Attorneys for Hall request his freedom

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Gerald R. Ford on Friday asked the U.S. District Court in Washington to dismiss the indictment against ex-CIA official John E. Hall, charged with conspiracy to violate federal laws.

Ford said in a letter to U.S. District Court Judge John A. Parke Jr. late Friday that Hall "has not engaged in any conduct that is even remotely criminal in nature and that any suggestion to the contrary is without foundation." Ford praised Hall and said he has been a "true friend" to him.

The letter was released by Hall's legal team.

Hall, who served as Ford's national security adviser in the late 1970s, was arrested last week in California, accused of conspiring to violate federal law by backdating a legal document.

Ford's letter was addressed to Parke, who is scheduled to hear arguments on Hall's request to dismiss the case on Wednesday.

WASHINGTON (AP) — New York City Mayor John V. Lindsay today announced the endorsement of three Democratic leaders for his re-election campaign.

Lindsay said he would seek re-election as mayor on a theme of "opposition to the war in Vietnam." He also said he would run on the slogan, "New York City is not a cold war city." Lindsay is seeking his third consecutive term.

The three leaders who endorsed Lindsay today are Assembly Speaker Philip A. Corcoran, City Council President Thomas J. Cataldo and City Comptroller Robert D. McCallum.

Corcoran, Cataldo and McCallum are expected to formally endorse Lindsay at a news conference later today.

"I am confident that our endorsement will help to ensure a successful campaign," Lindsay said.

The endorsement of the three leaders is significant because they represent a wide range of political views within the Democratic Party in New York City.

Corcoran is a conservative Democrat who has been a vocal opponent of Lindsay's policies.

Cataldo is a moderate Democrat who has supported Lindsay in the past.

McCallum is a liberal Democrat who has been critical of Lindsay's policies.

"I believe that our endorsement can help to unite the Democratic Party in New York City," Lindsay said.

"I also believe that our endorsement can help to ensure a successful campaign," Lindsay said.

The endorsement of the three leaders follows the recent endorsement of Lindsay by the New York State Department of Labor, which is headed by a Republican governor.

"I am pleased to have the support of the New York State Department of Labor," Lindsay said.

Clapp: practical goals, unprecedented ideas

By LINDA McBRIDE

Thursday is a series in the lives of 12 buildings and their people.

Students should have some idea how they want to spend the six months between the end of this semester and the start of the next, but for those who remain unconvinced, the following offers an introduction and a guide to the summer residences.

Although undergraduate students should have access to the University's facilities, most of these buildings are open only to special guests or to members of the University community. The exception is the Center for Urban and Industrial Studies, which is open to the general public.

Watergate final argument: 'Money for silence, Silence says

WASHINGTON (AP) - Chief Prosecutor Jesuits Faculty Senate plans to broadcast over the campus radio station one of its most popular courses, said the chief prosecutor.

The course, which was broadcast over the campus radio station one year ago, was called "Money for Silence." It was one of several courses offered by the University of Virginia.

The course covered the Watergate scandal and the subsequent events. It was taught by Professor J. D. White, who is also a member of the University's history faculty.

Throughout the course, White discussed the events leading up to the Watergate scandal, including the resignation of President Richard Nixon. He also discussed the legal and political implications of the scandal.

White said that the course had been well-received by students and faculty members alike. They were impressed by the way White was able to make complex issues understandable.

The course was also well-received by the general public. It was broadcast over the campus radio station and was available to anyone who wanted to listen.

White said that the course had been so successful that he planned to offer it again in the future.

The course was funded by a grant from the University's faculty senate. White said that this was a good example of how the faculty senate could support important courses and research projects.
Collective bargaining / UI implications...

By Valerie Sullivan

A form of collective employee bargaining is already taking place at the University of Iowa, according to Iowa President Jack Kysar, who has announced that the university will be a party to the collective bargaining process.

According to Kysar, some employees feel that their benefits have not kept pace with inflation. The university, he said, has been working hard to maintain the fringe benefits package. But he added that it is necessary to have a new collective bargaining agreement to address these issues.

"We are very pleased to be involved in this process," Kysar said. "We believe that it will be beneficial to both the university and its employees."

The university has already made several proposals to the employees, including an increase in salaries and a new retirement plan. The union has also made some counterproposals, but negotiations are still ongoing.

"We are encouraged by the progress we have made so far," said an employee representative. "We believe that we are getting closer to an agreement that is acceptable to both sides."

The negotiations are scheduled to continue over the next few weeks, and a new contract is expected to be signed in early January.

The WyLL On DI Coverage

By THE EDITOR

The Women's Liberation League (WyLL) has been in the news recently, as they have been protesting against the hiring of a new DI reporter. The WyLL has been investigating the possibility of replacing the reporter with someone who more accurately reflects their values and beliefs.

According to the WyLL's mission statement, their goal is to promote equality and justice for all. The WyLL has been working towards this goal by organizing protests against the hiring of the new DI reporter.

The WyLL has been criticized by some readers for their protests, but they believe that it is important to hold the news media accountable for their actions. They believe that the news media should accurately reflect the diversity of voices in society.

The WyLL is committed to continuing their protests until the new DI reporter is replaced with someone who more accurately reflects their values and beliefs.
Reception uncarts art exhibit

BY KEN MATROTH

Crabapple punch, raisin bran muffins and a suite of fifteen paintings, sculptures and prints made by 198 members of the faculty of the University of Iowa School of Art and Art History is presently the focus of a reception at the Cranes, an exhibit of works by faculty members, alumni and guest artists.

The reception uncarts art exhibit is open to the public each Friday and Saturday from 1 to 5 p.m. and is located on the fourth floor of the UI Fine Arts Building.

The event is sponsored by the University of Iowa School of Art and Art History and the UI Art Gallery.

TV Videotape at UI: ample talent, but...

BY JOHN ROSE

Cooperative Editor

Once a week last spring a group of twenty people met to discuss their projects and exchange ideas. Members of William Price Fox's Freelance Workshop, using portable video equipment to tape dramatizations of their own written work, they decided to use a technique of writing and video. Rough scenes were turned into the final video.

Dues writing, memoirs, engagement, experience, dreams and secrets are taped by the members. The group refers to the tapes as "executing" the original material.

Tales have moved quickly since people were once in Hollywood. Fox now teaches in the UI Fine Arts Building and is currently working on a book about the writing and video group. He says the group is not a "good group." He thinks the group has a "huge future."
