PINE RIDGE, S.D. (AP) — The FBI on Sunday reported a breakthrough in efforts to talk with Indian representatives on terms for possible surrender of 16 suspects sought in the slaying of two FBI agents.

At the same time, an FBI spokesman indicated growing optimism that a related arrest had put them on the trail of suspects in the shootings last Thursday.

Services for FBI agents Ronald A. Williams and Jack R. Coler, killed Thursday outside a farmhouse where they had gone to serve some warrants, are scheduled for Tuesday.

The FBI said "efforts were made to negotiate" the surrender of the 16 persons being sought. But agents said they were unsuccessful and no new efforts are scheduled.

American Indian Movement (AIM) leader Dennis Banks had proposed that the suspects surrender if FBI agents would leave the reservation.

Indian supporters said Banks insisted the talks be held off the reservation, but officials of the Bureau of Indian Affairs would not comply. Banks was a key figure in the 71-day occupation of the village of Wounded Knee on the Pine Ridge Reservation in 1973.

Agents said they felt they were closer to finding the shooting suspects because of the arrest Saturday of Herman Thunder Hawk, one of the four persons named in warrants carried by the agents who were killed.

The Thunder Hawk arrest "might shed light" on the whereabouts of the shooting suspects, an FBI spokesman said, but he would not comment further. Officials have not said if Thunder Hawk was among the 16 shooting suspects.

The search on the sprawling Pine Ridge Indian Reservation was being conducted by an FBI force of nearly 200 agents.

The FBI also said it has established the identity of an Indian found dead at the scene where two FBI agents were killed Thursday. He was listed as Joseph Bedell Stuntz, 24, an Indian from the Lapwai Agency, Coeur D'Alene, Idaho.

There had been earlier reports listing the dead man as either Joe Roberts, 21, of Seattle, Wash., or Little Joe Killisright, 18, of the Pine Ridge Reservation.

The FBI said Stuntz was found dead after a gun battle at the farmhouse, and they said he wore a jacket that had belonged to one of the dead FBI agents. The FBI spokesman said agents had no idea how long Stuntz had been on the reservation, or his reason for being there.

U.S. Atty. William Clayton, of Sioux Falls, said a rifle and a handgun were found by Stuntz' body next to one of the five buildings on the site.

Clayton was interviewed at the shooting scene. He said he was told that more than a dozen weapons were found in the area.

Newsmen, who were allowed to visit the site for the first time, observed several hundred bullet holes in one building, apparently the center of the siege raised by government agents who responded to calls for help from the two FBI agents who died.

Authorities earlier referred to bunkers at the scene which could have been used in an ambush of the two agents. However, the only bunker-like facilities in the area Sunday were two dug-out cellars, and an animal shelter adjacent to a corral.

The shelter and the cellars are in a ravine bordering the house where the siege took place.

The bodies of the agents were found at one end of the ravine, where the car of one of the agents also was found, Clayton said. The other agent's car was found at the opposite end of the ravine. The farmhouse was near the ravine's center.

Beirut fighting hits fiercest level; streets blocked

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Beirut's street fighting hit its fiercest level in a week Sunday, with the official death toll from six days of battles rising to over 65, including a 2-month-old baby found shot dead on a street. All roads into the capital were blocked by masked gunmen.

President Suleiman Franjeh called an emergency meeting of his top army commanders, and Iraq asked the Arab League in Cairo to convene an urgent session to discuss the situation in Lebanon.

Rocket-launched grenades slammed into 20 buildings in a Beirut port district, and mortars blasted an Armenian school operated by Catholic nuns, an Armenian club and a nearby headquarters of the right-wing, predominantly Christian Phalange party in a residential area. Four persons were killed and seven injured in the attacks.

Automatic weapons fire and the thump of rockets and mortars could be heard all over the city, turned into a sunwashed ghost town as Lebanese and foreign residents heeded radio calls to stay off the streets.

"It is hell here, bullets are pouring like rain. Children are shivering and women scared to death," said a resident in a mostly Christian area which seemed to be a constant target of machine gun and rocket fire.

Shooting broke out at one point in a district between the U.S. Embassy and the major tourist hotels, emptied after Beirut's latest round of violence erupted last Tuesday.

Time bombs blew up several stores, and a mortar barrage devastated the office of the Popular Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, a Marxist guerrilla unit.

Beirut Radio advised citizens to stay home, and several Western embassies told their citizens not to travel about the city.

Streets were virtually empty. A group of elderly women was turned back by a pastor who advised them to "go and pray at home."

Snipers came down from roofs and joined masked men with automatic rifles in searching private cars and checking identity cards and passports of pedestrians.

Communist Party Convention

Just like any other, this 21st convention of the Communist Party of the United States is composed of lots of people and lots of signs. In the Guild Hall of the Ambassador West Hotel in Chicago, Gus Hall, general secretary of the party is at rostrum.

Student group praises quickness of Communist Party's operations

By DIANNE COUGHLIN

CHICAGO, Ill. — A spokesman for the National Student Association (NSA) — the largest and oldest student association in the country — Sunday called the Communist Party, USA the conscience of the nation.

Bill Klamon, head of NSA's political affairs, spoke to 3,000 persons at the Chicago Amphitheater during a rally ending the 21st convention of the Communist Party, USA.

"If this nation has a conscience, it has it in this room today," Klamon said.

He extended "greetings and strong support of NSA" to the convention delegates and guests.

"The American Revolution is still unfinished, we must continue to struggle against racism and the military mentality."

"Monopoly capitalism never sleeps so we must form permanent coalitions that persist as monopoly capitalism persists."

"Our fight is your fight," Klamon said.

When questioned by this reporter after his speech, Klamon said his appearance at the rally was not meant to be a complete endorsement of the Communist Party, USA, but an invitation to join the open political process.

