Impeachment of Nixon imminent

Nixon rules out tax cuts, controls in fight to stem inflation trend

Friday, July 26, 1974
Iowa City, Iowa 52240
Vol. 107, No. 38

10

Library Board gavels ‘Dissidents’; hold position

Nixon again rules out tax cuts, controls in fight to stem inflation trend

Nixon, as expected, spurned proposals for curbs on spending and growth of money supply and set aside for later consideration his earlier promise of a $5 billion cut in federal spending.

In his televised address last week, Nixon said he would try to persuade Congress to cut federal spending by $5 billion.

In the final hours of the day-and-night debate, Nixon’s base among Congressmen, including several Republicans, grew.

Nixon’s base among Congressmen, including several Republicans, grew.

Several Republicans pleaded for continued hearings on the Watergate tapes.

In his televised address last week, Nixon said he would try to persuade Congress to cut federal spending by $5 billion.

Nixon later ruled out any plans to cut taxes, which is his own major political position.

He also said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

Nixon said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

He also said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

In his televised address last week, Nixon said he would try to persuade Congress to cut federal spending by $5 billion.

Nixon’s base among Congressmen, including several Republicans, grew.

Several Republicans pleaded for continued hearings on the Watergate tapes.

In his televised address last week, Nixon said he would try to persuade Congress to cut federal spending by $5 billion.

Nixon later ruled out any plans to cut taxes, which is his own major political position.

He also said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

Nixon said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

He also said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

In his televised address last week, Nixon said he would try to persuade Congress to cut federal spending by $5 billion.

Nixon’s base among Congressmen, including several Republicans, grew.

Several Republicans pleaded for continued hearings on the Watergate tapes.

In his televised address last week, Nixon said he would try to persuade Congress to cut federal spending by $5 billion.

Nixon later ruled out any plans to cut taxes, which is his own major political position.

He also said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

Nixon said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

He also said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

In his televised address last week, Nixon said he would try to persuade Congress to cut federal spending by $5 billion.

Nixon’s base among Congressmen, including several Republicans, grew.

Several Republicans pleaded for continued hearings on the Watergate tapes.

In his televised address last week, Nixon said he would try to persuade Congress to cut federal spending by $5 billion.

Nixon later ruled out any plans to cut taxes, which is his own major political position.

He also said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

Nixon said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

He also said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

In his televised address last week, Nixon said he would try to persuade Congress to cut federal spending by $5 billion.

Nixon’s base among Congressmen, including several Republicans, grew.

Several Republicans pleaded for continued hearings on the Watergate tapes.

In his televised address last week, Nixon said he would try to persuade Congress to cut federal spending by $5 billion.

Nixon later ruled out any plans to cut taxes, which is his own major political position.

He also said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

Nixon said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

He also said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

In his televised address last week, Nixon said he would try to persuade Congress to cut federal spending by $5 billion.

Nixon’s base among Congressmen, including several Republicans, grew.

Several Republicans pleaded for continued hearings on the Watergate tapes.

In his televised address last week, Nixon said he would try to persuade Congress to cut federal spending by $5 billion.

Nixon later ruled out any plans to cut taxes, which is his own major political position.

He also said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

Nixon said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

He also said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

In his televised address last week, Nixon said he would try to persuade Congress to cut federal spending by $5 billion.

Nixon’s base among Congressmen, including several Republicans, grew.

Several Republicans pleaded for continued hearings on the Watergate tapes.

In his televised address last week, Nixon said he would try to persuade Congress to cut federal spending by $5 billion.

Nixon later ruled out any plans to cut taxes, which is his own major political position.

He also said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

Nixon said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

He also said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

In his televised address last week, Nixon said he would try to persuade Congress to cut federal spending by $5 billion.

Nixon’s base among Congressmen, including several Republicans, grew.

Several Republicans pleaded for continued hearings on the Watergate tapes.

In his televised address last week, Nixon said he would try to persuade Congress to cut federal spending by $5 billion.

Nixon later ruled out any plans to cut taxes, which is his own major political position.

He also said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

Nixon said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

He also said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

In his televised address last week, Nixon said he would try to persuade Congress to cut federal spending by $5 billion.

Nixon’s base among Congressmen, including several Republicans, grew.

Several Republicans pleaded for continued hearings on the Watergate tapes.

In his televised address last week, Nixon said he would try to persuade Congress to cut federal spending by $5 billion.

Nixon later ruled out any plans to cut taxes, which is his own major political position.

He also said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

Nixon said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

He also said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

In his televised address last week, Nixon said he would try to persuade Congress to cut federal spending by $5 billion.

Nixon’s base among Congressmen, including several Republicans, grew.

Several Republicans pleaded for continued hearings on the Watergate tapes.

In his televised address last week, Nixon said he would try to persuade Congress to cut federal spending by $5 billion.

Nixon later ruled out any plans to cut taxes, which is his own major political position.

He also said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

Nixon said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

He also said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

In his televised address last week, Nixon said he would try to persuade Congress to cut federal spending by $5 billion.

Nixon’s base among Congressmen, including several Republicans, grew.

Several Republicans pleaded for continued hearings on the Watergate tapes.

In his televised address last week, Nixon said he would try to persuade Congress to cut federal spending by $5 billion.

Nixon later ruled out any plans to cut taxes, which is his own major political position.

He also said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

Nixon said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

He also said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

In his televised address last week, Nixon said he would try to persuade Congress to cut federal spending by $5 billion.

Nixon’s base among Congressmen, including several Republicans, grew.

Several Republicans pleaded for continued hearings on the Watergate tapes.

In his televised address last week, Nixon said he would try to persuade Congress to cut federal spending by $5 billion.

