Ford grants Nixon full pardon

President Ford is in deep thought while aides receive reaction comments to the President's decision to pardon former President Nixon. From left, William Timmons, John Marsh, Alexander Haig, Robert Hartmann and the President.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford granted Richard M. Nixon "a free, full and absolute pardon" Sunday for any criminal conduct during his presidency and Nixon responded with a statement of remorse at "my mistakes over Watergate."

Announcing the pardon at a surprise appearance before newsmen and photographers, Ford said "I feel that Richard Nixon and his loved ones have suffered enough."

The announcement touched off criticism from a number of Democratic congressmen and the President's press secretary and close friend, Jerald F. TerHorst, resigned in protest.

"It was simply after a great deal of soul searching that I decided I couldn't in good conscience support the President's decision on former President Nixon, even though I knew he took that action in good conscience," TerHorst said.

Some Democratic congressmen protested that Ford had set a double standard of justice. Republicans generally supported Ford's decision.

The former President responded from his home in San Clemente, Calif., with a statement in which he admitted no criminal wrongdoing but said that "one thing I can see clearly now is that I was wrong in not acting more decisively and more forthrightly in dealing with Watergate."

Within two hours of Ford's announcement, presidential aides made public the terms of an agreement reached

Saturday under which the federal government will be given custody of Nixon's public papers and controversial tape recordings.

However, the agreement specified that all the tapes will be destroyed within five to 10 years — sooner should Nixon die within five years.

Philip Buchen, White House counsel, told reporters that Ford granted Nixon a sweeping pardon without any strings attached. However, he acknowledged that Ford might have taken a different course, or delayed a decision, had he not been informed in advance of the gist of Nixon's planned statement of response and the agreement covering the documents of the Nixon presidency.

In announcing the pardon, Ford said any move to try the former President might have taken months or years during which "ugly passions would again be aroused, our people would again be polarized in their opinions, and the credibility of our free institutions of government would again be challenged at home and abroad."

He said: "My conscience tells me clearly and certainly that I cannot prolong the bad dreams that continue to reopen a chapter that is closed. My conscience tells me that only I, as President, have the constitutional power to firmly shut and seal this book."

Buchen said Ford on Aug. 30 initiated a series of discussions within government and informal contacts with Nixon aimed at deciding whether to grant a pardon.

As part of that process, Buchen said he contacted Watergate special prosecutor Leon Jaworski to get his opinion, at Ford's behest, on how much time might be required to bring about any trial of the former President.

Buchen told reporters he was authorized to quote Jaworski as saying that the widespread publicity given Nixon's resignation and impeachment hearings before the House Judiciary Committee would "require a delay before the selection of a jury is begun of a period from nine months to a year and perhaps longer."

A spokesman for Jaworski said the special prosecutor's office played no direct role in the decision to pardon Nixon but said, "obviously we accept it."

Speaking slowly in a dramatic appearance at his desk in the White House Oval Office, Ford said, "It is common knowledge that serious allegations and accusations hang like a sword over our former President's head and threaten his health as he tries to reshape his life ..."

The reference to Nixon's health was not in Ford's prepared text for the occasion and Buchen, when asked if the President had some private knowledge about Nixon's physical and mental condition, replied, "I think it's generally known this man has suffered a great deal."

The pardon prohibits any criminal prosecution of Nixon "for all offenses against the United States" during his term of office.

However, Nixon still would be subject to any civil court proceedings and is subject to being subpoenaed as a witness — as has already happened — at the trials of Watergate defendants.

One effect of the pardon, legal sources said, is that the former president will not be able to claim his 5th Amendment rights against self-incrimination if he appears as a witness at the Watergate cover-up trial scheduled for Sept. 30. The pardon effectively immunizes Nixon for anything except perjury.

By terms of an agreement between Nixon and the General Services Administration, the former president is depositing all tapes and most records of his presidency to the national archives for storage in a federal facility at Laguna Miguel, Calif., near his ocean-side home.

To safeguard the records, which could be sought as evidence in criminal or civil proceedings, the agreement specifies that papers and tapes will be guarded by special locks which can only be opened by using two different keys, one of them to be in Nixon's possession and the second to be used by the archives staff.

In response to a question, Buchen said this meant Nixon could not get at the records and destroy any of them.

UI students react to Ford decision with elements of surprise, sadness

By DEB MOORE
Staff Writer

It was Sunday afternoon, the weather was sunny, and few UI students had heard of President Gerald R. Ford's announcement granting Richard Nixon "a full, free and absolute pardon."

But after being told, the candid reactions of a random sample of UI students were mixed with confused emotions along with elements of disbelief, sadness and surprise.

"You're kidding, oh Jesus Christ! I don't think you can print it (referring to his reactions)," Jack Baker, G, said. "That's just absolutely incredible. I mean if it was me, they'd probably prosecute me." Baker paused and added, "That's incredible. How can they let people off like that?"

"I'm disappointed and upset. I think Nixon should go to jail," Caroline Bassett, G, said firmly.

One Law student said he would prefer to sit down and think about the situation before he made any comments. He didn't know what to think about the situation, but he admitted he was surprised in the suddenness of Ford's announcement.

"Well, we all thought Nixon was getting off easy," Janice Charles, A2, said.

An anonymous caller informed The Daily Iowan late Sunday evening that a rally in protest of Pres. Ford's action would be held tonight in the downtown area at "sevenish."

In keeping with the nostalgia craze, the caller said the rally would return to the days of the 1960's. The rally is being sponsored by "The caller said, "Bill Graham presents in conjunction with nobody."

"I think it's positively absurd," Carol deProse, A3, said. "I'm not a strong supporter of Ford because of his strong military background and I will say it is the first major disappointment with his short term in office."

"It particularly hurts children who are just beginning to get a grip on a system of law and order. Then to have something like this happen," Iowa City City Council member deProse elaborated.

But Neena Sahai, A2, agrees with Ford when she said, "I think it's a pretty good idea because it will give a good impression to other countries. All over the world people have been saying that Nixon's a crook. People do make mistakes and others should try to learn from Nixon's mistakes."

Other students continued to react unfavorably toward Ford's statements.

"I think they're making a bunch of excuses to let him off easy, if he is guilty," Shellie De Voe, A3, said. "He should go through some type of process of law through which they find him either guilty or innocent."

"I think it's a little premature, coming now," Jim Nervig, LI, said. "I would have liked to see development of more evidence either pro or con."

"It seems senseless, Nixon's just as guilty as the rest of them," Dennis Barrett, A3, said. "My reaction is that they should give Dean immunity as well...Although they tried to blame it on Congress, I think that there's a fallacy there."

"I don't think Nixon should be pardoned," Tom Rutenbeck, A2, said with no further comment.

In a follow-up question, most of the students contacted agreed with Ford's terms of partial amnesty for Viet Nam war resisters.

Barrett said he thinks it would be good to grant immunity on a case-by-case basis. Even though he realizes the cases are so different.

"I've heard so many different opinions," Barrett said. "Some of the men would want some of their points brought out. Some didn't want immunity because they didn't feel that they had broken any laws."

"I lost three friends in the war and they didn't necessarily believe in it," Baker said. But he feels that Ford's terms of amnesty are fair.

"I don't want to make it sound like imprisonment or anything," Baker added, "but I do think that they should serve something, some type of civil service function."

Law profs question Ford's action

By JIM FLEMING
Editor

Dan Rather be damned, by dusk Sunday night most UI faculty and administrators contacted by The Daily Iowan still had not learned of Richard Nixon's pardon.

Those who had, however, particularly those on the payroll at the law school, had interesting things to say.

While all agreed that President Ford can legally and constitutionally grant a pardon, many questioned the ethical and political consequences of the act.

"As a matter of law, there is no question that the President has the power. Presidential pardoning power is absolute and can be invoked at any time," said Mark Schantz, associate professor of law. "But it's appropriate for leniency only at the sentencing stage."

A second law professor, Robert Clinton, questioned the propriety of a Presidential pardon before the grand jury's report on possible indictment is released.

"The public has a right to that report," Clinton said. He also debated whether the pardon would cover Nixon's possible indictment under California state law for tax evasion.

Tabbing the situation "one of the few times I agree with the American Bar Association," Clinton called for "equal application of justice for all."

"I have several clients in the state penitentiary who have committed crimes that are not as grievous as those Nixon is alleged to have committed," Clinton said. "One is serving a ten-year sentence on a breaking and entering charge that netted him $1.50."

Law Professor Arthur Bonfield, pointing to possible implications of Ford's decision, called it "a mixed blessing."

"On the one hand, it is difficult to see why he should be pardoned while his other cohorts face trial. It is a question of fairness. On the other hand, now Nixon can no longer invoke the Fifth Amendment, he can no longer be incriminated. That will make it easier to prosecute his cohorts, and it may help bring out the real story of his own involvement."

But Bonfield was skeptical that the decision would bring a confession from the former President. "One thing Nixon has 'perfectly clearly' done is not admitted anything. Some day he may say, 'Sure, I was pardoned, but only to avoid harassment.' History can be re-written in a lot of ways."

Five vie for school board posts

By MARK MITTELSTADT
Staff Writer

Iowa City voters will select two persons Tuesday to fill two three-year positions on the Iowa City school board and, in turn, terminate a campaign shrouded by misinformation and often muddled in apparent political undercurrents.