Klamon said he is not a member of the Communist Party and "as far as I know, neither is anyone in the NSA leadership."

"We are not underwriting the work of the Communist Party without exception. But you have to recognize their important work in this country. They have been early to recognize many problems."

Klamon mentioned the Communist Party's fight in American involvement in Vietnam and the party's support of political prisoners in Chile and Greece.

"Of course there are political prisoners in the USSR. But I do not feel it is my place at this convention to point out the failures of the Communist Party, USA, or to criticize the internal policy of the USSR."

Klamon said the president of NSA, Kathy Kelly, is presently on an official visit to the Soviet Union and plans to talk to dissidents as well as Communist Party members.

NSA has refused to join the International Union of Students, Klamon said, because of "its failure to criticize any of the policies of socialist countries."

Angela Davis...

'We want our country back'

By DIANNE COUGHLIN
Editor

CHICAGO, Ill. — Addressing the 21st Communist Party, USA convention, Angela Davis said Sunday that 200 years after its own revolution the United States has become the center of "counter revolution."

"This country was responsible for the killing and maiming of 4,000,000 people in Southeast Asia. This country continues to finance fascism in South America."

"This country has sterilized one-third of the women of child-bearing age in Puerto Rico."

Davis, who is a leading Communist Party member, addressed 3,000 persons at a rally which climaxed the convention.

"President Ford and Vice President Rockefeller have no right to celebrate the Bicentennial," Davis said.

"They shouldn't celebrate anything in this country, a country where Rockefeller hasn't done an honest day's work in his life."

Abraham Lincoln's government of the people, by the people and for the people has become "a government of the corporations by the corporations and for the corporations."

"We want our country back," she said. Saying the "ruling class has a lot to answer for," Davis cited the deaths of Black Panther members, the past imprisonment of the two top members of the Communist Party, Henry Winston and Gus Hall, the execution of Ethel and Julius Rosenberg, and the imprisonment of North Carolina civil rights leader Rev. Ben Chavis.

In the past two-and-a-half years 300 men, women and children were shot and killed by New York policemen, "many of whom were trained by the CIA," Davis said.

At a press conference following the rally, Davis was asked if she intends to fight for political prisoners in the Soviet Union as well those in the United States. She said Soviet citizens who "attempt to thwart the will of the people are often political prisoners."

"Bourgeois press attempts to use these cases to blow them out of proportion to discredit socialism."

Stories about Soviet dissident Alexander Solzhenitsyn constantly receive good space in the press, Davis said. But, when people in this country attempt to publicize the plight of American political prisoners like Rev. Chavis, "we're lucky if we get a small spot on page nine."

The American government attempts to discredit socialism by focusing on Soviet political prisoners, she said. Such an attempt "diverts attention from our (communist) struggle in this country."

Nazi Party vs. Ku Klux Klan

CHICAGO (AP) — Members of the American Nazi Party and a group protesting a Ku Klux Klan rally inadvertently confronted each other on the streets of Chicago on Sunday and had to be restrained by police.

The groups met at a street corner on the city's South Side, where police halted them and stood between them while they shouted slogans and insults at each other.

The Stop the Klan group chanted, "Fascism, no," and "Hey, hey, hey, smash the KKK."

The Nazis, wearing their brown uniforms with swastika armbands, shouted, "Back to Africa" and "Down with Communism."

Weather

Some of the rain that has plagued central Iowa and missed us may drop in later this afternoon and this evening. It should be partly cloudy, warm and humid with highs in the mid 90s and a Monday low in the upper 60s. Rain is expected by the middle of the week and cooler temperatures may arrive with the fourth.

'It breaks your hide' Smokestack goes up — oil, out

By HAL CLARENDON
Staff Writer

Curtis Lesnett says it breaks your hide. But he's been doing it for 40 years. This time he's come all the way from West Virginia and he's brought his wife with him. His smile never moves, but his deep triangular eyes are intent when he looks up at the new-poured cement rising and gleaming 195 feet into the sun.

Lesnett is project foreman for the UI power plant's new $22,000 smokestack that will be hooked up to a $1,360,000 boiler that will produce 180,000 pounds of raw steam in an hour, increasing the power plant's steam capacity by 28 per cent.

Beginning in May, workers built into the sky. Each morning they pulled the one-ton cyclone chain hoists and raised the ten-foot steel section molds to the top of the previous day's pour. In 24 hours the cement sets enough to hold.

"Whoopie! Whoopie!" came the cries down through the black funnel of the stack. We were on our way up, Curtis and I, the cement bucket between us. A smooth ride. We came up the black inside of the stack, up to the perfect circle of sunshine at the top.

"I got cottonwood trees," Curtis said in the cool blackness of the center of the stack. "The termites start working on them and then they'll get to the new house. So we doped up the house to keep those buggers out of there." While he talked, I didn't look up or down.

Then we were at the top — the stack's 11-foot diameter was capped by a round-wood floor. There was nothing around us but the breeze, and nothing above but the 6 x 6 posts and 2 x 12 cross members that made the derrick they call the "cathead."

Because coal is currently cheaper than oil, the boiler will be coal-fired, a process which is "in tune with national policy," according to Elmer C. Lundquist, associate director of the physical plant. The new stack will have an electrostatic converter, which will remove "just about all" of the precipitants. The entire project will take another year and a half to complete.

Hal Frantz had cut his hand. The blood slicked the side of the stack just below the lip where he had been bolting on the painter's rail from which painters hang their chairs.

"Just a few little ol' red marks," he said, taking out his wallet.

"Get your Band Aid, that will fix you up," said Curtis leaning out, his palms against the seven-inch concrete wall. Scanning the brown river below, he said, "I built a 1,000 foot stack in Georgia, and you know, it didn't look much higher than this." A fragment of concrete dropped toward the river—it takes four seconds to hit the water.

