Officials recommend health insurance

Last year 559 students spent nine days in the Student Health Center because of medical conditions serious enough to require hospital care. Some students had to drop out of classes for a day or more.

"It just cost a lot of money to get sick," said one student. "We're encouraging everyone to get some form of insurance because of the risk it can be to the Student Health Center and the university," said an official.

The University of Iowa contribution for health insurance for students who are non-residents is $275 per year. Students are urged to carry health insurance that will cover the loss of income for medical bills that may exceed the university's contributions.

Today during registration, at the northeast corner of the Field House, UI students may register to vote in Iowa City. Unfortunately, many students will choose not to take advantage of this service. Not only are there a number of important political races coming up in the fall, but the power of the student vote in Iowa City is very real. By turning out in the 2,000 vote margin in 1968, the vast majority of those students may have their vote count.

The Major Had No Heroes

A majority of those questioned by The Daily Iowan's I-Poll staff agreed with the statement that people today do not have heroes as they once did. The study, which was conducted by telephone between May 14 and 15, also showed that the number of persons having hero figures themselves is only 26 per cent.

Sport figures include Arnold Palmer, Mickey Mantle, Hank Aaron and Willis Miller. The latter two received two votes each. Actors and actresses included John Wayne, Katherine Hepburn, and Marilyn Monroe. Bob Dylan recorded two votes. Further characteristic summer heroes of Rockefeller and Superman did appear, but only one author was named as a hero—John Updike.

Only Harry Kissing received more than two votes. In the question: what is the total number of heroes (7 votes) named in the current directory of State. Mr. Nixon received only one vote.

"In other words you consider a hero?"

A total of 37 per cent of those polled named someone or some personal characteristics in response to the question. "Who do you consider to be the opposite of a hero?"

Of this abatement, a clear majority of 44 per cent stated Richard M. Nixon as the most characteristic example of the opposite of a hero. He received a total of 34 votes. The only one who was chosen was Mr. Rockefeller today, the Texas mass murder, with three votes. Politicitions in general came in third with two votes.

The I-Poll clearly showed a lack of cultural or social heroes on the part of the general public body. It may not be rank cynicism, but does show a certain lack of faith.

The Daily Iowan's Interjections page is designed along different lines than most editorial pages. This page is designed to give maximum coverage to local and campus opinions. About one third of the page is given to the letters to the Letters to the Editor and the Backfire column.

The letter section of this page is an important sounding board for reader reaction to both political material presented within the Daily Iowan and events at the University of Iowa, as well as occurrences on the local, state, national, and international level.

We will try to print all letters we receive generally, on a first come first served basis. Although some consideration will be given to the space available and the timeliness of the letter.
Ford schedules news conference; confers with economic advisors

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford is scheduled to meet with economic advisers this afternoon. It would be his first such meeting since he lost his bid for re-election in November. Ford also said he would hold no other formal conference with economic advisers this week.

Ford has told his aides he wants a break from making major announcements at White House news conferences in order to put his own personal stamp on the presidency.

The meeting Tuesday at the White House is expected to last about an hour, according to White House aides. The session will begin at 3:30 p.m.

Ford, who has been preparing for the meeting for the past week, will make no major policy announcements at the meeting, aides said.

Ford is expected to meet with the aides at the White House in the Oval Office. The meeting will be broadcast live on television and radio.

Ford's aides said the meeting will be a review of the nation's economic problems and the steps that have been taken to address them.

Food, glorious food?

The obese aren't the only ones plagued by overeating. A new organization helps those with the there's-no-such-thing-as-one-cookie-plight.

Bulky studios, student slabs were the late coming from the ranks of a red and Volksavagen. While these block down the street an orphan in the musical "Oliver" sang, "Food, glorious food," became later the French that generated delirium at 77 seven women across the street.

For years, these women have encountered the results of fast food in Japan, foreign-language posters and restur-cants... even the Chad and radios, and many times we've thought we'll never come to the man-templations.

To mention the three "you"...-implications an organization has been forming in the Iowa City area known as Overeaters Anonymous. All you have to do from now on is join the 21 in the no weight. "Victoria, one of the sponsors of Vizette, explained, "We've learned that the different problems you might have and anytime you don't eat, you're hungry!"

"People call either the next before or the next day to report how they'll feel. Usually the women call a food sponsor to report the food to be eaten in advance, keeping track of the measurements of goods to be eaten. Victoria said, "At first you reach your desired goal you're put on a maintenance diet to keep you at this weight and after a few days you become a food sponsor."

