

Chinese warn Ford

'Detente' brings sharp rhetoric

Time for Teng

President Gerald Ford is greeted by Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping as he arrives at the Great Hall of the People Tuesday morning for the opening round of talks between the two leaders.

PEKING (AP) — President Ford begins talks Tuesday with Chinese leaders who, at the start of his visit, warned him about what they see as the dangers of detente with the Soviet Union.

The warning note was sounded by Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping in a toast at a lavish banquet at which Ford was honored just four hours after his arrival. Teng, without mentioning the Soviet Union directly, referred to it as "the country which most zealously preaches peace but is the most dangerous source of war."

The vice premier, who is acting as premier during the illness of Chou En-lai, added:

"Rhetoric about detente cannot cover the stark reality of the growing danger of war."

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Ford considered Teng's remarks "frank but nonprovocative." Ford offered no banquet toast of his own, but did give a speech.

With American officials having indicated before Ford left Washington that the President and his hosts were unlikely to agree about detente, Ford and Teng found common ground in pledging continued efforts to normalize relations between their countries and to oppose big power hegemony, or the domination of neighbors through military force.

Teng made direct mention of former President Richard M. Nixon's role in re-establishing diplomatic contacts between China and the United States. Because of Chinese affection for Nixon, it was considered significant that Ford's airport welcome Monday afternoon was somewhat more elaborate than Nixon received when he made his trail-blazing trip nearly four years ago.

That the Chinese leadership attached great importance to Ford's visit seemed underscored by the appearance of Chairman Mao Tse-tung's wife, Chiang Ching, to pose with him before the welcoming banquet held in the massive Great Hall of the People. Chiang Ching had not been seen in public for several months.

Perhaps more remarkable was the appearance at the picture-taking session of Chu Teh, a leader of the Chinese army who, as chairman of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress, is regarded as China's closest equivalent to a president.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger told reporters that in all his visits to China he had never before met the 89-year-old Chu Teh.

It was thought unlikely that Premier Chou's health would permit him to meet with Ford, but a session with Mao was expected before Ford leaves China on Friday. Mrs. Chou was waiting at the President's borrowed residence in a VIP compound here to greet him on his arrival.

Ford told her he was concerned by Chou's illness and asked her to give him his warmest regards. She said she too has been in uncertain health in recent months, but did not say what ailed her. The visiting President, who came here as the Republican House leader in 1972, noted in his banquet address the moves taken by Nixon and Kissinger to set up a dialogue between the United States and China, and declared:

"I take this occasion to reaffirm my commitment to the objectives and the principles that emerged from those first steps and specifically to the normalization of our relations."

Ford also said that the United States and China "have a mutual interest in seeing that the world is not dominated by military force or pressure ..."

He said that the current situation requires "strength, vigilance and firmness," but rejected the idea that China might dictate how the United States should approach the problem of detente.

"In pursuing our objectives, each of us will of course determine our policies and methods according to our differing positions in the world and our perceptions of our respective national interests," Ford said.

Joining most of the top Chinese leadership at the banquet for Ford, wife Betty, daughter Susan and other members of his party were more than 600 guests who dined plentifully on delicacies ranging from consommé to shark fin soup.

Ford, apparently enjoying himself, wielded chopsticks expertly and a military band played American melodies, including "America the Beautiful" and the theme from "Billy the Kid."

6 per cent merit system raise proposed

By RANDY KNOPER
Asst. News Editor

A proposed plan for a 6 per cent across-the-board pay increase for the Board of Regents' merit system employees was released to UI workers Monday.

The increase is part of the annual revision of the pay plan for Regents' non-professional employees prepared by the Regents' staff.

Current inflation and job market trends were used to arrive at the 6 per cent figure, according to the memo from Wayne Richey, the Regents' executive secretary.

Among the evidence Richey cited for the 6 per cent figure is the Consumer Price Index inflation rate for 1976-77, which is expected to be from 6 to 7 per cent.

These predictions, coupled with last year's pay increases "which exceed the inflation rates thus far experienced in 1975-76, and were at least as large as the growth in competitive wage rates," should cover next year's inflation and "still reward substantially increased productivity," Richey said.