Running for the school board positions are: John Cazin, 1122 Downey Dr., UI microbiology professor; Jim Dickey, 1425 Sycamore St., UI freshman; incumbent Dr. Paul Huston, 223 Lucon Dr., consultant at the Veterans Administration Hospital; incumbent Dr. Robin Powell, 330 Ferson Ave., associate chief of staff for research and education at the Veterans Administration Hospital; and Ruth Skelley, 224 Fairview Dr., homemaker.

The major confrontation arose last week when a number of Iowa City educators voiced dissatisfaction with the tactics used by their representative professional organization in the endorsement of two candidates in the race.

The Iowa City Educators Association (ICEA) went on record Aug. 29 in support of John Cazin and Ruth Skelley for the school board positions.

But within days several teachers, mostly from elementary schools, complained they were not represented at that meeting and charged that:

not informed of the meeting at which the endorsement vote was taken;

—Copies of interviews with the five candidates were not distributed to the representatives until shortly before the vote was taken;

—The public endorsement may be misconstrued by parents and others voting Tuesday to represent a truly representative ICEA action.

Specific complaints about the ICEA action have come from teachers at Kirkwood, Sabin, Shimek and Lincoln elementary schools.

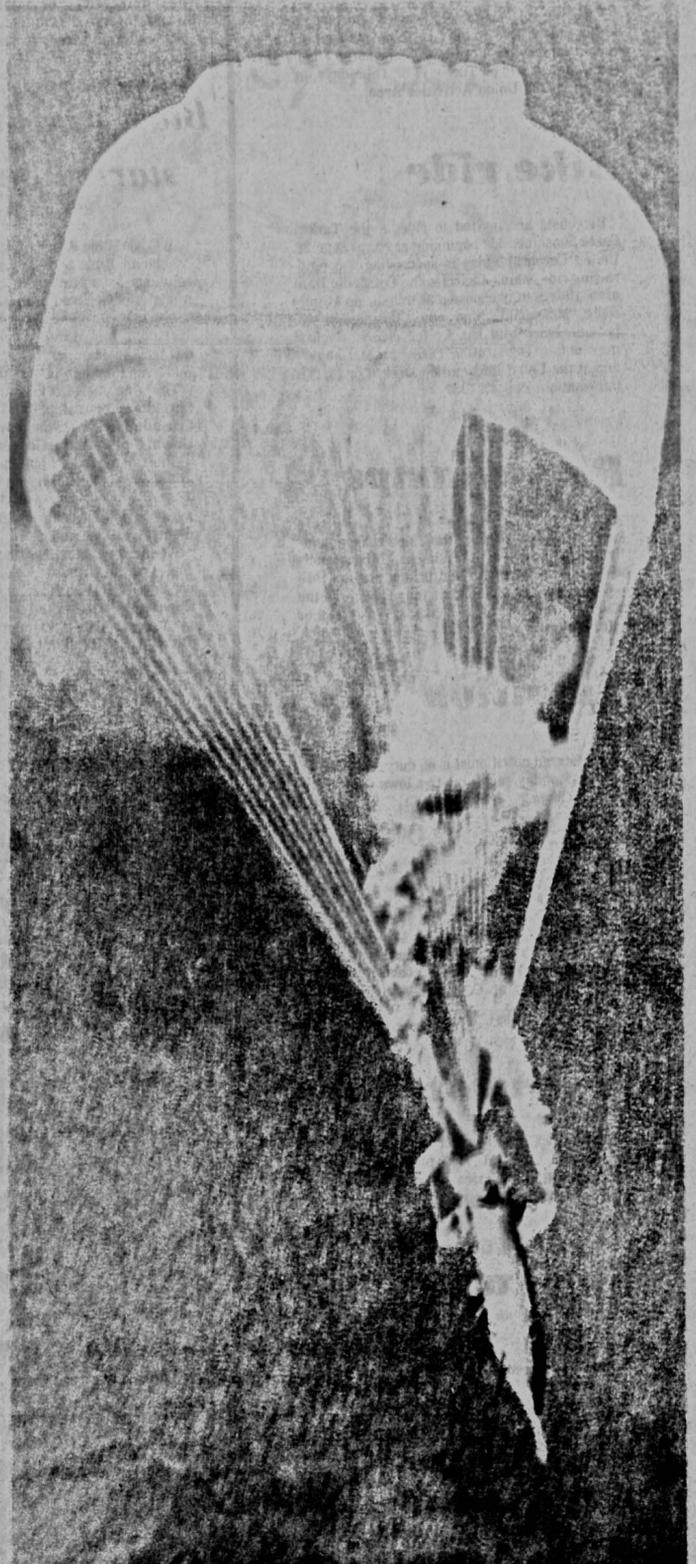

"The concern of many Iowa City teachers is that the endorsement has been sounded to the people and has been set down as an endorsement arrived at by a poll of the teachers," said Mrs. Wayne Scheer, a teacher at Shimek Elementary School.

"This simply isn't so." Scheer said two ICEA building representatives had not received notices of the meeting. Jan Morse, president of the association, confirmed this, saying one notice had been mailed to a teacher who had been on her mailing list but had apparently left the district. The other notice, she said, apparently cannot be found.

According to Morse, the ICEA's Political Action Committee (PAC) recommended to representatives at the Aug. 29 meeting the endorsement of three candidates. Cazin, Skelley

Hall bail money, transfer may be finalized this week

By BETH SIMON
Asst. Features Editor

The $50,000 bond for James W. Hall may finally be reached this week, according to James P. Hayes, Hall's former attorney and presently in charge of Hall's bail fund drive.

Hayes said Sunday that he had met last week with "several eastern Iowa people" who, according to Hayes, were "very enthusiastic" about pledging the $90,000 in real estate value needed for Hall's bond.

These people met among themselves this weekend, Hayes said, apparently to determine the proportions each will volunteer. The group will meet with Hayes today to inform him of their decision.

Hayes declined to name the people considering the real estate pledge.

To obtain release on bond, Hall must meet a $5,000 cash requirement plus provide double the remainder — $90,000 — in a "free and clear" real estate pledge. According to Hayes, the bail fund is still between $1,000 to $1,500 short of the necessary cash amount.

If the property portion of the bond is met, then Hayes foresees "no problem in getting the rest." Hayes said that it is still possible for anyone to donate money to the bail fund at Iowa City's First National Bank.

While visiting with Hall Wednesday, Hayes informed him of the possibility of the bond figure being reached. Hayes also learned that Hall has been "reclassified" and will probably be transferred to the Men's State Reformatory at Anamosa this week.

Hall has been imprisoned in the Men's State Penitentiary at Fort Madison since July, where he is serving a 50-year sentence for the second-degree murder conviction in the 1973 slaying of UI coed Sarah Ann Ottens.

Hall's attorneys, William M. Tucker and Bruce L. Walker, have informed the Iowa Supreme Court of their intention to appeal the conviction.

According to Walker, he and Tucker are presently preparing an abstract of the record (the defense summation of pertinent trial testimony), which must be submitted to the Supreme Court by October 7. Walker said that they are "thinking about" filing a bond reduction appeal.

Hayes said that he is proceeding on the basis of the present bond figure.

The group which may be pledging the real estate portion of Hall's bond originally contacted Hayes last Monday. Hayes said the group told him that they had been following the Hall case closely and that they believed Hall had been "grievously wronged."

Married student housing available

By KRIS JENSEN
Staff Writer

The squeeze on student housing was partially alleviated over the weekend when two facilities for married student housing were made available.

William Maas, owner of the Old Capitol Inn Travelodge, is temporarily making rooms available for students at $7 a night, according to William Shanhouse, vice president of administrative services.

The university is also allowing married students without children to rent rooms at the Oakdale campus. This follows an announcement by Shanhouse Thursday that the rooms would be made available on a monthly rental basis.

Ten to 14 rooms in the motel, located on Highways 6 and 218 west in Coralville, will be rented for $7 a night plus tax, a motel official reports.

The reduced rate on the normally $16 to $18 rooms will not be used on football weekends. The first home game is Sept. 21.

Officials at the motel said only one or two children will be allowed.

The rooms will be available "as long as necessary," Jim

Bliss, a manager at the motel, said.

Bliss reported that one couple without children had checked into the motel Sunday at the reduced rate. He said he expected more students to take advantage of the rate today.

"I think this is a fine move on the part of our local citizenry," Shanhouse said of the offer, expressing hope that more permanent public housing would be made available at rates students can afford.

The decision to allow married students to live at Oakdale was made Thursday evening when UI officials decided to change a previously announced plan to move temporarily housed dormitory students to the Oakdale campus, Shanhouse said.

The administration then decided to place the temporarily housed students at Westlawn dormitory and available dormitory lounges. It was also decided to rent Oakdale rooms to students unable to find city housing.

Shanhouse said there have been "several inquiries which will probably be rentals" by students since Friday concerning the Oakdale rooms.

Information on the success of UI officials in placing temporarily housed students should be available today, Shanhouse said.

At Oakdale, double rooms will be rented for $45 a month. Single rooms will be $55 and $60 a month.

Shanhouse said the university will rent the Oakdale rooms for at least this semester.