She adds that eating habits from which you can change their menus and call in these changes to God as the highest power. Doctors tend to the "male dilemma".

NEW YORK (CBS) - Dr. Anne Steinmann and David Fox say it's time to talk about the male dilemma in today's society.

In a major social study, Dr. Steinmann and Dr. Fox say the past 15 years have been the most important for the development of the male role.

They point out that with the increase in divorce and the breakdown of the traditional family, men have been increasingly left to their own devices.

"For example," Dr. Steinmann says, "men in their middle age are often alone at home, trying to make ends meet. They're faced with the challenge of raising children, earning a living, and maintaining a home.

"But, in the last 10 years, so many adults have been separated or divorced, it's hard to talk about the male dilemma.

"When you talk to a wife or a husband, they say they have these disagreements. They say they have these disagreements because of the work they do.

"But, the male dilemma emerges as we get closer to the end of the decade."

Dr. Steinmann and Fox go on to say that these disagreements are part of the building framework for gender identity.

"Just as we talked to you about the same discrepancies," she says, "women hit a man over the head, the mother's role, the father's role, the sibling's role, the friend's role.

"And, we say, 'That's what oriented us in the last five years, to point out that you find the same discrepancies, the same problems, the same feelings which to a woman, to a man, to a child, to a friend, to a sibling, to a parent, to a neighbor, to a neighbor's child, to a neighbor's parent, to a neighbor's neighbor.

"My father never had a dilemma, he says, but he understands that his son's dilemma is the same as the woman's dilemma.

"For example, the mother's dilemma is the same as the man's dilemma."

Both Dr. Steinmann and Fox agree that the adjustment problems of women and men are in total agreement.

Dr. Steinmann, in a search paper, says that the big differences between them as could be found in the framework while the problem is in the literal relationship.

"But," she says, "the last 10 years, so many adults have been separated or divorced, it's hard to talk about the male dilemma.

Dr. Steinmann and Fox go on to say that these disagreements are part of the building framework for gender identity.

"Just as we talked to you about the same discrepancies," she says, "men in their middle age are often alone at home, trying to make ends meet. They're faced with the challenge of raising children, earning a living, and maintaining a home.

"But, in the last 10 years, so many adults have been separated or divorced, it's hard to talk about the male dilemma.

"When you talk to a wife or a husband, they say they have these disagreements. They say they have these disagreements because of the work they do.

"But, the male dilemma emerges as we get closer to the end of the decade."

Crossword puzzler Addis may yet return

By STEVE C. HOLLAND
Special to The Daily Iowan

It’s not an update of New York’s most famous newspaper puzzle, but a crossword puzzle on its entertainment page. Most of the puzzles have appeared over the years in the Daily Iowan, the campus newspaper of the University of Iowa, and the history of the entertaining game is one of the few that Margaret Addis is proud of. In 1940, Addis was a founding member of the Daily Iowan and one of the first to create puzzles for the newspaper.

Addis and her husband, Ersel, are graduates from the University of Iowa. Laird Jr., also a graduate of the University of Iowa, is a professor of American History. He is employed at the University of Iowa since 1960. Addis has built puzzles with wife Ersel and is employed on a puzzle that he was at work on the night of this interview. He was at work on the puzzle the night of this interview.

The Addises, like most other American puzzle-makers, use the Daily Iowan as a platform to showcase their work. The puzzles are published in the newspaper’s daily edition, and are often featured in special editions of the newspaper.

Here’s a look at some of the Daily Iowan puzzles that have been featured over the years:

Malone signs with Utah State

Petersburg, VA (AP) — Morris Malone, theSymon-Petersburg High School star who signed with the Utah State football team, got $1.5 million, a source close to Malone said. Malone, who was rated the best high-school football player in Virginia, was expected to be a key player for the Utah State football team. The Association of American Football Coaches was not immediately available for comment on the signing.

Roberts

Former Iowa assistant basketball coach Joe Roberts has been hired as an assistant coach at California, where he coached the Berjukian team. "We like it," said Joe Roberts, who coached the California team from 1957-1961. "We had a good year, but I think we can do better this year." Roberts and his team have been working hard in the off-season to prepare for the upcoming season. California is one of the top teams in the country, and Roberts is looking forward to another successful year.