FDA proposes IUD labeling

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the wake of 43 known IUD deaths, the Food and Drug Administration is proposing the first uniform labeling for intrauterine contraceptive devices used by about four million American women.

Such labeling now is required on only two other prescription products: oral contraceptives and aerosolized asthma drugs.

The IUD labels would advise physicians to examine patients carefully beforehand, explain insertion and removal techniques, and describe adverse reactions or problems to look for.

They also would give results from clinical trials on rates of pregnancy and expulsion, and reasons and frequency of removal.

A separate brochure would be included for women, explaining in layman's terms the general effectiveness and safety of IUDs and possible complications such as excess bleeding, uterine perforation and infected abortion.

An FDA advisory panel concluded last year that IUDs "compare favorably" in safety and effectiveness with birth control pills.

They are roughly 95 per cent effective in preventing pregnancy, the FDA said, although success varies among the various brands on the market.

An Associated Press analysis of medical statistics earlier this year found that IUDs were somewhat less effective than the pill in preventing pregnancy but safer in terms of a lower frequency of deaths. Both methods were less hazardous, however, than unprotected intercourse and the maternal mortality rate.

The FDA said that at the end of last week it knew of 18 deaths associated with the Lippes Loop, 16 with the Dalkon Shield, 4 with the Saf-T-Coil, 1 with the Birnberg Bow, 2 with the Majzlin Spring and 2 other deaths from miscellaneous IUDs.

The agency said it was aware of at least 313 septic or infected abortions involving women who became pregnant while wearing IUDs.

Between 1966 and 1974, about 8.8 million IUDs were distributed in the United States and millions more across the world.

U.S. leaving Laos

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP)—The U.S. Embassy quietly flew out nearly half its remaining American staff over the weekend as Pathet Lao-supported demonstrators continued to occupy three U.S. facilities and reports of more anti-American demonstrations spread through the Laotian capital.

Only 22 American officials were left in Laos Sunday — down from 42 at the start of the weekend. There were about 350 two months ago before the beginning of a campaign of harassment and indignities apparently aimed at curbing U.S. influence as the pro-Communist Pathet Lao moved toward near-total domination of the coalition government.

Reports have been circulating that students and other anti-American elements plan a large protest Monday.

A U.S. spokesman said some of the Americans who left for Thailand would return in the next week and others were "standing by" for possible return.

Among those departing were about 10 U.S. Marine guards, who took along American flags and flagstaves. Just three Marines remained to guard the embassy. One other U.S. military man remained in Laos — Lt. Col. Leonard Wood, acting chief of the defense attaché office.

Argentina vote today

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Argentina's powerful trade unions will decide Monday whether to support President Isabel Peron's order to roll back huge wage increases won this month.

The unions have been feuding openly with Mrs. Peron, who has just marked the first anniversary of her elevation to the Argentine presidency.

The three million-member General Labor Confederation — CGT — said regional and national leaders will meet throughout the country to define their policy.

Some sources said the union could call another general strike in a nation already harshly hit by falling production.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Peron's government was shaken by the resignation of Labor Minister Ricardo Otero on Saturday. He quit an hour after the president made a television speech in which she ordered the wage increases slashed and said that "labor and political leaders do not understand well the gravity of the situation."

Congressional leaders also seemed to defy Mrs. Peron's government by voting Saturday to eventually elect a senate president. If the occasion should arise, the senate president would be Mrs. Peron's successor.

Senators in Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) — A group of U.S. senators arrived in Moscow for an official visit Sunday night and quickly met with 17 Moscow Jews in a crowded hotel room for a two-hour discussion of Jewish emigration.

Sens. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., and Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., were hosts for the talks and Javits said later, "we wanted to find out all we could about the facts — the current status of emigration."

Newsman were barred from the session in Javits' room at the Rossiya Hotel, but both the Jews and the ten senators who attended all or part of the meeting did talk briefly to newsmen afterward.

Fourteen American senators flew here aboard a special Air Force plane for a four-day visit and it is considered likely that they will have a chance to confer with Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev.

Price, mob controls

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, in an apparent bid to win popular support, ordered tough price controls Sunday. But officials reported continuing scattered resistance to her emergency rule decree to head off national agitation for her ouster.

Vandals attacked property and threw stones at buses in the key states of Bihar and Gujarat and one mob pelted police during an attempt to force shopkeepers to join a general strike, the government spokesman said.

He added that the violence was limited to a few outbursts and described the country as calm despite last week's call by the non-Communist opposition for a nationwide struggle beginning Sunday.

The agitation was intended to bring pressure on Mrs. Gandhi to resign from office while appealing a conviction of violating election laws in her 1971 campaign for Parliament.

Teen-age tolerance urged Poor sports in Quad war?

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Daily Iowan has looked into accusations made by students in the Summer Science Training Program against the UI Summer Camp, in a letter published in the DI June 27 entitled: "Bad Sports or Just Camp."

By LORI NEWTON
Staff Writer

Students from the UI Summer Sports Camp, which is in its trial year and doing very well, according to several sources, have been accused of "wrecking" the Quadrangle dormitory.

The accusations were made in a letter to The Daily Iowan from Arthur G. Batiste, a student in the Summer Science Training Program.

The letter was undersigned by 29 high school students who are also enrolled in the science program.

The letter, dated June 21, was also sent to Dick Schultz, director of the Sports Camp.

However, Schultz did not receive a copy of the letter until June 26 because, according to one of the science students, "somehow the first copy got lost."

The three primary complaints contained in the letter were:

—That the Summer Sports Camp students have left the Quadrangle dormitory canteen in a "deplorable condition," resulting in the canteen being locked at midnight and not reopened until 6 a.m.

