Football ticket changes proposed

By Chris Kettleson

The Board of Control has approved a proposal that would allow the University of Iowa athletic department to purchase two season ticket holders for every home football game.

The proposal would also allow season ticket holders to purchase an additional ticket for the third game of the season at a reduced price. The additional ticket would be available for the third game of the season, and it would be valid for any home game.

The Board will vote on the proposal at its next meeting on November 1. If approved, the proposal will go into effect for the 2017 football season.

The Board of Control includes the university president, the provost, and other university officials. The proposal was presented by Dan Rogers, the university's vice president for Athletics.

The new proposal is designed to increase season ticket sales and to make the games more accessible to fans. It is also intended to provide additional revenue for the university's athletic programs.

The proposal will be discussed at the Board of Control's next meeting on November 1. The Board will then vote on whether to approve the proposal.

Evidence okay if wrongly gathered but Epstein would punish officer

By CONNIE JORDAN

Franklin County Standard

David Epstein, Iowa City, the deputy director of the Iowa City Police Department, said Monday that he would punish officers who use false evidence to make an arrest.

He made the statement at a police department meeting where a number of officers were gathered to discuss the department's policies on the use of evidence.

"If an officer uses false evidence, they will be disciplined," Epstein said. "I want to make it clear that we take this very seriously."

Press coverage of the recent National People's Congress in China excerpt below what we can infer about the country's fundamental political beliefs. At a time when the virtues of domestic development and modernization are being highlighted, the emphasis on the importance of the People's Congress in terms which ignore these lessons of the past is apparent.

Peltingly, the press has covered the recent victory of Daniel DePue, the gubernatorial candidate who supported him as a "trumpet for stability," and pragmatism in the nation's struggle against the "jaws of their opponent's political dragon." Watergate prosecutors investigating Demo campaign violations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Watergate Special Prosecution Force subpoenaed documents and financial reports of the Democratic Party, state and local party committees in 34 states and the District of Columbia, the prosecutors said Tuesday, as they announced an investigation of the use of illegal campaign funds.

Democratic Chairwoman Charlotte Higgins and a spokesman for the Watergate prosecutors declined comment Wednesday on the investigation. Higgins also declined to answer questions about a party's legal status and whether it was being used to conceal illegal campaign activities.

The subpoenas and other documents were served at the request of the Democratic National Committee, which was investigating several states and municipalities. In addition, the party's vice chairman, Jack J. Ford, said his party was not being "exploited to further illegalities." He added that the party's legal status was not at issue.

Bettie Ford campaigning for ERA ratification

WASHINGTON (AP) — First Lady Betty Ford has announced she will run next year for the ERA, the Equal Rights Amendment to state constitutions. The President's wife has been in touch with state leaders, who have been asked to consider the possibility of an ERA campaign.

Bettie Ford told reporters Wednesday that she talked by telephone with Governer Ronald Reagan, who said he would support an ERA campaign. She also said she talked with the Arizona's House of Representatives and with her husband, President Nixon.

The President's voice was clear and firm, but there was little mention of the issues involved. The President has said he would support an ERA campaign if he were elected and if the states were asked.

All-American berth to Campbell

Iowa's Chris Campbell was named to the mid-season first all-American basketball team that was honored by the Associated Press Monday.

Campbell, who has missed only one game this season, was the Big Ten's outstanding senior in winning his award.

"I guess I'm a little bit surprised," he said after the announcement. "But before I get hurt I have a couple of pretty good seasons.

"I've had a pretty good year," Campbell said after the announcement. "I've had a lot of really good years, but this year I think I've had the best season of my career.

Players' salary demands anger A. Finley

SAN FRANCISCO--The Hawks' 11 salary arbitration cases were settled Monday by the Federal Arbitration Agency, which ruled that the Hawks' proposed salary demands are too high.

The Hawks had requested a raise in the salary of each of their players, but the arbitrators ruled that the proposed raises are too high.

