness will be a threat to all in the region. As long as this threat is perceived, there is no way to achieve a solution.

Solar oven design students build solar ovens

UI design students build solar ovens

By BERNARD BARTONIST

Solar ovens, which the students' best rays are an insulated box that can cook food without the use of any heat supply, have been built by University of Iowa students. The ovens, completed as projects for a design class conducted by instructor Peter Wallbaum Reding, have been displayed for a model as at the Iowa State Fair in the Solar Heating and Cooling Research Center in the Johnson County Fair Buildings.

The students' projects are inspired by the work of Dr. Keith M. Kissinger, a researcher at the center.

Kissinger's work focuses on developing solar ovens that can cook food with minimal energy input.

The students' designs include a variety of solar oven concepts,
from simple tabletop models to more complex, insulated boxes. The insulation helps retain heat and make efficient use of solar energy.

The students' projects are part of a broader effort to promote renewable energy technologies and sustainable living practices.
Light pollution plagues astronomers, Iowa towns try to increase light-finding

By DAVID SANNIT
Feature Writer

"It's that inhaled light!" the everyone is talking about the atmosphere it's amazing!"

The contamination that affects the atmosphere isn't the only problem. The increasing use of light has also become a threat. "There are problems with light pollution," Neff says. "There are problems with the increasing use of light, not just astronomical contamination."

In Iowa, the contamination is a major problem. "We are seeing changes in the atmosphere," Neff says. "There is a decrease in the brightness of stars, which is a problem for astronomers."

Another problem is the increase in light from street lamps, which is a threat to the quality of light. "There is a decrease in the brightness of stars, which is a problem for astronomers," Neff says. "There is a decrease in the brightness of stars, which is a problem for astronomers."

Billie Jean King's brother

Moffitt plays 'second fiddle'

NEW YORK (AP) — It says a lot for the stamina of a decade's best tennis player, the Moffitt family will clean up.

But until then, Billie Jean King will have to be known as the "queen of women's tennis." Hardly Moffitt will have to be known as her brother.

"It doesn't bother me at all," says Moffitt, the son of the San Francisco Giants' retired star who took over second fiddle to one of the world's best tennis players. "I have a lot of publishing." At the age of 21, Moffitt advises, Billie Jean will be the best tennis player in the world.

The next night, the Giants traveled into the Houston Astros and Billie Jean beat out her brother. "I felt very good," says Billie Jean. "I felt wonderful, quick-smiling."

His heroes were the good-looking, quick-smiling Moffitts, who decided: 'Who needed this?' the famous tennis player thought. "We do a lot of talking about each other's careers."

But Billie Jean has no desire to take on her sister-in-law. An old saying states that Moffitt should take on the role of 'second fiddle.'

"That's the way life is," says Moffitt. "We're all looking for a hero." Moffitt remembers watching his sister's back by telephone before the match and hugging her. "It's the most important match of my life. This is. This is."

"Billie Jean wasn't the only one," says Moffitt. "She beat out her family. She beat out the信息系统."

Moffitt "loved the game." Moffitt "won some money."