Bible distribution project started on UI campus

A $3,500 Bible distribution project, sponsored partly by the American Bible Society, has been started by nine campus religious organizations, according to Jason Chen, campus minister of Geneva Forum.

The organizations which have so far distributed copies of "Wisdom for Modern Man" to 2,000 freshmen students during the summer orientation, last Friday presented a gold-bound volume of the Bible to UI Pres. Willard Boyd.

The nine organizations are Geneva Forum, Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship, St. Paul Lutheran Chapel, Campus Crusade for Christ, the Navigators, Icthus, Baptist Student Union, Chi Alpha and Good News Bible.

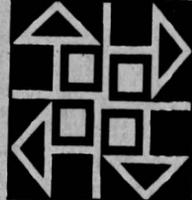

Chen said the distribution is aimed at stimulating students to become involved in "an in-depth study of the scriptures through various Bible discussion groups on campus. This would help students to evaluate the validity of christianity for themselves," he said.

Wednesday, there will be a mass distribution of 15,000 copies of the "Jesus" Book at nine points on campus and 500 copies of "Justice Now" will be available to law students, Chen said. Two hundred copies of the New Testament printed in Chinese, Arabic, Vietnamese and other languages will be distributed to foreign students.

Windup before elections 'doubtful'

Congress returns for full session

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress will be back in full session this week, for the first time since Aug. 22, but with little apparent chance of finishing its work before the November election.

Some partisan skirmishing has begun over the prospect of a post-election "lame duck" session. Democrats are pressing President Ford to come up with recommendations to fight the combination of inflation and economic sluggishness this year.

Some Republicans, including House Minority Leader John J. Rhodes of Arizona, say a late session is unnecessary. They say Ford should consider the recommendations being gathered at a series of meetings on the economy and present well thought out proposals to the new Congress in January.

Both chambers, meanwhile, have scheduled legislation of less than top priority for this week.

The Senate, which ended its recess Sept. 4, is working on an extensive bill to revamp the copyright law. It is to vote Monday on a key amendment that could give performers, as well as publishers and record producers, royalties on musical and similar properties.

It is scheduled to take up later the $33 billion Health, Education and Welfare appropriation and a military construction authorization bill that includes the controversial proposal for expanding the naval base at Diego Garcia in the Indian Ocean.

The House, returning Wednesday from its recess, has scheduled legislation giving bank regulatory agencies discretionary power to regulate interest rates on certain types of deposits.

The measure was inspired by plans to offer investors certificates of deposit with variable interest rates geared to the yield of Treasury notes. Critics say such investment opportunities would aggravate the drain of funds from lending institutions that finance home mortgages.

The House also is to take up legislation for extensive reorganization of the railroad retirement system.

A major task for both chambers is action on the nomination of Nelson A. Rockefeller to be Vice President. The Senate Rules Committee has set a meeting Wednesday to determine its procedure.

The House Judiciary Committee, which has jurisdiction over the nomination for its chamber, may also discuss plans. A committee source said it has been advised investigative reports on the nominee's financial and other affairs will not be completed for one month. Hearings ordinarily do not begin until such reports are in hand.

House Majority Leader Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., has said it will be impossible to complete action on the Rockefeller nomination this year without a post-election session.

Democratic leaders plan to recess Congress about Oct. 15 to give members time to campaign before the Nov. 5 election and to reconvene after the election for a clean-up session.

Culver, Stanley clash on spending

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP)—Iowa's two candidates for the U.S. Senate Sunday engaged in a heated debate centered mostly on campaign spending.

Rep. John Culver, D-Iowa, and Republican State Rep. David Stanley were quizzed by a three-member panel of newsmen during the annual Iowa Daily Press Association meeting.

The exchange began when both candidates were asked about financing.

Culver said his worth was $115,000 and several times added: "I'm not a rich man," and once added, "like my opponent."

The five-term congressman charged that Stanley was letting the campaign deteriorate into a barrage of charges and countercharges about campaign financing and disclosure.

"It is an insult to the people of this state for us to preoccupy ourselves with these issues when there are so many other issues that we should address ourselves to," Culver shot back at one point, and then added: "I think you should put your performance where your mouth is."

Culver denied that he has not made full financial disclosure, and in answer to a series of questions by Tom Miller, editor and publisher of the Cherokee

Daily Times, said there were no additions of property—from him or by his wife—to the disclosure he had made in the Congressional Record.

He said property evaluations ($265,000) in the statement were as of Jan. 1, that the property he holds in Cedar Rapids—one-tenth of a family inheritance—is valued at $8,000 and that he has some life insurance and would be glad to list its value.

"I own no stock, no bonds, I own no interest in any commercial activity whatsoever, because I think it is so important to avoid any suggestion of conflict," Culver said.

Stanley was quizzed about his financial disclosure, saying it was complete not only for this campaign but in his two previous campaigns—in 1968 against Sen. Harold Hughes and in the U.S. House race of 1970.

Stanley has revealed total expenditures for the two previous campaigns, but said earlier that the records had been destroyed.

"I had no idea after 1970 that I would run again," he said. "Thus the records weren't kept."

Stanley became upset when John McCormally, editor and publisher of the Burlington Hawk Eye, asked about funds Stanley's father had contributed to the 1968 and 1970 races.

"You are attacking a very big man, and make yourself very small when you do," Stanley said.

Stanley Consultants of Muscatine does some business with the state and federal government, Stanley said, but added that he has no financial interest in the firm.

Makarios plans Cypriot return

By The Associated Press

Archbishop Makarios, deposed leader of Cyprus, declared Sunday he will return to his homeland soon to reclaim the presidency taken from him on July 15 by the Greek officer-led Cyprus National Guard.

He claimed more support among Cypriots than before the coup.

After two days of talks in Geneva with Greek Foreign Minister George Mavros, Makarios said the Greek officers who engineered the coup against him would be replaced within a month. Only their presence, he told a news conference, was delaying his return.

Makarios' meetings with Mavros were his first official contacts with the new civilian Greek government, which took over in Athens after the Cyprus coup and a Turkish invasion of the island five days later forced Greece's military rulers to resign in disgrace.

Makarios said he agreed with Greece that there should be no negotiations with Turkey before it withdraws its Cyprus forces to the cease-fire line of Aug. 16 and permits about 200,000 Greek Cypriot refugees to return to their homes.

"We shall resist pressure, and we shall never accept terms at gunpoint," he said. He added that he would try on his return to get the Turks to withdraw its invasion force.

On the island, Turkish newsmen in contact with troops in the northwestern sector said the Turks were trying to drive national guardsmen from the village of Kato Pyrgos with small arms and mortars. They reported that the Turkish army was consolidating a 12-mile pocket beyond the cease-fire lines.

A spokesman for the United Nations peacekeeping force had no confirmation of the reports and instead said no shooting had been reported over a 24-hour period except for Turkish fire inside Nicosia on Saturday night.

and Robin Powell. A vote for an endorsement action carried, but a motion to endorse all three failed, Morse said. Votes then specifically on Skelley and Cazin carried, but the vote on Powell failed.

Morse said she would not reconsider the action after it was upheld at a meeting of the ICEA executive council last week and results of a private poll among teachers she has taken, which, she said, points out most teachers were aware of the pending endorsement vote.

Several rumors, some of them confirmed by high ranking school officials, have also clouded the issues in the school board race.

One unconfirmed rumor is that a current member of the school board, not up for re-election, has telephoned several parents in the school district and expressed unqualified support for Cazin and Skelley.

In another instance, according to one Iowa City school principal, some Cazin supporters reportedly have called parents in several school jurisdictions, and upon finding disenchantment with Iowa City's school administration have told the parents Cazin intends to fire School Supt. Merlin

Ludwig and three principals of "progressive" schools. Cazin flatly denied this report Sunday night and said, "I'm my own man. There are rumors going around presently which I firmly disassociate myself with."

Cazin said he has met with Ludwig and assured him his job is not in jeopardy.

"As long as he has honesty and integrity, he is the man for the job. There's no reason why I shouldn't keep him there."

"I also have no dissatisfaction with any of the principals in this school system."

Police beat

Details of an alleged child stealing incident which occurred Sept. 4 near the Mark Twain Elementary School were released Sunday by Iowa City Public Safety Director David Epstein.

According to Epstein, Robert Dunton, 119 S. Linn St., was apprehended by Johnson County Sheriff's deputies Sept. 5 at the Johnson County Jail. At the time of his arrest, Dunton was attempting to visit a friend who was an inmate at the jail and was spotted by Johnson County Sheriff's deputies who recognized Dunton from a picture and information furnished by the Iowa City Police Department.

Iowa City Juvenile officers had been investigating the incident and released photos and information they obtained to all local law enforcement agencies, Epstein said.

Dunton was alleged to have forcibly detained a young female juvenile on her way to school and have taken her to a garage in the vicinity of the Mark Twain School, Epstein said. The alleged victim succeeded in escaping from the garage through a ruse, the safety director reported. The child ran home and related the story to her grandmother who called the alleged victim's mother and who in turn contacted the Iowa City police.

Following his arrest, Dunton was taken to the Iowa City Jail and later transferred to the Johnson County Jail where he remained Sunday with bond set at $7,500, Epstein said.

