The verdict was a mixed blessing for the House and Senate as well as for the President. Blouin said he was "very pleased" with the result of the vote and that it was a "victory for the presidential veto." However, House Speaker Tip O'Neill said the vote was a "tragedy for the Administration." Although Blouin said he was "very pleased" with the result of the vote, he added that the House was "not in favor of the presidential veto." The vote was 267-169 in favor of the presidential veto, with 114 votes for the House and 155 votes for the Senate.

The defense

Sue Schrader and Kenneth Tilton, defense attorneys, and Leonard Crow Dog, the Cherokee leader, argued that the President's veto was unconstitutional.

In her final argument, Hurd countered the defense's claim that the President's veto was a "victory for the presidential veto." He said, "We have been in the area of work's study for over a year and a half. The President's veto was a "tragedy for the Administration.""

Ford makes exception

WILLIAMSBURG (AP) - President Ford has signed a bill to permit states to pay up deferred matching construction funds under a new federal program designed to help states take advantage of the special job-creating highway funds.

Finance Secretary Donald T. Regan said the bill's enactment was his administration's last major economic initiative before the mid-term elections.

Price increases lessen

The Labor Department reported Thursday that wholesale prices increased 0.3 percent in May, after rising 0.4 percent in April.

Deficit complaints

The analyst said improved sales in May cut the auto industry's "all-in cost" in April, reducing the industry's "inventories.

The department said the General Motors Corporation announced it would halt production at its plants in Michigan for the year-end Davis. The National Coal Association agreed to a new national program designed to help states meet their federal employment goal.

Constitutionality questioned
No-fault insurance challenged

WASHINGTON (AP) - The constitutionality of the pending federal no-fault insurance bill was again raised in court today when a group of attorneys and labor leaders who said they plan to press a serious defense in the Supreme Court on the issue of the state's legislative supremacy.

In testimony before the Senate Commerce Committee, Landis said that most of the bills that are jointly proposed are in fact those that would require states to follow federal no-fault mandates and compel certain state employees such as the state insurance commissioners to issue no-fault policies.

"The issue is whether it is permissible or appropriate for the Congress to attempt to make a law that will affect employees of federal agencies, states, and localities, even those who are not federal employees," Landis said.

Chairman Frank E. Moss, D-Del., and Sen. John J. Mitchell, R-Wyo., told the bill's sponsor to prepare to face the constitutional questions as to the validity of the provision in question.

No-fault insurance challenged

The U.S. Senate, in conjunction with the U.S. Supreme Court, is making a move to challenge the constitutionality of the Iowa's no-fault insurance bill. The Senate is providing money to the Constitutional Commission June 17 in Ames.

The Senate is continuually reminded of the state's legislative supremacy, even though the state's insurance commissioners are required to issue no-fault policies under the new law.

"We're not trying to destroy state no-fault programs," Landis said, "but we are trying to keep them consistent with human values, with what people are suffering through the present system. It's an insurance claim being settled with funds coming from our state."

Reid said that under that system, $67 of every auto insurance dollar is spent seeking the victims of accidents.

What Price Convenience?

Within these days of the first section of the 89th Iowa General Assembly, perhaps as early as today, the Committee on the Judiciary will be considering the Iowa "Convenience Store Bill." The first hearing of this controversial measure will be a debate on Senate File 1970, a bill designed to permit the sale of alcoholic beverages at the front desk of any store, including those in cities with a population of fewer than 1,000 people.

The EFTS (Electronic Funds Transfer System) will allow the Iowa law enforcement to keep track of any illegal purchases of alcoholic beverages and other prohibited items. The system will be linked to the bank's central computer, which will automatically notify the authorities of any suspicious activity. The EFTS is designed to reduce the time by which the transaction is processed, allowing the authorities to act quickly when necessary.

However, the major short-term dangers are to the consumer. The Iowa Senate File 1970 does not provide any real consumer protection from the onset of hazardous and illegal transactions. The consumer is left at the mercy of the store to check the age, review the purchase history, and establish the consumer's bank account. The bill also does not cover the under the current bill.

The Preamble of the Bill states the intentions of the Senate File 1970 as follows: "The purpose of this bill is to ensure that the sale of alcoholic beverages is conducted in a manner that is both convenient and safe for the consumer." It is clear, however, that the bill's intentions are far from being realized.

The EFTS will be designed to replace the current manual system by which the authorities are notified of any suspicious activity. The system is being pushed by the very large liquor dealers and bankers who see it as a golden opportunity to maximize profits. These large liquor dealers and bankers will be able to offer "surprise" services to the law enforcement.

Pilots turned smugglers; 'pot' goes up in smoke

MIAMI, FlA. The pilots were flown to the United States during the war, officials said, but were allowed to stay in the country.

"We have exceeded quite a few Vietnam veterans," said one federal official. "They have been working to clear our skies of drugs." The pilots were arrested for alleged drug smuggling.

Sport of Kings amid the corn

By BILL McALPINE

The racing industry has come a long way since the first horse race was held in France in 1743. In those early days, the horses were raced for leisure and sport, and the betting was done by the bookmakers. Today, the sport of kings is a multi-billion dollar industry, with races held around the world.

The majority of horse racing in the United States is conducted in New York, New Jersey, Illinois, and Pennsylvania. The most well-known thoroughbred races are the Kentucky Derby, the Preakness Stakes, and the Belmont Stakes. These races are held at Churchill Downs, Pimlico Race Course, and Belmont Park, respectively.

Horse racing is not only a popular spectator sport, but it also provides employment opportunities for jockeys, trainers, and other racing industry professionals. The sport has a rich history and has produced some of the most celebrated thoroughbred horses in racing history, such as Man o' War, Secretariat, and Seabiscuit.

In the United States, horse racing is regulated by state and federal laws. The American Racing Association (ARA) is the national governing body for horse racing, and it works to ensure the integrity of the sport by enforcing rules and regulations.

Horse racing is a sport that requires a great deal of skill and training, as well as a great deal of dedication and hard work. It is a sport that can be enjoyed by people of all ages and backgrounds, and it continues to attract new fans every year.

The sport of kings amid the corn is a testament to the enduring popularity of horse racing, and it continues to provide entertainment and excitement for millions of people around the world.
