Culver raps military spending

BY MARK WETTSTEIN

Rep. John Culver, D-Iowa, this week harshly criticized the administration's proposed military budget, charging that the Pentagon's spending plans would cause actual cuts in the military and national security. Culver laid the blame for the shortfall at the feet of the U.S. Senate, which he said should be cut in the interest of the country.

"Most importantly, it's our job to decide what we're doing to do as a nation and how we're going to pay for it," Culver said. "It's enough of a try to figure out how much the military is worth, and that's where we're at.

Culver called the military budget "the largest expense in the federal budget," and said that unless we're going to talk about cutting the military, "we're not going to cut the military." He suggested that the government could save money by reducing its overseas military bases, by cutting back on the number of military personnel, and by looking at the cost of maintaining military equipment.

"We need to start looking at the military as a cost, not a benefit," Culver said. "We need to start looking at the military as a cost, not a benefit." He also criticized the administration's plan to increase the military budget by $116 billion over the next two years, saying that it was "an irresponsible way to spend the American people's money." He also criticized the administration's plan to increase the military budget by $116 billion over the next two years, saying that it was "an irresponsible way to spend the American people's money."

Culver's comments added to the growing criticism of the military budget, which has been a topic of debate in Congress for several years. The Pentagon has been seeking to increase its budget by billions of dollars, citing the need to modernize its equipment and to maintain its global military presence.

Air Force commander believes
ROTC programs still relevant

By Bill Norden

Army News Editor

Air Force ROTC is still relevant in today's society, according to Brig. Gen. Robert H. White, Jr.

White, who is the deputy chief of the 19 Air Force ROTC programs, outlined the program's benefits.

He suggested that without ROTC, the military might have been unable to attract and train qualified personnel in the past.

White emphasized that the ROTC program provides a foundation for the university's training, enabling students to be better prepared for civilian life.

Ehrlichman subpoenaed quashed by Sirica

WASHINGTON (UPI) - U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica stopped an effort Wednesday by John D. Ehrlichman, former domestic affairs assistant to President Richard Nixon, to quash a grand jury subpoena issued to him.

Sirica, who presided over the Watergate hearings, denied Ehrlichman's motion to quash the subpoena.

The subpoenas were served on Ehrlichman by Sirica's staff during the trial.

Don’t Call Me; I’ll Call You

I don’t understand it. It’s really such a simple thing and nobody seems to understand it. I won’t keep you guessing—it’s the phone itself. I was calling a friend of mine, a fellow by the name of Bill or Bob or Sally or some name I can’t understand and he was being for the wrong person.

Before I moved to Iowa City I had a phone number that was one digit, or a fraction of a digit. My mother used to call the phone company and they would change it. But, finally, they stopped making changes for free.

So-and-so, or a university office long distance.

I’ve had a doctor looking for a patient with an emergency and they don’t have anything. And someone walked into a store.

I was mad because I wasn’t able to he was he was not. He was very upset.

I hung up the number and called for another book, but it didn’t work for my number.

But I thought phone training along with phone training was putting up phone training. And I knew that the only one with this problem. And I made an occasional mistake myself. But calls, callers would probably about address that when I draw this line.

Simple courtesy dictates a civil tone if not a simple apology. If people can’t handle that, they can at least call the number right.

Accuracy is never having to say you’re sorry.

The Moral Decline of America

America now faces the gravest problems in its 300-year history. Government leadership is seriously lacking, military preparedness is at a new low, and the foreign policy of our country is generally regarded as a national disgrace. The situation is so serious that it is a matter of national urgency to consider the causes and possible solutions of this moral decline.

There are three major causes of moral decline:

1. The decline of the family

2. The decline of the church

3. The decline of the schools

The family is the basic unit of society and the foundation of a stable society. The church is the moral center of a society and the source of moral authority. The schools are the institutions through which moral values are transmitted to the next generation. These three institutions are the basic institutions of a society and their decline is a sign of moral decline.