The Quantity of Mercy

Yesterday morning, President Ford issued "a free, full, and absolute pardon" for any crimes former President Richard M. Nixon may have committed during the Watergate coverup.

Many will argue that the former President has suffered enough and that he should be pardoned.

This is hardly the case. The pursuit of justice and the truth demands that the investigation of the extent of the former President's criminal role in the Watergate coverup be fully explored.

President Ford's concern for the suffering of Mr. Nixon and his family is understandable. But is not the suffering of the other persons and their families convicted and serving time in federal correctional institutions just as bad and just as painful?

Nowhere in the Constitution does it state that a former President is more equal than his other fellow citizens before the law, or is free from criminal prosecution.

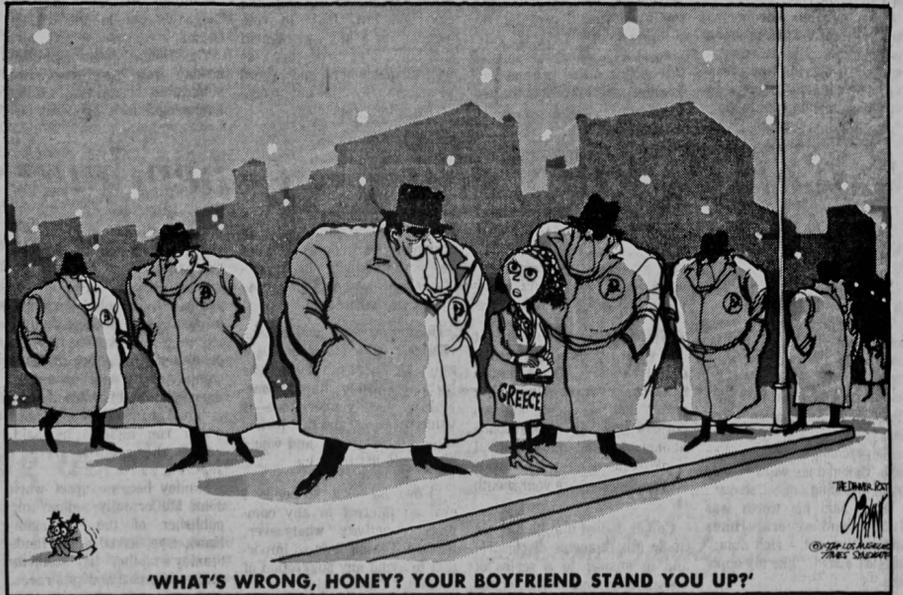

But the greatest mistake that President Ford made was to allow the former President the power to destroy the infamous White House tapes. The tapes are to be "formally donated to the American people on September 1, 1979." The tapes would then be destroyed at the time of Mr. Nixon's death or on September 1, 1984, which ever comes first.

The power that President Ford gave to Mr. Nixon, in particular the power to have the tapes destroyed in 1984, was totally uncalled for. If the tapes are given to the American people then they belong to the people and should be open to historians and the public.

In essence, what Gerald Ford has accomplished in one swift fall of "mercy" is to have reinforced the ugly American tradition of the dual system of justice: one for those with wealth and power and one for those without wealth or power.

In Memory of Dr. Braddock

Richard Braddock was the kind of teacher a University needs. He had the patience, the style, the sensitivity and seemingly universal compassion that marks a man and offers him to others.

His office was open, with a pot of coffee inside, and a rye, lanky welcome as he lay back in his chair and tapped his pipe. "Hi Dave," he would say. "What have you been up to?" And he was with you. Responsive, casually affirmative.

Any conference there was punctuated with an endless flow of anxious students in various states of academic and bureaucratic disarray. It was an extraordinary experience to watch as they shuffled in, hedging over some tremulous request they had to make of him—they came to him because, it seemed, he always said yes—and it seems that everyone left with what they needed, offered in a way that would challenge them as students, yet ease their worries.

The phone would ring, and as you listened to him discuss the magazine of literary works by prison inmates he was editing, you could study his bookshelves, laden with a frightening display of English style books.

He was an editor with a rare respect for the writer's attempt, very careful about where he laid his pencil. Misplaced commas, misspelled words, I doubt he ever missed one. He was devoted to the language and determined to aid his students in using it to their best advantage. His editorial marks were guiding lights, not imperial edicts.

He believed that the best way to learn to write is to write. And he practiced that truism at every opportunity. When you had an idea that no one else would listen to, a friend would say "Go see Braddock." There was an open ear, a friendly set of to-the-point questions; then you left with the clear concept of a project, and three hours of credit.

His is not an imaginary eulogy one conjures in sentimentality. It is a clear memory of a man whose course I was waiting to take when he returned from Australia. In the tradition of wisdom, he taught by example; a language, a way to communicate, a way to live.

Amnesty

TO THE EDITOR:

John S. Smith's letter to President Ford (DI, August 26)—on behalf of the Quad-City Center for the Study of Peace and Non-Violence—requires special attention both because of its sincere opinion on the amnesty issue, and because of the considerable naivete which this attitude reveals.

Speaking for his group, Mr. Smith seems unaware that his opinion is only one of many; this must be so because he says that they "understand amnesty as forgetting, not forgiving." My question is this: If this is the basis upon which amnesty is to be achieved how are the members of a society to go about forgetting deep commitments to personal biases and memories of social discord, especially on the part of those who took issue with the stance of the war resisters? It is sheer nonsense to expect that this will happen in the near future, and it is an elitist sympathy which proposes unconditional amnesty in the face of considerable public opinion to the contrary.

Let us not divide the nation further over the hoary issue of Vietnam. The law clearly states that failure to report for induction and desertion from the armed forces are crimes for which the offenders are accountable just as Richard Nixon must be held accountable for any crimes which he might be determined to have committed. The law is the law; it may not always be justice, but it is all we have. If we shove the law aside for a moment and let either Nixon or the war resisters off the hook, then we will have cheapened the only institution upon which the disparate forces of this nation can and must agree.

Of course, there are such things as bad laws, and those of us who are now so concerned with the amnesty issue might better have spent our time in the past lobbying against an obnoxious, compulsory military service during a time of undeclared, and probably illegal, warfare. The fact remains, however, that the laws stood and were obeyed by many thousands of people, many of whom lost their lives or returned home mentally or physically disabled. Can we really expect these people and their families to forget? Empathizing with the family that has lost one of its members or with the veteran who has returned crippled or with few hopes for decent employment, is there anything at all convincing about the argument that the war resisters have suffered enough by their exile and should be allowed to return home without any requirement for restitution? This could be a bitter pill for many to swallow, and if we were to retroactively change or avoid the laws surrounding the Vietnam situation we could find ourselves with a conflict that few of us are prepared to cope with.

Contrary to Mr. Smith's ideal, forgiveness, not forgetting, is probably the best we can hope for. President Ford has proposed a means for reconciling, or at least softening, the conflicts over diverse opinion in this matter which is both compatible with the law and which urges a recognition of the mediating circumstances under which the law can afford to be lenient.

The lesson for all of us here is that we allowed a pointless and immoral war to drag on for many years and now that the shock-waves and after-effects are plaguing us—and will for some time to come—there are no simple or convenient ways to deal with these problems.

Sorority Reaction to DI Story on Greek Life

Ms. Titone's article about Rush Week and sorority living has compelled me to present the other side.

First, defining a sorority as "a group of women who live and socialize together" seems unclear and unjust to me—a member of a sorority. To those of us who have chosen Greek life, a sorority or fraternity possesses a human growing experience—to develop

Other activities of high importance to the houses are cultural, those that stress attainment of academic excellence and many more.

Functions of Greek life may seem ridiculous and unimportant to outsiders. But, we have intramural teams and go sailing and biking—surprisingly, just like most other people.

Perhaps the hesitance of the sorority house "visited" and the Panhellenic officers was the hear of exactly the type of "reporting" that took place.

Fourteen houses on the UI campus conducted 28 hours of rush parties as a means of membership selection. Ms. Titone attended one party at one house and apparently became the all-knowing authority on sororities.

Granted, small talk is prevalent. But more pertinent conversations emerge as girls get to know one another. But, isn't that a common way of creating friendships?

And then there is the "casual affluence" Ms. Titone refers to in regard to the houses. The young women who call a sorority house "home" nine months out of the year are proud, enjoy entertaining and work hard to maintain them. It is too bad some of the dormitory lounges are not treated with the same respect.

I am glad that the girls at the house Ms. Titone visited were cordial. I would hope for similar treatment had one of these girls entered Ms. Titone's residence, uninvited, to a party. Somehow, it would seem like the polite thing to do.

Ms. Titone proved that the Greek lifestyle does not go unobserved. We do not wish to be observed as a frog in biology lab—but regarded as people who deserve the same respect and consideration as the next person.

In consideration of the claim that girls were "terrified bunnies" and the reluctance of the "Gestapo" to give information, stories do not match. The rush committee says they gave Ms. Titone a schedule and offered an interview.

She wonders, "what were they afraid of?"—exactly what we got. Unsupported and unfair criticism was given to a way of life Ms. Titone chose to inadequately research and report.

Next, it's the possibility of guilt we possess over the affluence of sorority life. If it is an implication that sororities are elitist organizations of the idle rich, it is simply untrue. Many sorority women are on financial assistance and have jobs.

