Kissinger mulls end to embargo

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sec- ond-term Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger mulls ending the embargo on the sale of arms to Cuba, in an apparent attempt to slash the growing East-West gap in military might.

Kissinger's willingness to consider even a partial move, reported in Washington last week, is being studied by officials in the State Department and the White House.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The 34 states with the largest populations have been asked by the National Commission on United States-Latin America Relations to explain why they have not yet been involved in the crisis in the region.

PARKSVILLE, Iowa (AP) - The secretary said he had met with President Jimmy Carter three times since the Middle East crisis erupted in October. He said there are more Soviet advisers in Syria now than before the October war began.

Aid is needed, said the commissioned officer, "because the current situation is quite serious and the people are really suffering."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. John Kerry, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said Tuesday in a comprehensive bill containing $3.8 billion for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, 1980, that the bill would not include funds for the surgeon general's committee.

The emergency legislation provides a minimum of $3.8 billion for the surgeon general's committee. The bill does not include funds for the Commission on the Surgeon General's Committee.

Books for any mind

Feed the child's imagination this Christmas

BY JOHNSTONE

and ROGER DESMOND

The passages in this book for the child's Christmas should be translated, varied, and accented. Group-informed, dynamic, nd fascinating. The story should be plausible, believable, and instruction. The whole library must be open for the child's reading and imagination.

Dear Emma,

I know what the hospital policy is regarding having two people in the delivery room with you unless you are a labor coach and husband in the case of complications during delivery. However, we have a special situation that may affect your momentum.

You are pregnant now and the hospital policy is that it is not allowed in the delivery room. However, we have a special situation that may affect your momentum.

In the delivery room, you are expected to push yourself and keep your weight on your right side. This is very important. If your weight is on your left side, you may not be able to push yourself as effectively.

After this weekend, you are expected to be able to push yourself again. It will give you momentum and the backs together forming a herringbone or V-like position. With your right leg is extended, and your weight is on your right front leg, you can steer into fresh snow. It's dangerous.

The most effective method for a quick stop is if the turn is too steep for that, do a step turn. If you're wrong, you'll do that the other side of your right leg and and the backs together forming a herringbone or V-like position. With your right leg is extended, and your weight is on your right front leg, you can steer into fresh snow. It's dangerous.

If you can't take long to learn to ski, even if you've never been on a hill before. The most important thing is the position. West ski instructors teach people how to ski, but they also teach people how to ski on the hill.

There are three methods. The beginning skiers make the mistake of shuffling along, not leaning slightly forward. When you're sitting in a chair, your weight is on your right foot and bent, and your left leg is straight and bent. Hold each up and slap it down. For even more traction, you can step up. The best advice: watch someone who can ski and try to copy them. Your arms work as in walking - open your knees. Your forward arm straight ahead. Extend your forward leg. Lean slightly forward. Your weight is on your right front leg. Thus, if your weight is on your left side, you can't push yourself as effectively.
Gibron is third coach fired; Campbell, Thomas to follow?

Chicago's Jim Gibbons joined Jack Sherman and this Delton at pro football's Calder Trophy. With at least 10-man squads under standard conditions. The two coaches were expected to be named to the New York Giants as the league's third co-op team. The Giants are expected to be out of the playoffs.

Earlier in the day baseball coach Art Modell Monday, shortly before Devine and other coaches considered good candidates to join the Packers. Other coaches were reportedly among the candidates for the head coaching position. The process is expected to be completed by mid-January. The biggest roadblock for the Packers appears to be the issue of whether the team will retain the services of head coach Ted Thompson. The Packers currently have the worst record in the league with a 3-11 record, last in the National Football Conference West.

But, more often than not, the experience factor isn't something the Packers are looking to add. The Packers have been struggling on the field and need to make some big changes. The most recent change was the hire of Ted Thompson as the new general manager. Thompson is expected to make some big moves in the off-season to improve the team. The Packers will need to make sure they get the right coach to lead the team to success.

Steelers, Vikes favored

Experience is key factor

The St. Louis Cardinals and Minnesota Vikings are both considered to be among the top teams in the National Football League. Both teams have had strong seasons and are expected to be in contention for the playoffs.

The Cardinals have won 10 games and are currently in second place in the National Football Conference West. They have a skilled offense led by quarterback Logan Thomas and a strong defense led by linebacker Shaquil Barrett. The Vikings have won 9 games and are currently in third place in the National Football Conference North. They have a balanced team with a strong defense led by defensive end Everson Griffen and a potent offense led by quarterback Kirk Cousins.

Both teams have shown that they can compete with the best teams in the league. The Cardinals have won close games and have shown an ability to come back from behind. The Vikings have also shown an ability to win close games and have a strong running game led by running back Dalvin Cook.

The key to success for both teams will be experience. The Cardinals have a young team with a lot of potential, but they need to learn how to win close games. The Vikings have a more veteran team, but they need to prove they can win on the road.

Finley will file suit today

NEW YORK (AP) -- Charles D. Finley, owner of the Oakland Athletics, was arrested today for failing to pay $1.5 million in taxes. Finley refused to pay the taxes and was arrested after a court ordered him to do so.

Finley is the owner of the A's, a major league baseball team based in Oakland, California. He has been known for his controversial business practices, including his decision to move the team to Arizona in 1980. Finley was arrested after failing to pay $1.5 million in taxes, which were due in October.

Finley has had a long history of tax problems and has been involved in several legal battles related to his business dealings. He was previously involved in a legal battle with the Internal Revenue Service over the purchase of the A's in 1980.

In this case, Finley was arrested after he refused to pay taxes that were due in October. Finley's tax problems have been well-documented, and he has been involved in several legal battles related to his business dealings.

The A's are currently in second place in the American League West, and Finley's arrest will likely have an impact on the team's upcoming season.

Ford press in fight for steel price

Black market ever increases in iron and steel products. In 1972, the state of Kansas alone reported 30,000 to 40,000 tons of iron and steel products stolen. This is a far greater figure even than the 1971 figure for the country as a whole. Half of the steel products stolen in the United States is thought to be smelted in a small town in the northwest of the country. In the two-year period since the black market began to operate, the total value of steel products stolen is estimated to be close to $500,000,000. As a result, the black market is thought to be more active today than it has ever been before.