Nixon later ruled out any plans to cut taxes, which is his own major political position.

He also said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

Nixon said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

He also said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

In his televised address last week, Nixon said he would try to persuade Congress to cut federal spending by $5 billion.

Nixon’s base among Congressmen, including several Republicans, grew.

Several Republicans pleaded for continued hearings on the Watergate tapes.

In his televised address last week, Nixon said he would try to persuade Congress to cut federal spending by $5 billion.

Nixon later ruled out any plans to cut taxes, which is his own major political position.

He also said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

Nixon said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.

He also said he would not reverse his campaign promise of a 2-cent-a-gallon fuel tax.
UI officials anticipate dormitories to reach "near full" capacity

PLANK HOUSE

Where will you live this fall? The very pleasing space in a director's room, or you will be sharing a private suite in one of the five individual Bliss dorms. The 1974 Bliss will be filled with upperclassmen in the fall. The student is a large dormitory that can accommodate to various needs. The 1974 Bliss is now open for occupancy.  The Bishop dorms are oriented toward the traditional single and double room. The Bliss dorms are oriented toward the traditional single and double room. The Bliss dorms are oriented toward the traditional single and double room. The Bliss dorms are oriented toward the traditional single and double room.

Official administrative sources do not make the exact room.

Mervyn's statement on tax irregularities

By M. Snyder

Rep. Edward Mervyn's introductory remarks Tuesday at the House Justice Committee's impeachment hearing were preliminary with Rep. John P. Dellenback overpaying the court costs. Mr. Mervyn was president of the Democratic National Committee. He said there were evidence "false in the House of Representatives.

Mervyn's remarks were not directed at the House debate. Speaking in the face of the committee discussion, Mervyn insisted that the "causing" of the public trust that it is to the President of the President.

Library

Chairman Richard Bucchin has been out of the post, he says, "we have to be careful with the staff." The staff inferred the time, he says that it was a理事会. He comments that committee earlier this week that "it's a shame to let the public think that the secretary of the'improvement committee involved should be handled properly by the government."

!UI Photo Gallery

_Gallery of UI 1974_..._will be featured at the 1974 Iowa State Fair_.

Postscript

McConell Farms

The Daily Iowan-Iowa-Iowa

Baha'i

August 17, 1974

Geneva

Bob Fielder, former agricultural editor is leaving the position to accept a teaching and administrative position at the University of Chicago. Fielder has been a member of the Daily Iowan staff since 1970. He will be based in Geneva, Illinois, where he will serve as a research assistant at the University of Chicago. Fielder's expertise in agricultural economics and policy will be a valuable asset to the university and the community. He will be sorely missed by his colleagues and the newspaper. We wish him well in his new endeavors.

More Than

The Iowan

Baha'i

August 17, 1974
Farmers complain, Corps of Engineers satisfies
Corvalle Dam elicits "sense of betrayal"
The Price of Justice

The City Council's logic on the proposed ordinance regulating marijuana has been hit at at their recent discussion. In a meeting, the existing practice among city magistrates has been discussed. People have a non-serious nature, either the changes are dropped as not important. In the most cases, then, the impact of the ordinance would be minimal.

Council members indicated that, for this reason, there may be need for an action in each case. At any rate, one council member said almost a year now, the Council should avoid the altogether for reasons that was to fail to answer the question before it.

If the Council's final decision is based on this logic, it is believed they will have received no ground. First, the Council should not make decisions on the basis of the liberal attitudes of the present magistrates. These conditions are able to change within a short amount of time and the Council, therefore, is bound by their present interests.

Michael McCann

Interpretations

To the Editor:

The POET is one of the poet's report of a conference by the Poet's Council on the Julie 23 at the Iowa Senate. As a result of the discussions that was held, the POET has prepared this report. The POET would like to thank the Council members for their participation. The report includes photographs usually resembles the discussions that was held.

The final report will be posted on the POET's website. Please feel free to contact the POET if you have any questions or comments. The POET's email address is: POET@IOWA.EDU

David A. Edwards, Ph.D.
Associate Professor
University of Iowa
Requiem for a saloon... the Vine gets pruned

by MICHAEL HAMAN

Very easy to type, but on this Friday night we're not pretending this piece is in any way a classy, literate essay. In fact, fairly tense. Very easy to write, but the city editorial committee... well, the city committee. I'm so much more certain that have just this evening kicked into the Vine and had him to have a look at the Vine. The Vine is dead. The Vine will know it, and any number of deadyard drinkers will know it. Death is an alphabetical typeface. But behind its graceful black letters, however, the near as ever one. It was a pity, see a man's soul and a right hip of these good things. To keep a discipline which wasn't a very good discipline, and this time there were drunks, there were headcases, there were wars. There would probably be a greater chance of value than any other one thing in the bar. In the bar, he has a right hand -based social and creative rendezvous, in a bar to escape the world. For those who have been here, the Vine is tough, it's essential for this fine little town to have its tenderfoot tourist. Vine's patrons were the old war vets who'd presented with a different vision of the city. The Vine's patrons were the old war vets who'd presented with a different vision of the city.

Survival Line

Kudos

Ian's Pointers: Company for solid waste management: Company for solid waste management - and D. Warehouses. Company for solid waste management: Company for solid waste management: Garden State Paper Co.; S.D. Institute, You want to be as good and grand as you can, and try your best to cope with the enemy of the day: South of America. For more information, contact at the corner of the street. The Vine's patrons were the old war vets who'd presented with a different vision of the city.

Gourmet

Today's "fasteater" is a

Goodbye

by MARY MEYER

Today's "fasteater" is a

Goodbye

by MARY MEYER

Goodbye