She concludes by saying something about the ill will that social exclusivity breeds. To a degree, almost all people are exclusive in friendship selection and in choosing someone to live with.

I will make two points in concluding. First, Ms. Titone had better take some basic journalism courses dealing with investigative, objective, fair and unbiased presentation of news—essential to a newspaper reporter.

And, to the editorial staff of the Daily Iowan, if you allow such "reporting" to continue, without properly labeling it as "editorial," "analysis" or "comment," you are only weakening your respectability and credibility and disgrace the profession you claim—a profession I have chosen to follow. It is discouraging and disappointing.

"The young woman of the 70's lacks discretion," writes Ms. Phitt in her latest etiquette book, FEMINIST FINESSE. "Her instincts are trustworthy; but indeed, these alone will place her often in a disadvantageous position in society and among those whose esteem, and hiring policies, she depends on." Strong words, those.

But indeed, FEMINIST FINESSE is an etiquette book that pulls no punches and, on the premise that it holds the key to the moral and mannered training of the age's so-called Angry Young Women, and since this space is not for book reviews but rather for didacticism, I offer merely two representative passages—the whole book can be found at any of the better stores in town.

The Feminist Works As A-Waitress: Proper Ways To Educate The Inebriated Traveling Salesman: Place-settings And Subversion.

"In her role of Hostess, the young waitress represents The Woman at her highest, in the tradition of Madame de Sevigne, Lucretia Borgia, and Altman's Mrs. Miller. Her roles encompass the diplomat, the mistress, the chore girl, and she must be ever vigilant to employ tact, pleasantry, and that graceful acquiescence for the generous tip required by the custom of—o whimsical phrase!—"starvation wages," that mark of her countrymen's respect.

"In the event of serving the inebriated traveling salesman, he of the wandering hands, the loud voice, the many martinis and the impatient stomach, coffee should be poured either down the back of the neck or directly onto the lap, but never onto exposed skin, since this could instigate a legal suit and shows a lack of moderation in the waitress.

"The cup should be held in the left hand, leaving the right hand free to remove the customer's hands, right or left, from wherever they happen to land prior to the social spill. The little finger should be crooked during the spill, but not after the customer's scream.

"If the waitress is confronted with the pompous businessman while serving lunch, he of the critical eye, the small tip, and the tendency to call the manager, she must exercise that native wit of her kind.

"A sophisticated gesture is to serve all food in dishes too small, piled vertically, causing the customer to spill lettuce, potatoes au gratin, indeed, his entire repast onto the tablecloth while trying to sell insurance or his latest novel.

"If the restaurant is the fashionable sort with wooden tables and art nouveau posters on the wall, a polite practice is the greasing of all plates, which causes them to slip off the table into the most eccentric of locales, creating much merriment among the waitresses and refined customers at the establishment.

The Feminist Reacts To Rape: Proper Introductions With Rapist; The Advisable Manner Of Violence; Necessity Of Taste And Discretion Throughout.

"No longer is it considered sophisticated, nor even polite, to murder someone attempting to rape you. Certainly in some circles the practice was common and highly praised, perhaps two years ago, and one can sympathize with the young woman's predilection for departing from an attempted rape alive and with aplomb.

"But we note with dismay the women subsequently tried, and incarcerated in institutions of penal reform, and forgotten by refined society.

"Society, sadly, found the fashion excessive, and although murder is an eminently common-sensical reaction to an attempted rape, and common-sense the basis of any true sense of taste, we find it far more common-sensical to stay out of the fore-mentioned institutions.

"A simple and graceful maiming, either permanent or painfully temporary, has become the mode in the great towns, we hear. Heavens, ladies, here is the place to exercise those accomplishments our mothers taught us in our girlhood, that is, those golden afternoons spent in judo, karate, and taekwon do.

"Although the rapist may not introduce himself to you, it absolutely is your social obligation to introduce him to all within hearing. Conduct the introductions fortissimo—at the top of your lungs.

After the gentleman has been incapacitated, you must keep introducing him to society—to other feminists, judges, juries, and so on.

"Remember always that it isn't what one does, but whom one knows, that determines one's social standing—or the rapist's.

"A young woman friend of mine, of the most exquisite behavior, once told me, 'Feminist-Marxist analysis in action often looks a lot like noblesse oblige.' So do remember, whether from your analysis or your noblesse oblige, that rape laws are often racist, and consistently sexist, the antiquated ill-breeding sometimes found in society.

"Courtesy requires the young woman to change the laws while practising her neck-chops and knee-to-the-groins. I remember my own mama's words—"Etiquette, Phitt," she would tell me, "never lacks its moral ambiguity."

Reaction of Hall committee to Bail Article

TO THE EDITOR:

The Daily Iowan's recent article concerning the Committee to Free James Hall constitutes an attack on the right against National oppression, which the Committee to Free James Hall is engaged in. We find two major faults with the article.

First, the article hardly mentions, if at all, what the Committee did over the summer. If the DI really wanted to print an accurate story in respect to the struggle to free James Hall, it should have told students about the activities which had gone on during the three months while they were away.

Secondly, the article attempted to imply that money raised by the Committee was being ripped off by individuals in the Committee. This very plainly is an outright lie.

The best reply to the DI's attack, we feel there are several points that need to be made clear. First, the Committee to Free James Hall is made up of many people, including several members of the Revolutionary Student Brigade and members of the Black Student Union. The Committee itself is a democratic organization, with all members giving time and effort to fight the injustices surrounding the James Hall conviction. We also see this struggle as part of the large fight against National Oppression which comes down on 3rd World people all over this country.

Second, the James Hall benefits themselves were sponsored by and organized by the Committee, in support of James Hall and in an effort to publicize his situation.

Third, as for the $246.80 raised at these benefits, the Committee as a whole elected to use $46.80 of that money to continue the work of freeing James Hall and the fight against National Oppression. We clearly understand the need to be self-supportive: Obviously, the same system which convicted James Hall is not going to support the fight to free James Hall.

The remaining money ($200.00) is to go to James Hall's bail fund. There has been confusion as to the possibility of bail money being used for lawyer's fees should the entire bail not be reached. The Committee to Free James Hall intended that this money, as well as any raised in the future, be used strictly for James Hall—not for a lawyer.

The money at this time is deposited in the Committee to Free James Hall savings account. The money will be put in the bail fund as soon as we are certain that it will be used only for that purpose.

As for the larger implication of the DI article we ask: objectively, whose interests have been served in this instance? We maintain that the DI has placed itself clearly in opposition to the fight for justice for Hall and the struggle against national oppression. We believe that students have a right to hear the truth about the struggle that was carried on during much of the summer. We therefore demand equal space on the front page of The Daily Iowan to report on and explain the actions which took place this summer around the Hall conviction.

We believe that if the DI refuses to print an accurate story about the activity to free James Hall it will seriously call into question the genuine desire of the DI to print the truth.

Committee to Free James Hall

Murphy's Reaction to Merit Article

TO THE EDITOR:

I should like the opportunity to make some very important corrections to The Daily Iowan's article of Sept. 4 concerning my petition for a public hearing on the 1974-75 Pay Plan and two

Regents' Merit System Rules:

1. I did not send a letter to the Attorney General; I submitted 3 copies of a petition.

2. The date of a petition is the date that petition is filed (received) by the person with whom it is to be filed, since the attorney general had not yet received my petition when I sent it by certified mail I couldn't very well put a date on it.

3. I do not ask as stated in the article for rescission of a provision of the new pay plan that grants a 7½ per cent increase to the red circled employees for 1974-75 and a 5 per cent increase for those employees in 1975-76. I do ask for rescission of two rules: a) a portion of Rule 3.39 (19A) which allows the Regents to pay some employees in a class salaries which are not available to others in that class, and b) a rule which gives two-thirds of the 1975-76 pay increase, and one-third of the 1976-77 pay increase to certain employees. The amount of these pay increases has not yet been determined.

4. In my petition I make a new charge that the 1974-75 pay plan is void because a public hearing was not held by the Iowa Merit Employment Commission as required in chapter 19A of the code of Iowa. If I were a DI reporter I would first have gone over to the Law Library and read the Iowa attorney general's opinion of July 15, 1974 and would at this time be in Des Moines asking Mr. Keating of the Merit Commission why a public hearing was not held when the attorney general's opinion actually places emphasis on the fact that it must be held by the Commission.

5. Considering the fact that my petition makes charges that in adopting their rules and the 1973 and 1974 pay plans the Board of Regents has ignored: a) the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the U.S.; b) two sections directly and one indirectly of the Iowa Constitution (Article I, section 6; Article III, section 1 concerning the separation of powers; and article III, section 30); c) at least three provisions of Chapter 19A under which the Rules and Pay Plan are supposed to be adopted, and two opinions of the Iowa Attorney General interpreting those sections (July 15, 1974 and Nov. 14, 1974) I should think the DI could do a much better job of informing very interested employees of the nature of those charges.

6. I also make a very constructive suggestion in the petition concerning how the Board of Regents can constitutionally give pay raises without paying anyone a salary greater than that available to other employees in their classification.

7. If the DI does not promptly print this letter together with an admission of error on the points involved, Jim Fleming and Chuck Hawkins will get a fast lesson in how lawsuits are filed and served; freedom of the press does not give you the license to engage in such gross editorializing as occurred in the article of Sept. 4, 1974.