—That while the Summer Sports Camp students have been lined up in the Quadrangle main lounge waiting for meals, they have lined up chairs, "played choo-choo train," and thrown furniture, sofa cushions, trash and ashtrays on the floor.

—And that Sports Camp participants had put ketchup and mustard packets into a $400 microwave oven and broke it.

Charles Gill, Quadrangle manager, said he had received no "registered complaints" concerning the dorm. However, he said he had held a meeting with two resident assistants associated with the science program. The meeting was held after Gill received complaints from other Quadrangle personnel and after he found a sign on the door of the canteen saying: "SPORTS: camp. . . We, of Quad would appreciate it if you would not mess up our canteen. If this does continue, other action will be taken. Thank you. Quad residents." Gill said the canteen has mixed up with the summer science and regular summer students eating in the other line.

"There has been no broken furniture, only rearrangement," Gill said. "But this occurs even when our regular university students are living here. The sports campers are not ruining the dorm."

Gill said that another lounge on the fourth floor of Quadrangle has been opened this summer for the resident of said that the malfunction resulted from a disorder in the oven's mechanical functioning, and was not caused by the campers' activities.

Gill said he had contacted Schultz around 9 a.m. last Wednesday concerning the complaints made against the campers. At that time Schultz said he was not aware that there was "any particular problem," and that he hadn't received any complaints against the sports campers.

Gill said, "An obvious lack of communication is the problem."

However, Keith Milner, assistant director of the sports camp, said last Thursday that Schultz had already been notified of the problems and that the campers "had been talked to and everything was solved."

But, Batiste claims resident of the Quadrangle are still having problems and that now the campers are spitting on doors and down stairwells.

"We don't have to put up with this," he said. "I'm going directly into Dick Schultz's office at Jessup Hall tomorrow (last Friday) and talk to him personally."

"I'm really pissed off at the way they screw up our dorm," Schultz said Sunday he had not heard anything from Batiste.

"Personally," he said, "I don't feel the letter or their actions are worthy of a reply. If they had a problem they should have gotten a hold of me or other staff members."

Schultz said his staff has checked into the accusations made by the science students as much as they could, but Schultz added, they had found nothing to substantiate the claims made against the sports campers.

Gill said, "I think considering the age and bloom of kids around, we've had very little problems at all."

Schultz said, "We don't want to put down their (the science students') program. The kids will just have to learn to tolerate each other."

I think considering the age and bloom of kids around, we've had very little problems at all.

always been locked from midnight until 6 a.m. in the summer, as part of a "yearly routine" to protect against vandalism in the dorm. Gill said the closing of the canteen is not due to the alleged vandalism of the summer sports campers.

"The canteen is used quite a bit. I think considering the volume of people that flow through the canteen daily, the mess is not at all excessive," Gill said.

Kevin Hennessy, one of the summer science students who signed the letter to the DI said, "they turn over wastebaskets and burn holes in tables in the canteen. I think they even get wastebaskets from other places and bring them in and turn them over."

"But now we follow the sports kids into the canteen and sit and watch them. If there are five or six of us, they usually don't do anything," Hennessy said.

Gill said the sports campers are welcome in Quadrangle just as is anyone else, students or the general public.

Gill explained that the summer sports campers line up in the main lounge of Quadrangle before meals to keep things orderly.

"We don't want to get them

Quadrangle because the summer sports students have occupied the main lounge frequently.

Rob Nora, another one of the science students who signed the letter said, "We have to stand in line to wait to eat, why can't they? I think they act like a bunch of snivelling snobs," he said.

Brian Awbrey, a resident assistant for the summer science students, said he saw sports campers put ketchup and mustard packets into the microwave oven.

Batiste said he had seen the same thing occur, but added that they had broken the oven.

Gill said the oven had malfunctioned and was out of order for a few days, but he said the problem was not caused by the sports campers.

Scott Cragain, another who signed the letter, said, "but ever since they put the ketchup and mustard in the oven the start button hasn't been working right; and I'll swear to that."

Leonard Milder, manager of vending services at the university, verified Gill's claim that there was no damage done to the microwave oven. Milder

Attorney: malpractice blame lies with public, professions

By VANCE HORNE
Staff Writer

The present medical malpractice insurance crisis is due to irresponsibility among doctors, greed among lawyers and unrealistic expectations among patients, said Mark Olson, an attorney and director of medical-legal affairs at the University of Chicago Hospitals and Clinics.

Olson described the malpractice insurance problem as a matter of "near unavailability" of coverage for either hospitals or individual doctors at affordable prices. In some cases, the premiums for hospitals amount to $10 a day per bed and for individual doctors, the premiums can run into the tens of thousands of dollars, Olson told the Iowa Society of Hospital Public Relations Directors at University Hospitals Friday.

Even with these premiums, the insurance companies "are going to take an enormous bath in 1975," Olson said. He estimated that for every dollar in premiums, the companies will pay out $2 in settlements.

Olson said the origin of the malpractice crisis comes from "a reservoir of medical negligence" which is now being uncovered, leading to high settlements and high premiums.

This negligence often went unchallenged in the past because of apathetic health consumers, Olson said.

Also, the friendly family doctor hindered malpractice suits. One did not sue one's friends, Olson said.

On the other hand, the modern doctor is often an uncommunicative and insensitive specialist, who may exhibit a professional irresponsibility which casts him in the role of the patient's adversary, he said.

The recent doctors' strikes in California, Alaska, and New York have further angered the public by endangering lives, nearly driving several private hospitals into bankruptcy, and by illustrating that doctors are not living up to their own code of professional ethics, Olson said.

Moreover, whenever a patient feels he might have a chance to sue for damages, there is always a lawyer willing to encourage him, Olson said.