The decline of the family is due to a number of factors:

1. The increase in divorce

2. The breakdown of the nuclear family

3. The increase in single-parent families

4. The increase in cohabitation

5. The increase in abortion

The decline of the church is due to a number of factors:

1. The decline of religious education

2. The decline of religious practice

3. The decline of religious leadership

4. The decline of religious institutions

5. The decline of religious values

The decline of the schools is due to a number of factors:

1. The decline of moral education

2. The decline of discipline

3. The decline of academic standards

4. The decline of parental involvement

5. The decline of school funding

The moral decline of America is a threat to our way of life and to our national security. It is a threat to our way of life because it is a threat to our values. It is a threat to our national security because it is a threat to our future as a nation.

We must take immediate action to stop the moral decline of America. We must strengthen the family, the church, and the schools. We must strengthen the family, the church, and the schools.

Rigorous requirements for police officers

By MARIA LAWRENCE
Staff Writer

Some people might think that becoming a police officer is as easy as enrolling in a training academy. But that is far from the truth. In order to become a police officer in Iowa City, there are several requirements that must be met.

To start, a candidate must be at least 21 years old and have a high school diploma or its equivalent. They must also have no criminal record, and meet the physical and mental requirements set forth by the city. This includes passing a psychological evaluation and proving to have the necessary strength and agility.

Once a candidate has met these requirements, they will be able to take the exam. The exam consists of a written test, and an oral interview. The written test will assess the candidate's knowledge of criminal law, as well as their ability to read and comprehend. The oral interview will evaluate the candidate's communication skills and their ability to handle stressful situations.

After passing the exam, the candidate will be required to undergo a background check. This will involve a fingerprinting, and an interview with a police officer. The candidate will also be required to pass a physical examination, which will assess their physical condition and strength.

If a candidate passes all of these requirements, they will be offered a position as a police officer. However, if a candidate does not meet the requirements, they will be denied and required to go through the process again.

In conclusion, becoming a police officer is not an easy task. It requires a lot of hard work, dedication, and determination. But for those who are willing to put in the effort, it can be a very rewarding career.
She's tracing her family history

By CHARLEN HIXON

Dear Emma,

What Charlene Hixon is interested in is her family to the Revolutionary War. From that beginning she has traced her maternal grandmother's family something to remember me by, she says. "You know, most kids will remember their grandparents, and if they're lucky, their great-grandparents. And that's all I want to leave my family something to remember me by.

Once every two weeks, Survival Line is devoted to questions submitted to the Emma Goldman Clinic's staff and answered by the clinic's staff. Do, and how you do, and how you feel. "The pill," she says. "You can have some problems with your pap test."

Cervical cancer progresses slowly, and as long as it is detected at the earliest stages when there are no symptoms and when it is almost always confined to the cervix, it can be cured with 80 percent of all cases cured.

It is recommended that after the age of 10 you should have a pap smear twice a year. Cervical cancer progresses relatively slowly, and it is almost always confined to the cervix. It can be cured with 80 percent of all cases cured.

The pap smear is a test for the cervix, primarily to examine the smears to pick out the cells that might be cancerous. The test is usually done once a year. It is most common between the ages of 10 and 13, but it can occur at any age.

"After the age of 10, whenever you become sexually active, it is recommended that you have your first pap smear if you have a history of cancer in your family. If you take drugs, you might want to have the test more often if you have a history of cancer in your family."

It is essential that you should have a pap smear twice a year. The cervix is the small end of the uterus, at the back of the pelvis. Cells are then mounted on a slide and examined by a cytologist.

"Small" magazines: outlet for local talent

By LINDA RAKE

The Daily Iowan - Iowa City, Iowa - Thurs., Aug. 19, 1976 - Page 8

"I finished my novel a year ago," a friend of mine recently confided to me, "and I spent the last year editing and polishing it and pushing it for publication." It's a terrible thing to do, but you've got to if you want to get anywhere in this business.

A continuous dilemma, no doubt, for many writers who struggle to break into the market, which is as brutal as national newspapers.

Not that mass markets are all bad. Few serious writers would refuse the lure of being heard and paid, and pushing their work and their name at a national audience can be the key to fame and fortune for serial writing.

On the other hand, trying to turn out screenwriters in a market that is based on national insertion can become an arduous experience, more like reducing oneself to conformity that emerging a process of refinement.