Kenneth Murphy

EDITOR'S NOTE—The Daily Iowan respects Murphy's comments. However, we stand by our original story.

Participles Which Dangle

TO THE EDITOR:

How in the world did Bill Roerman become Associate News Editor of the DI? "Traffic safety is an easy, if overworked subject to write about, right?" Wrong! Apparently it isn't very easy for Mr. Roerman. In reading his Transcriptions column of Tuesday, Sept. 3, "The Road to Ruins," I was appalled by the number of errors in it.

Discounting those errors conceivably attributable to type-setting, I discovered no less than three dangling participles and the use of the adjective "good" instead of the adverb "well." These are fairly common mistakes, but I would think that a journalist would want to be more careful.

Mr. Roerman's most glaring error was his use of "bonified" for "bona fide." When one does not know how to spell a word, he should either look it up or choose another with which he is more familiar.

School Board Election

TO THE EDITOR:

On August 29, a meeting was called by the Iowa City Education Association concerning the Sept. 10 school Board Election and what the ICEA position would be regarding that election. Copies of responses made by board candidates to a series of questions developed by the Political Action Committee were distributed to the various representatives of the elementary and secondary schools. The question of endorsement arose and these representatives decided not to endorse the PAC recommendations, but instead voted by separate ballots to endorse John Cozin and Ruth Skelley.

The next day an article appeared in the Press-Citizen with the headlines, "John Cozin, Ruth Skelley Endorsed by Educators." To me this article could easily be misconstrued by the public to indicate that all of the Iowa City educators supported these two candidates. This is simply not the case.

Prior to the ICEA meeting of August 29, less than 10 per cent of the teachers in Iowa City had an opportunity to review the PAC questionnaire. Those that did were the building representatives and their first glimpse of those answers was at that meeting. Yet this group felt that it had the jurisdiction to make a decision of this magnitude with no input from the over 500 other Iowa City teachers. This is an injustice. To further shadow this vote, two schools comprising over 30 teachers were not represented because their representatives were not notified and therefore not in attendance.

Thus the endorsement by the ICEA, although passed as a motion, was the result of the building representatives vote. It should not however be interpreted as a unanimous endorsement by the members of ICEA.

Impounded Pets

Dear Survival Line:

In the past eight months I have paid $50 to the city animal shelter in order to retrieve my impounded dog. Why does the shelter charge $10 the first evening, and $3 each additional evening, to care for imprisoned pets?

Do the animals receive $10 worth of food, care and attention? Where do the revenues collected from the owners go?—BS

Newshound Jim Delaney was sent to investigate this problem, and he compiled the following report:

The $10 impoundment fee was levied this year by the city council. According to the city treasurer the money goes into a general fund for the Public Safety Program. While in the custody of the city the pets are treated to one of the best and most expensive dog foods on the market.

The animal shelter is staffed by four women, three of whom are full-time employees. Their official titles are "animal control officers," and they are delegated some police powers, including the power of citation, in order to fulfill their duties.

Additional city requirements concerning pets include mandatory licensing and rabies shots, a procedure that itself involves a $10 fee. The program resulted in eliminating the rabies problem in Iowa City, there being no reported cases of rabid pets in the city in the past year.

Every Iowa City resident who owns a pet should pick up a free copy of Your Pet at the Civic Center. Also, be aware of the fact that, since Sept. 1, the city has been strictly enforcing the leash law requirements in the downtown area.

Pet Peeve

At the risk of instantaneously making a bevy of enemies, Survival Line is compelled to point out that if we all were to reduce the number of pets we keep, we would achieve two humanitarian goals.

First, according to Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz and common sense, a 50 per cent reduction in this nation's dog and cat population would release more grain and help alleviate the world food shortage. The beef, chicken livers, tuna and other dishes served to our pets constitute a diet more nutritious than that of persons in famine-stricken areas of our world.

Second, irresponsible breeding of pets by their owners means that each year there are millions of animals—unable to find another home—intentionally destroyed. In 1972 an estimated 13.5 million animals were put to sleep.

Do you know how many cats and dogs were born yesterday? About 130,000. More than 5,000 cats and dogs alone are born each hour, while fewer than 400 humans are born to take care of them. By the mid-1980's the dog and cat population may rise to 200,000 million. These are dismaying figures.

Last week at the World Population Conference the U.S. patronizingly advised developing nations to take actions to curb their populations and thus relieve some of the pressure on world food production needs. Perhaps if our already developed nation were to cut back on the outrageous number of pets in our possession, our brothers and sisters living in nations just beginning to develop would have more grain available to feed the larger numbers of people they feel are necessary to industrialize their nations and raise their standard of living.

When the choice comes down to people or pets, there really isn't any choice at all.

Do you have a complaint? Need some information? Then give Survival Line a try. We attempt to resolve your consumer problems. Write to us in care of The Daily Iowan, 201 Communications Center, Iowa City, Iowa, 52242.

'Newspapers can relate'

DI publisher discusses new role

By LINDA SCHUPPENER
Staff Writer

For most people the title "publisher" conjures up images of a William Randolph Hearst executive-type. Michael Stricklin, is a Ph.D. student in communications at the UI and he sees his role as publisher of a university newspaper as uniquely different from that of the publisher of a commercial newspaper.

According to Stricklin, "The college is unique in American society; I mean by that, that here we have two of our traditional sacred cows: free inquiry and free speech. The only place these two great ideas cross is in the college press."

In a commercial newspaper, he pointed out, the publisher is a proprietor in an employer-employee relationship with the editor. But in a college newspaper the responsibilities are different. The publisher and Student Publications, Inc. (SPI) Board are legally responsible for the content of the paper, but the authority rests with the editor. In fact, he said, "to me it is quite clear that our responsibility is to protect the freedom of the paper."

As the publisher of the DI Stricklin, is the executive agent for SPI Board. "They make policy and I carry it out," he said. Essentially his duties center on business office records, financial reports, negotiating contracts, ordering supplies and hiring personnel, except for editorial personnel. And he believes that he should give his advice only when it's asked for.

One of the most important questions a newspaper must answer, Stricklin believes, is how the paper is planned. "How do we find out what the reader wants and needs to know." A newspaper, he pointed out, is "not a monolithic thing like a gas and electric company, but a personal thing that appears on the doorstep every morning. It can relate on a one-to-one basis."

"It's an awesome responsibility," he said. "Whenever you meet those wants and needs it's a good—tremendously good—feeling. If the readers want to know about pinocle, we ought to tell them—that's not all we ought to tell them, but we should tell them about it."

When asked what he thought the increase in journalism students could be attributed to, he commented that people want to express themselves and support themselves while doing it.

"They want to have some sort of professional level way of telling a lot of people something new that they learned." In the newspaper business, he said, "we share Nureyev's statement: 'I get paid for having fun, even though it's hard work.'"

Stricklin also had some things to say about the DI. "It's a good system here. I'm pleased with the quality. I don't want to go into a long Chamber of Commerce thing, but there are good people here." He added that running a newspaper was a complicated business, and that the DI was efficient. "And that's not common for college newspapers." Although he did add that he would like to see more in-depth work on the housing shortage.

Stricklin was born in Texas and attended Baylor University for his undergraduate work. He received his Master's degree from the University of California at Berkeley where he was in charge of a project to put out the Saturday edition of the San Francisco Examiner. He worked for three Texas newspapers: The Amarillo-Globe News, The Corpus Christi Caller Times, and the San Angelo Standard Times. He also taught newspaper production, reporting, editing and production management at Baylor University.

Oh no Not again! Whew! He made it

By JOHN BOWIE

"How do you spell that?"

"B-A-K-S-H-I."

"B-A-K..."

"S-H-I."

"Right. He has a reservation on the flight from Los Angeles."

"Does that mean he's on it?"

"No way to tell. You'll just have to wait til the plane lands."

The airport at Cedar Rapids must be a unique experience for anyone who has, just a few hours before, boarded a jet in Los Angeles. Families seem to qualify as crowds at Cedar Rapids. Each of the main desks—Ozark and United—boasts a small clot of employees who smile more because they want than have to. The security men have thick belts full of huge bullets they don't seem to know what to do with. In the cafeteria, a few people sit over coffee, watching through the windows as a short man in shirtsleeves walks out across the runway and then back, doing nothing. We're waiting for Ralph Bakshi.

One 727 touches down, then another. As the passenger ramps at the back of each open up and the people, blinking in the sunlight, stumble out with their baggage, we wait for one to stumble out looking like Ralph Bakshi.

"He's in first class. They get out last."

The last of the first-class passengers—an old woman who needs some help on the ramp—is away from the plane by now, walking with a man on each arm toward the terminal. It's five o'clock. Bakshi is slated to appear at the premiere of his latest movie, Coonskin, at 8:30. He has the movie with him.

"Maybe he got off in Des Moines. Did the plane stop in Des Moines?"