"Attorneys are not stupid. They can divide a million dollars as quickly as anyone else," he said.

Olson referred to this kind of greed as "the lottery mentality," both on the part of the lawyer and the patient. He added that lawyers and patients forget that the idea of malpractice settlements is to "compensate a patient for losses due to negligence, not to make him wealthy for life."

Juries reinforce this opportunism by awarding generous awards, which in Chicago averages $1 million for permanent injuries, Olson said.

"Everyone has lost the sense of what is fair compensation," he said.

The latest and perhaps the most important cause of the malpractice insurance crisis is the "Marcus Welby syndrome," Olson explained. He said that "doctors have created a level of expectancy in patients that is not to be believed." Whenever medical results do not live up to this expectancy, there is likely to be a negligence suit, he added.

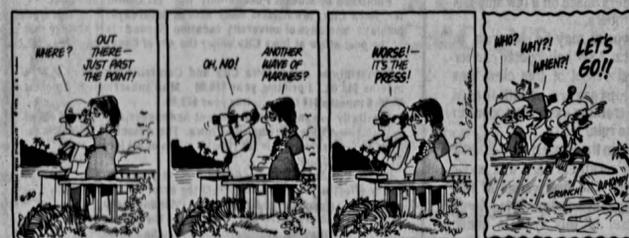

As a partial solution to the problem of the high premiums for malpractice insurance, Olson suggested that every state legislature establish an appellate review system for any large awards of money given to patients by a jury.

Also, he urged the legal and medical professions begin to police themselves more closely. There is great damage being done by the small percentage of each profession which is incompetent, greedy or dishonest, he said.

Olson insisted that the blame for the high malpractice premiums must be laid at the door of both professions.

There is often only one difference between the medical and legal professions, he said, "In the one it is life or limb that is stolen; in the other, it is money."

The Fragile Flower

As political systems go democracy is a rather frail institution, and last week we witnessed just how quickly a democratic government can go under. India's Prime Minister Indira Gandhi had in a matter of a few hours destroyed the 27 years of democracy in India.

Mrs. Gandhi was facing her own mini-Watergate in the outgrowth of her conviction two weeks ago by a state court for illegal use of government personnel in her campaign for re-election in her home district in 1971. As Indian political corruption goes, the crime Mrs. Gandhi was convicted of was the American equivalent of a "third rate burglary."

Mrs. Gandhi's conviction — which forces her by law to resign her seat in the Indian Parliament and the prime ministership — was, like Watergate, trapped in the crosswinds of social and political pressures which have been building for many years.

The corruption and general incompetency of the ruling Congress Party and the governmental bureaucracy had reached the breaking point in India. The court battle by her 1971 election opponent had been waged for three years and no one really expected Mrs. Gandhi to be convicted for doing something that most members of the Congress Party did regularly in elections.

But she was convicted, and the irony of India's most powerful leader being brought to her knees by a lowly state court was compounded by the fact that Mrs. Gandhi is of the Brahmin caste and her opponent was a member of lowest group in the Hindu caste system, an "untouchable."

But Mrs. Gandhi refused to resign, and on Thursday she ordered the arrest of her political opponents. By the weekend, not only was the normally free and open Indian press censored but upwards of 900 members of Mrs. Gandhi's "loyal opposition" were in jail. Indian democracy had died in a matter of hours.

The odds of Indian democracy returning to normal are not very good, Mrs. Gandhi's comments to the contrary. Democracy is a fragile flower. And the Indian leader did not merely break off the blossom, she ripped the plant out by the roots.

Adm. Gorshkov and the Rise of the Soviet Navy

by William Flannery

Adm. Sergey Georgievich Gorshkov, Commander in Chief of the Soviet Navy is a short, stocky 65-year-old grandfather who is facing the mandatory retirement age for senior Russian military officers. In appearance and general temperament, this Ukrainian is stereotypical of what Westerners consider to be the "Russian military type."

But he is far more than that; Adm. Gorshkov is responsible for developing the Russian navy from a limited coastal defense force to the world's second most powerful sea-going military power.

Gorshkov's naval career is atypical if one attempts to compare it to his American or European counterparts. At the age of 31 — when most of his Western contemporaries were hoping to get a crack at being an executive officer on a destroyer — Gorshkov was advanced to the rank of Rear Admiral in the wake of the Stalinist purges of the late 1930s and the German invasion of 1941.

But more important than being a flag rank officer for a "mere" 34 years is the fact that Gorshkov has been commander in chief of the Soviet fleet since 1956. In the same time period, there have been in the U.S. Navy 10 different secretaries of the Navy and six chiefs of naval operations. Since Gorshkov's duties clearly overlap these two American offices, it quickly is apparent just how much power and influence he has had over the development of the Soviet fleet in his 19 years as Admiral of the Fleet.

Stalin's Navy

Since the time of Peter the Great, Russia has maintained one of the larger fleets in Europe, but the 20th century has seen great fluctuations in strength and strategic outlook of the Russian-Soviet navies. At the hands of Adm. Togo, the Russian navy suffered a defeat at the battle of Tsushima straits during the Russo-Japanese War of 1904-05 which — up until the bombing of Pearl Harbor — ranked as the greatest naval reversal of the 20th century.

World War I and the ensuing 1917 revolution-civil war left the new Soviet navy but a shadow of the czarist navy. In the October Revolution and the Civil War, the subsequent Kronstadt naval mutiny in March 1921 left the navy under the pale of the Soviet leadership's suspicion during the 1920s.

During the 1930s, although Stalin pushed the development of a heavy cruiser force — and even the construction of an aircraft carrier — the basic thrust of the Soviet navy was toward a limited coastal defense force rather a deep-sea main battle fleet.