Margaret, perhaps the easiest way to pick up on this sort of negative enthusiasm is to go to the information desk in the library. borrow a copy of Writer's Market, and see how the various small magazines that are trying to become big magazines describe in detail what kind of things they don't work on and what kind of wares are accepted. Guaranteed writer's crop-up at least a month. You might even start a magazine.

Fortunately, there is a way out of all this Iowa CityULSE.

The magazine is a small magazine that seeks new talent in its primary resource, rather than the small magazine itself.

The small magazine can provide an invaluable oppor tunity for both readers and writers. It is the one medium that can become a starting experience, more like reducing oneself to conformity than emerging a process of refinement.

The program seems to be successful. I'm afraid to make fun of it; you'll get a sense of what it's like when you read it. The student bodies of these small magazines are often larger than the main magazine.

Monica Leo of Iowa City graduate with a black art, and now creates puppets and people and teaching the craft to a group of youngsters, the Pop-Pop-Pops. Last summer she exhibited her work at the Annual Chicago Art Renaissance Fair.

She and her nine-year-old son John exhibited one of her mother's creations. John was just learning that almost every part of the puppet can be made on the same plane. The puppet, designed by Monica, can move many times, move even more, move later, still using fingers to manipulate the parts to pull the controlling strings. Friends contribute scripts of their own which John and puppet do by making small objects to represent, around them, around environments. An environment comes a flock and the expression is spontaneous.

All of her puppets are delightful. She has another deal with originality to produce some unique creations. Her deal can further open with this open as they can realistically, that you can immediately purchasing. She has been making puppets for years. She hasn't yet got the art degree that she feels she needs. But she tells a friend to take care to make any money if they don't start taking the puppet jobs. She says she always had a way to make enough money to keep having materials and to continue her work. She usually takes ten to twelve puppet classes for around this, she also bakes and trades with other artists.

I never liked dolls that already had names or dolls with scripts. I always have wanted to create dolls with names. I always have thought about what was the way children who model for puppeteers looked. I always have been interested in puppeteering. On the other hand, I was fascinated by, particularly by the dramatic production of characters. Building, moving and telling the story. I have constantly wondered how it is in the control of the puppeteer to do all of the puppeteer's handwork after children.

In this sense it is a highly theatrical film. Yet at the same time I have called it true to life. It is a theatrical, thoughtful experience of a group of puppets. The puppeteer makes the puppets. Coralville field hockey team took on nearby Scattergood Monday and narrowly missed a victory against the younger high school team, losing 3-2. Scattergood fielded a team of junior and senior high school girls who aggressively charged forward early in the game, keeping the Hy-Vee girls from taking any easy shots.

Coach Chris Grant wasn't happy with her team's performance. "They didn't look as good as usual in the first half of the game." He noted with satisfaction, however, that the Hy-Vee team was able to get up and down the field, keeping Scattergood's offense at bay.

The Hy-Vee team missed a victory against the Scattergood team, which had a strong defense throughout the game. Grant said, "I think we'll win this weekend." Scattergood is set to participate in the women's field hockey tournament this weekend. The younger team came off the bench and were in the game. The Hy-Vee team will be taking on the Toughs in the first minutes before Scattergood scored. The Hy-Vee team will be facing the Scattergood team again in the first half of the game.

The Hy-Vee team is looking forward to the weekend, "We're happy with our team's performance in the first half. We're looking forward to the weekend and hope to win." The team took on nearby Scattergood and was able to get its 3-2 win over the top-ranked team in the state. The Hy-Vee team is currently in third place in the state, behind the Scattergood team and the Toughs. The Hy-Vee team will be looking to improve its standing in the tournament this weekend.

BIVOUAC

BIVOUAC began in October 1970 in the River City Free Trade Zone (now Maxwellville) as an army surplus store. The name BIVOUAC was chosen because it means temporary shelter and that's what our first location was.

As dependable supplies of army surplus became hard to come by, we began to change the type of merchandise we carried. Five years and six locations later we have finally settled into a permanent home. We've now gotten into high quality functional merchandise and we're bringing the best brands possible into Iowa City.

In addition to clothing, we now carry mountaineering and backpacking equipment, our cross country skis are in and our snowshoes are coming.

We would like to take this opportunity to thank the entire university community who have helped us grow over the years.

Stop in and see us...in our new location.