There's something of a minor rush for the pay phones, accompanied by a few ill-timed jokes about Orson Welles. Bakshi's home in Los Angeles is called. And his agent. And his studio. And, again, his home. We're standing around the Cedar Rapids Airport, looking at no one and nothing in particular, feeling vaguely uncomfortable. It's hard to keep your hopes up in the Cedar Rapids Airport: five minutes of searching faces, and you realize you're searching the same faces over and over again. Across from us, standing near the life-insurance machines and checking the same faces we're checking, Ralph Bakshi looks a little weary, with his cans of film and his overnight bag.

"We thought maybe you got off in Des Moines."

"I wanted to. The stewardesses had me bombed by then."

Someone calls him back to the pay phone. By this time most everyone's smiling again, lighting cigarettes with steady hands, eying the cans that hold Coonskin with the sort of gaze usually employed by security guards; Refocus 75 will have its first event. Bakshi returns from the phone, laughing a little himself, more on edge than he needs to be but, probably, less than he deserves to. "Get me out of here," he says. Someone does.

DEAD OR ALIVE?

We all have those days when we feel more dead than alive; but did you know that you could really be dead and still retain consciousness? You yourself may be one of these "living dead" persons and never have had this fact exposed to you.

How long will you live on this earth? Seventy years, eighty, ninety? Whatever it is, how does it look to you in comparison with all the years this earth existed before you came, and the thought of time without end continuing after you are gone? Wouldn't you kick yourself for all kinds of a fool if you woke up after your physical life was over and found that you had wasted your brief span on earth and had nothing but conscious death to look forward to forever?

There are two kinds of death: physical, which involves separation of the soul from the body, and spiritual, which is the separation of man's spirit from God's. When the first man and woman turned their backs on God, they brought sin and death into the world for themselves and all who should come after them. Man is born estranged from his Maker, with an inherently sinful nature. Little babies are born completely selfish and uncivilized creatures, who have to be corrected and trained by their parents for many years.

God does not condemn any man to eternal separation from Himself; man condemns himself when he rejects the provision God has made to reclaim him from death through the process of rebirth. Briefly this is how God's Word tells us this is made possible: When a man is convicted of a desperate lack in his life and a sense of his own worthlessness, he may go to God and ask for reconciliation. But on what grounds? This is the crux of the whole matter. God pronounced the sentence of death upon sinners; but because He loves us, He took human form and nature upon Himself, became a man in the person of Jesus Christ, and paid the penalty of our sins by dying on the cross. Now come to Me, He says, confessing your sin and your willingness to accept Christ as your Saviour, and I will not only forgive you, but I will give you a new heart, a new nature, and you will be born into the family of God. A drowning man who selfishly and uncivilizedly refuses to grasp the rope thrown from shore dies through his own fault. God throws you a strong and sure lifeline. Grasp it and live.

"But," you say, "aren't all men man to eternal separation from already God's children?"

Demo barbeque attracts over 600 'to rub elbows'

By BILL ROEMERMAN
Assoc. News Editor

Eager young collegiates, radicals left over from the 1960s, and long time party hacks all showed up at the Iowa City Izaak Walton League Shelter turnout for this year's Democratic Party Barbeque.

At $3.50 a head, the party faithful could get a generous helping of dry over-cooked chicken, watermelon, lemonade or beer, and a chance to rub elbows with Iowa's Democratic biggies.

First to speak to the crowd, which grew to over 600 before the evening was over, was Congressman John Culver, who hopes to win the U.S. Senate seat of Harold Hughes.

While Culver did a fine job of raking his opponent, David Stanley, over the coals, he didn't seem to understand that most of the people at the barbeque would probably vote for him anyway, and made only a weak pitch for volunteer help and campaign donations.

As he was being hustled off the platform to catch a plane for another engagement, he was cornered by an irate man with a can of beer in his hand, who wanted to know what Culver intended to do for farmers.

Obviously anxious to catch his plane, Culver hurriedly pointed to his pro-farm voting record in Congress, as a staffer impatiently reminded the man that the congressman had a plane to catch.

"Oh, well I can see that you don't have time to talk to me," the man with the beer said sarcastically.

"I always have time to talk to the people," the candidate protested.

"But right now he has to catch a plane," the staffer interrupted, and whisked Culver away.

That incident probably constituted the most heated political debate of the barbeque. Such events aren't meant to arouse debate. They are intended to raise funds, party identification, and to attract volunteer labor.

Soon after the departure of Culver, Congressman Edward Mezvinsky, who was scheduled to speak, chose instead to mingle with the crowd and be the regular guy.

Shaking hands, cheerfully accepting hugs from middle-aged women, Mezvinsky seemed to be in his element.

The departure of Culver, and Mezvinsky's decision not to make a speech, left the platform empty for a long time.

Occasionally State Sen. Minnette Doderer (D-Iowa City) would announce the arrival of local political notables, and remind people not to leave because gubernatorial candidate James Schaben was scheduled to arrive at "any time."

Finally a speech was given by Tom Miller, who will face Atty. Gen. Richard Turner in November.

The crowd, however, seemed more interested in the beer keg, and the volleyball game started by State Rep. William Hargrave.

Finally Schaben arrived. Being the party's candidate for the top office in the state he was received like royalty.

From the time he stepped out of the car he was surrounded by party members. By the time he made it out of the parking, he had shaken at least a dozen hands and some one had given him a beer.

People listened when Schaben spoke—but were they impressed? It is impossible to say now. The answer will come in terms of donations, and later in terms of votes.

America-bound jetliner crashes off Greek coast

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — A Trans World Airlines jetliner bound for the United States with 88 persons aboard crashed Sunday in the stormy Ionian Sea off Greece, and the Greek Civil Aviation Authority said there appeared to be no survivors.

TWA said the Boeing 707 fell from an overcast sky after the pilot reported an engine failed.

The flight, number 841, originated in Tel Aviv, stopped in Athens and was scheduled to make stops in Rome, New York and Los Angeles.

The airline's Tel Aviv office said 49 passengers boarded the plane there for Rome and the United States. They included 17 Americans, including a baby, 13 Japanese, four Italians, four French, three Indians, two Iranians, two Israelis, two Ceylonese, an Australian and a Canadian. The nationalities of the 30 other passengers and the nine crew members were not immediately known.

Teams need more people

By KRIS CLARK
Asst. Sports Editor

The women's fall intercollegiate athletic teams are still looking for players. The initial response to the fall program, said Christine Grant, athletic director for women's sports, was very good but many players have dropped out because of scheduling conflicts, shortage of time or lack of interest.

The volleyball and field hockey teams are most in need of players. Grant said, and there is a possibility that some of the sports may be dropped if interest doesn't rise.

Players interested in joining the fall sports program; field hockey, volleyball, tennis and golf, on any skill level, are still welcome. Those interested should report for field hockey at the Madison Street field at 4:30, for volleyball in the North Gym of the Field House at 3:10, for tennis at 4:30 on the Library courts and for golf at 3:30 on the Finkbine golf course. Practices are held Monday through Thursday and most games are played on Saturdays.

Anyone interested but having conflicts should check with Grant in her office in the Women's gym.

Lou gets two; needs one more

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis' irrepressible Lou Brock stole two bases Sunday to pull within one of the major league record for stolen bases in one season, but Wayne Garrett's three-run homer keyed a four-run eighth inning rally that carried the New York Mets to a 5-3 victory over the Cardinals.

The loss snapped a six-game losing streak for St. Louis, and, coupled with the Pittsburgh Pirates' 8-2 victory over Montreal, dropped the second-place Cards 2½ games behind Pittsburgh in the National League East.

Brock stole second base in the first and eighth innings, boosting his season total to 103—just one short of the major league record of 104 set by Maury Wills in 1962. The thefts boosted Brock's career total to 738, equalling the National League record held by Max Carey of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Fezzler wins Open crown

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Young Forrest Fezzler, always a bridesmaid but never a winner until Sunday, captured the $100,000 Southern Open Golf Tournament with a scorching final round, five-under-par 65 for a 72-hole total of 271.

Fezzler won the $20,000 first prize by one stroke over J. C. Snead and Bruce Crampton. Snead shot a 67 while Crampton blasted out a 65 for 272 totals. Each earned $9,250. Fezzler, 24, one shot behind Snead, Tommy Aaron and Ben Crenshaw entering Sunday's final round over the 6,791-yard, par 70 Green Island Country Club course, blasted out six birdies over his first 10 holes for his first triumph after five second place finishes in his three years on the tour.

Irish begin title defense

ATLANTA (AP) — Defending national champion Notre Dame, shaken by the loss of star athletes to injury and suspension from school, collides with lightly regarded Georgia Tech in a nationally televised college football game Monday night.

The Fighting Irish ranked third in The Associated Press preseason poll, will carry an 11-game winning streak into the 9:05 EDT kickoff on the artificial surface of Georgia Tech's Grant Field.

Despite the loss of seven starters since last spring, Notre Dame is heavily favored to down Tech, which will be playing its first game under Pepper Rodgers, a flamboyant coach who left UCLA to return to his alma mater.

The American Broadcasting Co. elected to place a college game on the front end of its highly successful Monday night telecasts of National Football League games. It is believed to be the first telecast of a regular season collegiate battle on Monday night, although Monday night bowl games have been televised.

Kniewel's rocket falters in canyon jump

TWIN FALLS, Idaho (AP) — Evel Kniewel's much-heralded attempt to rocket across the Snake River Canyon failed when a parachute deployed too early and sent him plunging into the bottom of the canyon Sunday. He was quickly rescued from his Sky-Cycle at the bottom of the 600-foot deep chasm.