This was due in large part to three main factors. First, the bulk of heavy industry was devoted to civilian needs and reconstruction of the industrial base.

Second, was the development of the "Young School" of naval strategy in the Soviet navy which pushed development of submarines, short-ranged PT-boats, and land-based aircraft, and a general coastal defense tactical outlook as opposed to the traditional Russian naval thinking which saw the need for building a fullscale ocean-going battle fleet of battleships and fast aircraft carriers.

The third constraint was a traditional handicap of the old czarist navy; Russia was a land power and her political and military leadership thought in terms of armies and not navies.

It is this latter factor that has proven to be one of the greatest restraints upon Russian naval development from the time of Peter the Great to the present. Overcoming the purely military (e.g. land orientation) vs. "naval" strategic thinking has been Adm. Gorshkov's greatest battle in his career.

The war on the Eastern Front, in which Russian mass blunted, then destroyed technological superiority of the Nazi armies ranks as one of history's most massive and brutal campaigns. However, the role of the Soviet navy was tertiary. Serving in close support of the Red Army, the navy's greatest accomplishments were the numerous coastal and river amphibious assaults it conducted during the war.

During the post-war years of 1945-54, Stalin again pushed the development of a large conventionally-orientated fleet built around heavy cruisers and submarines. When Stalin died in early 1953, the Soviet leadership very quickly began to scrap the old leader's dream of constructing a conventional surface fleet that would rival the United States Navy.

The building of a massive submarine fleet, however, begun in the early Cold War period, did continue at a high rate. In the last 30 years the Soviet navy has traditionally maintained the world's largest sub fleet. At present, the Soviet navy has 245 cruise missiles and attack subs on active duty as opposed to 73 attack subs in the USN.

(It should be noted, however, that the Russians maintain a larger number of limited range diesel-powered subs as opposed to nuclear power ones; Soviet's 70 nuclear, 175 diesel to the USN's 61 nuclear, 12 diesel. Also it should be noted that the strategic nuclear missile subs for both nations are not included in these figures.)

The Changing Threat

In 1956, shortly after his rise to power, Khrushchev began a systematic reduction of the size of the Soviet armed forces, attempting to replace quantity with quality in weaponry systems. Among the changes Khrushchev made was the promotion of Adm. Gorshkov to the head of the Soviet Navy. Gorshkov's job was to dismantle Stalin's ocean going fleet and revert the navy back to a coastal defense force.

But at this particular point in the Cold War, a number of changes in the United States Navy and its strategic nuclear strike ability took place which encouraged Gorshkov to totally revamp Soviet naval thinking.

The United States began deploying new and longer ranged jet bombers on board its aircraft carriers that would allow the Soviet Union to be attacked from carriers in the Mediterranean Sea and North Atlantic. Second, there was a rapid improvement in the American anti-submarine warfare (ASW) ability. Third, was the development of nuclear power submarines and long range nuclear missiles which could be fired from subs.

The latter two developments were areas in which the Soviets were also placing a great deal of time and money in attempting to keep up with the Americans.

"...it was not the failure of the Soviet navy to counteract the American naval blockade of Cuba during the 'Missiles of October' that caused the expansion of the Russian fleet, it was the developing threat of the long-range air power of the American navy in the mid-1950s."

It quickly became apparent to Gorshkov, and to other high-ranking Soviet naval officers, that in order to counter this new long-range naval threat the Russian navy would have to expand its area of operations to include the Mediterranean, the North Atlantic, and the North Pacific.

It is often theorized by many Western naval observers that the Soviet drive for a full scale, long range, ocean going navy came about in the aftermath of the Soviet Union's inability to counter the American naval blockade during the Cuban missile crisis of October 1962.

Others however, including Norman Polmar, the editor of Janes' Fighting Ships, maintain that when one takes a close look at the time lag involved in the design, development, and deployment of Soviet surface ships it becomes apparent that Gorshkov made the decision for a forward deployment of the Soviet navy about 1956.

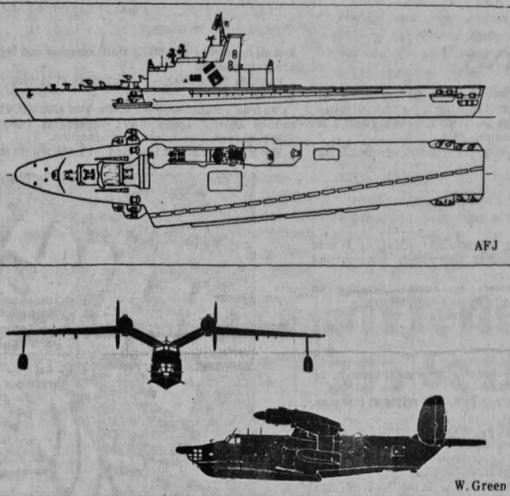

It is therefore more likely that it was not the failure of the Soviet navy to counteract the American naval blockade of Cuba during the "Missiles of October" that caused the expansion of the Russian fleet as it was the changing nature of the long-range air power of the American navy in the mid-1950s.

The Soviet navy began its first tentative attempts at long-range deployment of its surface ships in 1961. In 1964, the Soviet Mediterranean squadron was set up on a continuing basis. In 1968 the first Soviet warships were deployed in the Indian Ocean. More than likely, this latter deployment was to counteract the U.S. Polaris missile subs which were being redeployed in the area since the new longer ranged Polaris A3 missiles — and the soon to be operational Poseidon missile of even longer range — would be able to hit a good share of the USSR from this ocean.

From 1961 up to the present, Gorshkov has pushed the use of deep sea maneuvers as a key part of Soviet naval training. In these exercises the operational training center around ASW drills or attacks upon aircraft carriers.

