Ford discloses new economic proposals

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presi­dent Ford, already under fire for the "81 billion tax cut" issue, tried Tuesday to sell the nation on his $15 billion package of additional personal tax cuts, although he acknowledged that the President also plans to ask Congress for a new energy policy package.

Ford, in a speech to the nation on Tuesday, said the $15 billion package would be "the biggest tax cut in history," but he also acknowledged that it would be the administration's most controversial plan yet.

Ford said the plan would provide tax relief for most Americans, particularly those who have lost jobs or are paying mortgage payments. He said the plan would also provide a "creative and constructive" energy policy package.

Schlesinger cites CIA activities as inappropriate inmanent investigations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Inter­nal Intelligence Agency ac­tivities were called "inappropriate" but "overblown" by CIA Director Adm. James E. Schlesinger, who visited the Washington area Tuesday for a private meeting.

Schlesinger said the CIA's activities were discussed by the director because of a "lack of understanding" of the CIA's role.

"I was concerned that the CIA was doing something that was inappropriate," Schlesinger said. "I believe that the CIA Director should be accountable to the American people."
Interpretations

The State & the Drunken Driver

The National Foundation for Highway Safety is placing the blame for much of the 8,100 plus motor vehicle accidents on the drunk driver. For the past decade, reports that more than 8,000 drivers and passengers have died in alcohol-related motor vehicle accidents have been forthcoming. It has been revealed that the drunk driver is responsible for between one-third to one-half of all the deaths and accidents that occur on the road. Many drivers have complained that the police are taking away the right of drivers who have not been drinking to drive their cars. The police have been ordering them to turn their cars over to others who have not been drinking.

The legal, moral, and social influence of the drunk driver is growing. The general public is being asked to take this problem seriously. It is being said that the drunk driver is responsible for more than one out of two deaths and accidents on the road. This is a national problem, and it is being said that the drunk driver is responsible for more than one out of two deaths and accidents on the road.

The Legalized Opposite

They consider the problem themselves. We have seen newspaper articles and on the radio about the drunk driver. We have seen them on the television, in the newspapers, on the radio, and in the movies. They are everywhere.

The government and the courts have been trying to bring the drunk driver to justice. They have been trying to find ways to monitor the drunk driver and to keep him from driving. But the drunk driver is still driving. He is still out there on the road, killing people and causing accidents.

The drunk driver is a problem that we cannot ignore. We must take action to stop him. We must prevent him from driving.

Core of the Problem

Four questions I ask to decide if a problem exists.

1. What is the problem? Why is it a problem? Is the problem real or imaginary? Is the problem our fault or someone else's?

2. What are the causes? Why are the causes real? Is the cause a real reason for the problem or an imagined reason?

3. What are the effects? Why are the effects real or imaginary? Are the effects real in a sense, or do they only exist in our imagination?

4. What solutions can be found? Why are the solutions real or imaginary? Are the solutions real in a sense, or do they only exist in our imagination?

We need to look at the problem and try to understand it. We need to see the real causes and the real effects. We need to find real solutions to the real problem.

Once we have a clear understanding of the problem, we can begin to find real solutions. We can start working on the real solutions, not just imaging them.

The drunk driver is a problem that we cannot ignore. We must take action to stop him. We must prevent him from driving.
Ray proposes legislative action to restore government confidence

POLISHERS, Iowa — Rep. Ray Hull for the House Ways and Means Committee, the hearing is to restore confidence in government and its leadership. The hearing is to restore confidence in government and its leadership.

The speech ran shorter than a year ago, but Ray noted that it is "impossible to describe the damage to the nation's economy and the confidence of the American people." He said that the nation's economy is "in a state of crisis" and that the country is "on the brink of economic collapse." Ray called for a "new approach" to government and said that the nation needs "leaders who are willing to take responsibility and who are willing to do what is necessary to save our economy." Ray also called for a "national dialogue" to address the country's problems and said that "the time for more of the same is over." Ray concluded his speech by saying that "the American people are counting on us to act quickly and efficiently."

"Stayin' high, gamin' by"
DOUGLAS, N.Y. — Richard Goldman sits in a chair in his office in the basement of the House of H.O.P.E., an亲情院 where he volunteers.

He has no eyes, but he can see. He sees in his mind's eye the faces of the people he helps, the places where they've been, what they've done. He sees in his mind's eye the future, the possibilities for change.

Goldman is a blind counselor, a man who works with people who are struggling with addiction. He's been doing it for years, and he's good at it. He's seen it all before, he says. He's seen the pain, the chaos, the hope, the despair.

"Every day is a new day," he says. "Every day is a chance to make a difference."

Goldman's own story is remarkable. He was born blind, and he's had to fight against the odds his whole life. He's fought to get an education, to find a job, to support himself and his family. And he's done it.

"I've always been a fighter," he says. "I've always been a survivor."

Goldman has a soft spot for kids. He's worked with kids for years, and he's seen the effects of addiction on them. He's seen the pain, the suffering, the hopelessness. And he's fought to help them.

"The kids are the future," he says. "We need to give them a chance."

Goldman is a man of hope. He believes in the power of change. He believes in the power of love. And he believes in the power of the human spirit.

"I believe in the human spirit," he says. "I believe in the possibility of change."

Goldman is a true hero. He's a man who has dedicated his life to helping others. He's a man who has overcome incredible odds. And he's a man who has made a difference.

"I've always been a fighter," he says. "I've always been a survivor."

"I believe in the human spirit," he says. "I believe in the possibility of change."

"I believe in the future," he says. "I believe in the power of the human spirit."