A spokesman for the promoters of the stunt, which will net Kniewel millions despite his failure, said the motorcycle jumper from Butte, Mont., suffered "possible internal injuries."

Kniewel himself, his face bloody from cuts he received when his red, white and blue Sky-Cycle crashed against the canyon wall, said, "I'm glad to be back in one piece, believe me."

Loud applause from the estimated 20,000 spectators — a far smaller crowd than had been predicted — greeted Kniewel when he returned to the launch site from the bottom of the canyon. The daredevil stuntman embraced his father.

Kniewel had been taken from the Sky-Cycle, placed in a rescue boat on the river which runs through the canyon, and then flown by helicopter back to the top of the canyon, which is almost a quarter of a mile across.

Kniewel would not rule out the possibility of another attempt to clear the canyon. "I don't know what I am going to do," he said. "I gave it my best."

Promoters of the leap, probably the most publicized in history, had given Kniewel a check for $6 million weeks in advance of the jump and promised him 60 per cent of the profit from closed-circuit television showings and related deals. His take was unaffected by his failure.

The designer of the red, white and blue Sky-Cycle, engineer Robert Truax, said the fault rested with a malfunction in the vehicle's parachute system, and he took the responsibility for the failure.

"It was bad judgment on my part," Truax said. "We should have delayed the jump one more day for another static (in place) firing test."

Donald Branker, a spokesman for the promoters, said, however, that the fault was not Truax', but rather was a combination of high winds and higher-than-expected force against Kniewel created by the some 5,000-pound thrust.

It appeared that the vehicle's two-parachute system had deployed even before it cleared the 108-foot launch rail. Branker said he believed that the thrust had forced the parachute lever from Kniewel's hands as the vehicle soared upward.

Branker added that he believed the failure of the attempt answered skeptics who claimed the stunt was a fraud and that two earlier test firings had been dumped deliberately into the canyon.

The parachute malfunction, he said, was similar to the one that had occurred during a test launch two weeks ago.

After being carried by helicopter back up to the south side of the canyon, Kniewel went to the top of the launch ramp, met with the ground crew and waved to the crowd, which by then had already begun to disperse.

In the hours before the jump, a number of the youthful crowd of curious onlookers sought to force their way through the fence separating them from the dusty launch area. But they calmed down with the appearance of the jaunty Kniewel and, less than an hour after the abortive jump, the area showed signs of returning to the cow pasture it had been just weeks before.

Aussies meet U.S.

Evert defeated, Connors in finals

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Jimmy Connors made it Sunday but not his bride-to-be Chris Evert, and so it is Australia against the United States for both the men's and women's singles titles in the U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

Connors, a court ruffian in a Prince Valiant haircut, slashed out a 7-6, 7-6, 6-4 victory over Roscoe Tanner of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., and set up an instant replay of his Wimbledon final against 39-year-old Ken Rosewall of Australia.

The seemingly ageless Rosewall pierced defending champion John Newcombe's blunderbuss attack with rapier-like returns and scored a 6-7, 6-4, 7-6, 6-3 upset.

Connors played with such ferocity that the sellout gallery of 15,402 must have imagined that he was out to avenge the defeat of pretty Miss Evert and her glamorous 56-match winning streak.

The composed and disciplined Miss Evert, from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., staged a tremendous comeback but could not overtake Australia's Evonne Goolagong, who won their twice postponed semifinal 6-0, 6-7, 6-3.

Miss Goolagong, a 23-year-old sheep herder's daughter, will face Billie Jean King, bidding for her fourth U.S. title. Ms. King, who prefers that designation, holds a 4-1 edge in head-to-head play.

Chrissie went into Sunday's play trailing 0-6, 3-4, only two games from elimination—but she put up terrific fight, three times coming from behind and forcing the Australian to play 65 minutes before winning.

She fought off four match points—two in the ninth game of the second set and two more in the final game of the match before Evonne put the match away with a sharp backhand down the line.

The normally circumspect and unshakable Miss Evert was seen to wipe tears from her eyes as she walked from the center court.

Connors, his blue shirttail hanging out and his white shorts stained with green from repeated falls on the damp turf, played with the vengeance that has become a characteristic.

The unseeded Tanner, who previously had upset Ilie Nastase and Stan Smith, had no answer for Jimmy's whirlwind attack.

Golf 'Series' deadlocked

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Lee Trevino and Gary Player, tied at the end of the regulation 36 holes, struggled through five more playoff holes to no conclusion Sunday and will return for more sudden-death play Monday in the World Series of Golf.

Trevino and Player will return at 10 a.m. EDT, in the showdown for a $50,000 first prize. Since it is sudden death, it could be only one hole.

"I'd like to be able to call it a tie and not come back tomorrow," said Player, the little South African who won the Masters and British Open titles earlier this season.

"We both feel we'd like to have a tie."

"I agree," said Trevino, the PGA champion. "We've both got things to do tomorrow, but it would be a big disappointment for the people who want to see a winner and for the sponsors who put up the money."

The loser Monday will receive $15,000.

Trevino, who once trailed by six strokes, caught Player at the end of the regulation 36 holes with a one-under-par 69 and two-round total of 139. Player, a three-stroke leader at the end of Saturday's first round, had a closing 72, two over par on the 7,180-yard Firestone Country Club course.

Host pro Bobby Nichols, the Canadian Open champion who got into this event as the first alternate, managed a scrambling 72 for 143 and U.S. Open champion Hale Irwin was last in the four-man field at 72-148.

The World Series of Golf normally bring together only the winners of the world's four major tournaments—the U.S. and British opens, the Masters and PGA—but Nichols became eligible after Player had swept two of the qualifying events.

On the line

with Sports Editor Brian Schmitz

The Daily Iowan's annual pigskin prediction contest, "On the line," heads into its third year and the college games picked for our opening week are head-scratchers.

Here's your chance to defy the likes of Jimmy the Greek, Major Hoople, Jean Dixon and even Kreskin. So put your nose to the grind and your football forecasting reputation....On the line.

And now the rules. Although some knaves in the past have said that deciphering our contest's format rates a close second to IRS forms, the guidelines aren't really that tough to follow (if you're an upperclassman).

All you do is x-in your proud choices and fill out the name, address, state etc. completely. Entries must all be post-marked no later than this and every Thursday (Sept. 12) by midnight. You can mail your entries to 111 Communications Center or just drop by and deposit your picks in the special box.

The Communications Center, in case you're not a journalism major (I thought everyone was) is located next to the Engineering Building on Madison.

Now, the winner will be decided by the individual who garners the most right choices. In case of a tie, we will turn to our tie-breaker.

If (and I hope not) there is still a deadlock after the tie-breaker, we will see who sent (postmarked) their entry the earliest.

Our sponsor this year, as every year, is good old Ted McLaughlin from the new first avenue Annex. The downtown Annex has moved, but Ted hasn't as a patriotic contributor to our contest. The winner of each "On the line" contest can pick up a free six-pack of his choosing from Ted each week.

On our prestigious panel of prognosticators will be our Irish night editor (he's a Notre Dame fan more than a descendant) Bob Foley, my assistant Krista Clark and two guests each week.

There's no penalty for not picking the Hawks to win. If you happen to be the grand poobah for the week and bet against Iowa, Ted has plenty of Blatz and Buckhorn.

Here's this week's games. Good Luck. I need it.

Now you can buy cost-no-object sound for a price within reach & reason.

(The Advent, Sony, Miracord, Shure luxury stereo system)

$619, about half the expected cost of an unstintingly luxurious stereo system, will now buy a stereo system that:
 Reproduces the entire range of musical frequencies at as high or low a sound level as you wish, in as big or small a living room as you wish.
 Has all the controls and facilities needed for full musical enjoyment, and all the provisions you might want for adding such niceties as headphones, a good cassette tape deck, or extra speakers for other rooms.
 Is both so excellent sounding and so durable that you won't be tempted to change any of the components for many years to come.
 Will probably make you happier overall than anything you've bought for a long, long time.

The cost-no-object sound this system provides at a moderate price is the result of engineering that puts performance ahead of frills. The renowned Advent Loudspeakers put out a maximum of sound with a minimum of fuss; countless owners and usually-blase equipment reviewers have all commented that they sound like twice the price. The Sony 6046A AM-FM stereo receiver provides the clean amplifier power (over 50 RMS watts of it) necessary to satisfy you and the Advents on the most demanding musical passages. Its sensitive AM-FM stereo tuner captures even the most elusive of your favorite stations with clarity. The Miracord 625 automatic turntable with a Shure M91ED cartridge and diamond stylus will treat your valuable records with respect and will add no "rumble" or other annoying sounds of its own to the music.

Since you are buying us along with our Advent-Sony-Miracord-Shure system, it's worth knowing that we will cheerfully and speedily take care of anything that might break or turn out to have a hidden flaw in manufacturing. Specifically, we guarantee the entire system, parts & labor, for two years (exclusive of diamond stylus).

We've trimmed every ounce of fat from the price of this system: the $619 we're asking for it reflects a $95 saving over the usual cost of the components individually.

We invite you to visit us soon to hear how luxurious sound no longer costs an exorbitant sum.