In the world-wide naval exercise "Okean" held in 1970 (to coincide with the 100th anniversary of Lenin's birth), the Soviet fleet's largest maneuver, ASW and anti-carrier operations figured highly in the training plan.

Under Gorshkov's leadership the Soviet Union developed the world's second largest surface fleet. But one should be very careful in attempting to compare the statistics of the U.S. and Soviet navies. Each fleet is designed around radically different strategic and tactical schools of thought, as well as very different weaponry systems.

Since the 1890s, the USN has followed a "sea control" line of strategic thinking much like the British Royal Navy did in the 18th, 19th, and early 20th centuries. This thinking — expounded upon in the turn of century writings of Adm. Alfred Thayer Mahan, USN — is an offensive strategy grounded upon the premise the U.S. Navy must totally destroy the enemy's fleet in the enemy's home waters in order to protect U.S. merchant shipping and the "freedom of the seas." Since World War II, the USN has based the implementation of this strategic policy by centering its offensive battle tactics on the striking power of the aircraft carrier.

Although the Soviet Navy has gone to a forward deployment, reached operational service. But given the fact that it has a 550 foot-long angled flight deck, many western observers believe that the Soviets may attempt to operate vertical-short takeoff and landing (V-STOL) strike fighters similar to the British Hawker-Siddeley Harrier. If this comes about the "Kiev" will be the Soviet Fleet's first true aircraft carrier and this could signal a real change in Soviet naval strategy and tactics.

It is interesting to note that Gorshkov did not give any meaningful insight into Soviet thinking on carriers in his extensive series of articles in the Soviet naval journal Morskoi Sbornik (Naval Digest). This 54,000 word series (entitled "Navies in War and Peace") was published over the course of a year from February 1972 to February 1973 and was an in-depth Marxist study of modern naval history.

Many western naval writers have compared the Gorshkov series with the writings of the American sea power advocate Adm. Alfred Thayer Mahan of 80 years ago. There are many overlapping similarities in their writings. Both considered a large deep-sea navy important for the maintenance of national power. Both defined sea power in broad terms to include the development of a strong merchant marine. Both considered that sea power could be used effectively in peacetime for "showing the flag" and implementing a nation's foreign policy. And both considered the careful study of new technologies and their influence upon naval weaponry to be of critical importance.

A Few Observations

Gorshkov has been the commander of the Red Navy longer than any other man in the history of the Soviet Navy. In 1956, when Gorshkov took command of the navy, it was little more than a coastal defense force with a handful of old cruisers — some of which were dated from the time of the czars. In the 19 years since then, he has developed the Soviet Navy into the second most powerful fleet in the world.

Although many Western politicians and military writers have been quick to charge that the Soviets have begun to take command of the seas away from the West, the hard facts would tend to prove otherwise.

Despite the massive improvement in the Soviet Navy under Gorshkov's hand, the Russian fleet still remains basically a "sea denial force" rather than a "sea control force" and even with the development of such vessels as the aircraft carrier "Kiev" it will be many years before the Soviets can even begin to have the same type of air support than U.S. and other western fleets take for granted.

Also, Gorshkov, for all his efforts, cannot change the basic nature of Russian geography. The Soviet navy is subdivided into four fleets (Baltic, Black Sea, Northern, and Pacific) and each faces the very serious tactical problem in times of war in attempting to fight their way out of extremely narrow bodies of water in order to reach the high seas. (e.g. the Danish straits, the Bosphorus-Dardanelles, and the Tsushima Strait, etc.)

It is ironic that the position of the present Soviet Navy is not unlike that of the German Imperial Navy before the First World War. It is a highly modern fleet, trapped by geography, untested in battle, and is attempting to challenge the world's largest navy.

At Ak-Sar-Ben

Master Derby falls short

By CORNELIA GUEST Staff Writer

Gray Bar, at odds of 15-1 won the $106,375 Omaha Gold Cup at Ak-Sar-Ben Saturday, defeating heavily favored Preakness winner Master Derby, who finished third.

Owned and trained by Jack Van Berg of Columbus, Neb., Gray Bar stayed near the front of the 11-horse field for the entire race, pulling away in the stretch to beat George Weasel's My Juliet by two lengths. Gray Bar's winning time was 1:43.

Golden Chance Farm's Master Derby, ridden by Darrell McHargue, appeared to be gaining ground in the stretch, but the move came too late. Master Derby finished third by a neck.

The presence of the popular Preakness winner lured a record crowd of 30,303 to Ak-Sar-Ben. The $106,375 purse was the largest ever at the track, and the mutual handle of $2,020,871 was the second highest in the track's history. The 1 1/2 mile Gold Cup was the first stakes victory for Gray Bar, who paid $30.60 to win. The 3-year-old gray gelding won $58,506.25 for Van Berg, who had never had a winner of a $100,000 race before.

Gray Bar's assigned jockey, the controversial Mary Bacon, chose to ride instead in California Saturday, so Van Berg picked Kenny Jones to replace her.

"He rode a perfect race," Van Berg told the D.I. Van Berg, who had bought Gray Bar at "a bargain" at the New Orleans Fairgrounds earlier this season, said, "I was asking an awful lot from him."

Van Berg said he plans to race Gray Bar next in the President's Cup Handicap at Ak-Sar-Ben July 12.

And what of Master Derby, the son of Dust Commander, being beaten by a gelding and a filly? No problems for now. His owner, Mrs. Verna Lehmann, will be receiving $50,000 from the New York Racing Association (NYRA) for not running her colt in the Ruffian-Foolish Pleasure match race June 6 at Belmont Park. The NYRA made the settlement after being unable to include the horse in a race with Foolish Pleasure and Avatar.

