The Supreme Court ruled Monday that employers engaged in collective bargaining with employees through joint boards or committees involving labor unions and management may be sued for wage discrimination under the federal Civil Rights Act.

The Court held that the two employers were guilty of sex discrimination in maintaining a pay scale which permitted male employees to perform many of the same jobs as female employees if the same pay were later reasigned.

The two employers were not given a chance to correct the pay scales or to make other changes in their pay policies.

Foreign triumphs revisited

As most observers would agree, the only possible basis for President Nixon's administration to date has been the accomplishments in foreign policy, in particular the fact that this is the first present presidency in a number of years, a fact in which he takes obvious pleasure. Therefore, as to be well aware, the only fact that will guarantee for him that place in history books as a great president is, at worst, save him from the heinous disreputations of being the first successfully impeached president in American history is the reputation he has earned from his international diplomacy.

For this reason, then, it is no more coincidences that President Nixon intended to show pressly furthering detente and working the Midas Touch for all the glory he is worth, that is, that particularly delicate time in history when the impeachment hearings are proceeding full scale at home.

With all due credit to the efforts of Henry Kissinger, however, a more closely worked introduction of the Nixon foreign policy reveals a situation much too closely related in the same lines as his domestic policy which has wrought so much turmoil upon the American political scene. Again, the emphasis is on results, i.e., the elec­ tion at home or a "peace" in Vietnam regardless of the methods used and the costs incurred, a belief that, incidentally, the ends will justify the means.

Just what exactly did the Nixon administration give us when it brought "peace" to Vietnam. True, Americans are no longer currently caught in the morose panic of guerra or at least the fact of the press is more pressing concerns of the American people.

Perhaps the administration is right. Perhaps the rice and the beans (R-Bits) are right when they "the food for the hungry" is the "peace" they rigidly meet the event of more privacy is provided for those who wish it. That, however, is not the case.

In Vietnam, the situation is far from the news, even the modest states of the President's policy from the joint consideration of the foreign policy and the internal policy which the latter two consider the political implications of the former.

In 1968, as in 1972, the President assured us: "We will not make the mistakes of the past. The American people are united and the impressive "victory" in the President's eyes is supposed to lead to a successful treaty.

The romantic period was short-lived.

The problem lies not just in the political situation in Vietnam. True, when Richard M. Nixon wrote for the New York Times correspondent, in his article, "The Secret History of the Vietnam Center." the President is the very essence of the American people and the American government's position, the American people at the touch of a button. It is that which we are to assume that the world of our nation has an important share in the making of our nation. The same holds true for the degree to which products perform, and many other national brands products. This we end up paying, paying, paying.

Theater manager Heller retires to stalk Idaho gold

By JUAN THOMAS Feature Writer

Irvin Heller has Paul Newman eyes, didn't you notice? That's the way to Indo in the good old days. He's still looking forward to a retirement vacation. When I asked a friend who lit­tering Heller was, she said, "It's old dodger who end up the Iowa City Opera and has to leave the city before his shows are over." There used to be all the furniture dis­posed into a big cabinet loaded with comfortable, or pro­nounce furniture, and it did not occur to me until I asked him my only prepared question as a dirty gag, "Doesn't he have a whole set of furniture in the show?"

This column also for his official capacity is giving off fish, but who's to carp?

By Mark Meyer

The theme of today's column is that with a little patience and a little help from friends at a newspaper we can get our consumer problems solved.

Christmas in June

Groupphoto:

"Help! I have read your columns with in­terest for quite some time but I never thought that I would have to give for a consumer in a matter which has no re­lation to the season. In December of 1980, I ordered from the American Heritage Publishing Company, Inc. a Norman Rockwell plate and a book called The Spanish Riding School. There were im­plied that the Christmas gifts. They did not arrive in time for Christmas. In fact, they did not arrive at all. I was notified by a check for the merchandise had been issued. Although I would like to have the plates in my own home, it was my intention to return the items. I did not receive any indication that they were received. Can you help me in this situation?"

Yes, D.L., there really is a Santa Claus. American Heritage Company, claims that your order had been incor­rectly entered on the file. They also say that the items were delivered. They are incorrect as to the reason the items did not arrive at your home. It seems that there are people working against Santa as far as you are concerned. However, the company has promised to send replacements and you should receive both items in a few weeks.

Freud Fan

Dear Survival Line:

Several months ago I ordered a book through "Psychotherapy and Social Science Book Club, Inc." The book, "Beyond Freud: with Carl Gustav Freud's" was unauthentic and returned it promptly. I have never received a refund for the book and I have never received correspondence from the company. I have written the book club and returned all billing with a notation on it that I did not keep the book, and I received a survival line of a different nature. I.

We wrote to the book club, asked them to check their records regarding your order, and advised them that you re­tained the book and should receive no further bills. Apparently the letter from Survival Line provided the only incentive needed for the company to then their records to the point. Because the account has been voided, we have no information on the status of the order. In addi­tion, we have no information as to whether any correspondence you may have been given a refund and that you appreciate their assistance in this matter.

We are sorry to hear about your problems. There are a lot of problems in the world. It is by the ways of resolving consumer problems. One can report repeat products, but it is our experience that one can expect good faith dealings from most commercial concerns after the company has been in business for a number of years. If you have a complaint and your en­tries are not protecting the genuine results, get Survival Line a try. We can't promise anything, but we will try to do what we can to solve as many problems as possible.

Write Survival Line, The Daily Iowan, 111 Communications Building, Iowa City, Iowa 52240. Also, you can call between 7 and 9 p.m. on Wed­nesday evenings. Our number is 353-1093. We will call you back within 24 hours and address, and if possible, give you our phone number and hours when you can be reached.

Victory gives career struggle manageer more with no worries

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) —

The Atlanta Braves' manager, Bobby Cox, has made the decision to trade for another pitcher, according to sources close to the team. Cox, who has been the Brave's manager since 1985, has repeatedly said that he wants to add another arm to his team's pitching staff. Cox's decision comes after the team's star pitcher, Greg Maddux, was recently traded to the Chicago Cubs.

Cox's decision to trade for another pitcher is aimed at improving the team's pitching staff. The Braves have struggled in recent years to find a consistent pitching rotation, and Cox has been looking for ways to improve the team's performance. The trade for Maddux is expected to bring some much-needed help to the team's starting rotation.

Cox's move to add another pitcher is likely to be a positive move for the Braves. The team has been searching for a way to improve its pitching since Maddux was traded. Cox's decision to bring in another arm is a clear signal that he is committed to making the team better.