"Our players asked for a raise and we said no," Hawks owner Bill Smith said after the announcement. "But after arbitrator John A. Dunlop ruled that the proposed raises are too high, we agreed to settle.

It is Thursday night, a popular night in Iowa City. This city is noted for its vibrant cultural life, a beacon for numerous events. The afternoon sun has set, and the city is slowly settling down. Harvey, a minister with the Student Ministry of the Assembly of God, is about to arrive at a Friday night meeting at Union College. The Union College campus is bustling with activity, as students prepare for the weekend.

Harvey drives to the campus, discussing various topics with the student ministry leaders. They are preparing for a weekend of meetings, and Harvey is excited about the possibilities. The university is a hub of activity, with students from all over the world. Harvey is a bit nervous, as he knows the power of the words he will speak. But he is also filled with hope and enthusiasm.

As Harvey arrives at the meeting, he is greeted by a group of student leaders. They are excited to see him, and they are ready to share their testimonies. Harvey begins by introducing himself, and he encourages the group to open their hearts to God.

Harvey's speech is filled with passion and conviction. He talks about the power of faith, and he encourages the group to trust in God. He reminds them that God is always there, ready to help them through their struggles. Harvey's words are inspiring, and the group is moved by his message.

After Harvey's speech, the group is ready to share their testimonies. They are eager to speak about their experiences and to share their faith with others. Harvey stands next to the podium, waiting for the group to share their stories.

The group begins to share their testimonies, and Harvey listens attentively. They speak about their struggles and their victories, and they offer words of encouragement to one another. Harvey is moved by their stories, and he is inspired by their faith.

Finally, Harvey concludes the meeting by thanking the group for sharing their testimonies. He reminds them that they are not alone, and that God is always there to help them. Harvey's words are a source of comfort and inspiration, and the group is grateful for his presence.

As Harvey leaves the meeting, he is filled with hope and enthusiasm. He knows that the work he is doing is important, and he is committed to serving the students of the university. Harvey is a dedicated minister, and he is always ready to share his faith with others.

The amazing thing, of course, is that they do what they do without destroying the quality of the music. The players are certainly working very satisfyingly hard, a brilliant string sound, and a vigorous, even aggressive approach employing fast tempi. The performance was very satisfying balance, a brilliant string sound, and a

Despite the enormous potential of the music industry, we were becoming dimly aware of the thought that our war was not one we believed in, coming home from a war they didn't believe in, coming home from a war they didn't believe in. We'd gone through the routine of being treated as though we were returning heroes, but it was a trauma, and not just for some of us. We became aware of the violence in our own homes and communities. We were returning from a war that we didn't believe in, and we were not ready for the disillusionment that came. We were not ready to face the reality of what we had experienced.

As the music industry evolved, it became clear that the music we were making was not being appreciated. The music was not selling, and the industry was not supporting it. We were not being paid fairly for our work, and we were not being recognized for our contributions. The music was not being heard, and the industry was not being heard. We were not being heard, and the industry was not being heard.

Our music was not being heard, and the industry was not being heard. We were not being heard, and the industry was not being heard. We were not being heard, and the industry was not being heard. We were not being heard, and the industry was not being heard. We were not being heard, and the industry was not being heard.

I HAVE IN FRONT OF me a sheet of promotion for American International's latest release: THE LITTLE RIVER CITY. It's a poster-type affair, no doubt used in the months before the movie's release. But its purpose is clear: to advertise the film, to encourage people to go see it, and to generate interest in American International's other releases. What's not clear is how effective this kind of promotion is, or whether it's worth the cost of printing and distributing it. After all, there are so many other ways to promote a movie, from trailers to TV spots to magazine ads. But these are the methods that seem to work best, and they're the ones that American International seems to be using. The only other thing that's clear from this poster is that the film is set in the American Southwest, and that it features the rock band The Rolling Stones. Whether that's a good thing or a bad thing, I don't know. But it's certainly something that people might want to know before they go see the movie.