Peck pedals past pack in state race

Despite a blowout and a consequent bicycle change with seven laps to go in the race, Tom Peck of Mason City came back to win the Senior Men's Iowa Bicycle Championship Sunday at McHose State Park in Boone.

Gary Visser of Ames finished the 102.3 mile race a mere two bicycle lengths behind Peck to gain second place, and Kevin Suter of Mason City, who led the race for the first 50 miles, finished on Visser's shoulder for third. Iowa City's Scott Dixon took fourth.

Peck's blowout occurred with over 20 miles left in the race, and dropped him 35 seconds behind the leaders. But mounting his brother's bicycle, which happened to be handy, Peck re-entered, and on the next three-mile lap he was five seconds in the lead. His winning time was 4 hours, 26 minutes.

Defending state champion Dale Hallberg suffered chain breakdowns on the first two laps and was forced to withdraw from the race.

By virtue of their top finishes, Peck, Visser, Suter and Dixon all qualified for the National Bicycle Championships to be held in Milwaukee July 26.

Peck and Suter, both of whom raced for the LCW Roberts Bicycle Club of Las Cruces, N.M., over the winter, are also possible Olympic qualifiers. Peck has 16 and Suter 19 of the 25 points needed to qualify for next year's Olympic trials.

British heavyweight champ Joe Bugner relaxes during a training session Sunday at Kuala Lumpur. His bout against Muhammad Ali begins at 9 p.m. CDT today.

Ali is sentimental favorite of Malaysians, bookies

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — This site of the recent world field hockey championships, a sport very narrow in scope when it comes to attracting worldwide attention, will serve as the stage for one of the world's best known personalities, Muhammad Ali, Tuesday morning.

The man, who regained the heavyweight title from George Foreman in the early morning darkness in Africa, will meet Joe Bugner for breakfast here.

The scheduled 15-round fight will start about 9.30 local time, which will be about 10 p.m. EDT Monday.

It will be seen on closed circuit television in the United States and will be televised live and on a delayed basis in about 59 other countries as the final third of a championship tripleheader.

The other two bouts, which will originate from Madison Square Garden in New York, will feature middleweight champion Carlos Monzon against Tony Licata and light heavyweight champion Victor Galindez against Jorge Ahumada.

Ali is a solid betting favorite, 3-1 by London bookmakers. He also is the sentimental choice among the Malaysians, who have not seen a professional fight for about 30 years.

But Ali's hold on the Malaysian public has slipped. In the latest public opinion poll conducted by Survey Research Malaysia, Ali was the choice of 50 per cent. Bugner got 40 per cent, with 10 per cent undecided.

And the women of Malaysia picked Bugner as the best looking, 43 per to 42 per cent, with 15 per cent undecided.

This will be Ali's third defense of the title he regained by knocking out Foreman in eight rounds last Oct. 30. It also will be his 16th title fight.

The first two fights will not be seen in Malaysia but the Ali fight will be televised locally.

Bill McAuliffe ROOTING!

Malaysia is an unlikely place for a heavyweight championship bout. But considering the nature of the champion, nothing can really be considered too bizarre.

One almost thinks Muhammad Ali would be a legend even if he'd never punched anyone. He's come at us from so many directions for so many years, and with such presence, that he'd have been hard to ignore even if he remained Cassius Clay, the Louisville Slugger. John Lennon might even have had to admit that he's more popular than, well, the Beatles ever were.

HE CAME INTO prominence, of course, as an Olympic champion at Rome in 1960. Four years later, at age 21, he became the heavyweight champion of the world by knocking out the supposedly impervious Sonny Liston. He became a heavyweight personality not just by virtue of his feat in the ring, but by actually having predicted he would do it and precisely when he would do it.

And he was bold enough to do it all over again the next year.

He was the biggest braggart ever to traffic in athletics. Foolhardy, even his brightest admirers thought. Cruising for a fall.

But remarkably it never came. He seemed magically immune to misfortune. He became a Muslim, and he changed his name to something as befitting to a heavyweight champion as a trombone to a duck hunter. Still, he beat everybody, fighting like no other heavyweight before him — with liveness and grace, and an irrepressible wit.

His draft experience is still debatable — no one knows if the authorities were out to put the screws on him once and for all, just as no one knows the true depth of his religious convictions. At any rate, the monument he was had come under attack.

Was he changed by the experience? Again, impossible to gauge. He seemed humble when he came out. He went up against Frazier and lost sickeningly. Ali on the floor.

HE WON A few more coming back, then lost to Norton. Ali with a broken jaw. Ali unable to talk. Time seemed to be running out.

He fought some more, at times grossly out of shape. But he got it all back against George Foreman, the cannonball who lifted Joe Frazier off his feet and put him on the mat in one round.

He didn't "whup" Foreman. He drove him crazy. He played a new game, fought a new fight — against the ropes.

Maybe it was that Ali knew his butterfly style of fighting wouldn't do for a man his age. But amazingly, he did what no one thought he would ever do — he took it. Took every powerful punch George Foreman could concoct, and took his championship back in the process. He remained physically unscarred, figuratively untouched. He became a genius.

Muhammad Ali has given us still another piece to chew on as he faces European champion Joe Bugner. Ali says it'll be his last fight. A ploy? Of course.

But only Ali knows how it will work. And in that, he will remain the Greatest.

King wants Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Billie Jean King says this is her final major tennis tournament, and she would love to wind it up with her sixth Wimbledon championship.

Chris Evert is going for her second straight women's singles title, while her steady beau, Jimmy Connors, also is after his second consecutive men's singles crown. If Evert and Connors both succeed, it would be the first time since the challenge round was abolished in 1921 that both the previous year's champions won two years in a row.

Both Chrissie and Billie Jean are in the same half of the draw. Ms. King, who also has been runner-up at the All-England Club here three times in her 13 appearances, is seeded third.