The pay plan immediately drew alternative recommendations from the UI Staff Council.

Among the recommendations, a statement prepared by Karen Lafrenz, Staff Council president, asks for a 9.5 per cent across-the-board pay increase.

LaFrenz said she arrived at this figure by multiplying a recent quarterly inflation figure of 2.3 per cent.

The 6 per cent increase is in addition to the average 4 per cent increase Regents' merit system employees receive as they advance to higher steps in the merit pay system.

The Regents are requesting a 9.5 per cent salary increase for faculty, and professional and scientific employees from the legislature.

Employee objections and suggestions for the merit pay plan will be aired at a public hearing scheduled for Saturday in Ames.

The plan, complete with alterations stemming from the hearing, is expected to be approved by the Regents at their December meeting next week in Cedar Falls, and added to the Regents' 1976-77 budget request to the state legislature.

Mary Jo Small, UI assistant vice president for administrative services, said she does not expect the Regents to change the 6 per cent increase after the public hearing, but said other employee requests may be granted.

Besides the higher pay increase, the UI Staff Council has made several other recommendations, including one for a single-policy employer-paid Blue Cross-Blue Shield health insurance for all Regents' employees.

The American Federation for State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME) Local 12, has also set guidelines requesting paid insurance, free parking for staff, and "better leave benefits."

AFSCME has also asked that the across-the-board increase be a dollar amount given equally to all workers, rather than a percentage increase, and that the plan have provisions for additional cost-of-living adjustments during the year.

Richey's recommendation includes a request for funds to increase the employer contribution to health insurance for employees who are members of the Iowa Public Employees Retirement System.

J. Edgar told aides to destroy his files

WASHINGTON (AP) — J. Edgar Hoover's long-time secretary told Congress on Monday that when the Federal Bureau of Investigation's director died in 1972, she systematically destroyed his personal files, "as Mr. Hoover indicated he wanted."

Helen W. Gandy told a House subcommittee that she and another secretary went through all the files in Hoover's inner offices, destroying every one that was marked "personal."

"There were 30 or 32 file drawers. I did not keep a record of how many," she testified. "I tore them up and put them in cartons. They were then taken to the Washington FBI field office to be either incinerated or shredded."

Miss Gandy denied that the files she personally destroyed contained any official FBI business or information on the personal lives of public officials.

However, in contrasting comments, former FBI Asst. Director William C. Sullivan said Hoover's personal files were filled with political and personal information on public figures.

Miss Gandy also said that she did not consider her actions to have violated an order by then acting-Atty. Gen. Richard G. Kleindienst that Hoover's offices be sealed. Kleindienst testified to the subcommittee on government information that upon learning of Hoover's death on May 2, 1972, he ordered that Hoover's suite of offices "be locked and sealed."

"I didn't want to have any records of the FBI left in a position where no one was responsible for them," Kleindienst said. Asked whether he thought Miss Gandy's action violated his order, Kleindienst told committee members: "I'll just have to leave that up to you to draw your own conclusions."

Kleindienst said he didn't pursue the matter because Patrick Gray was soon sworn in as acting FBI director and took responsibility for the files.

Meanwhile, ex-FBI informant Gary Thomas Rowe Jr., said Monday he has told Senate investigators he repeatedly provided advance warnings of Ku Klux Klan attacks against blacks and civil rights workers but the bureau took almost no action to prevent the incidents.

Rowe said in an interview that the FBI knew Klansmen would attack a group of Freedom Riders as they disembarked from their buses in Birmingham, Ala., but agents merely stood by and took photographs of the 1961 incident.

Rowe is scheduled to testify under oath Tuesday before the Senate intelligence committee. A spokeswoman for the committee said Rowe would wear a mask in order to preserve his new identity.

Rowe also said he had second-hand knowledge of the FBI's campaign to defame civil rights leader Martin Luther King, and that he was asked by one agent, "Do you realize Hoover hates him with a purple passion?"

Blasts Security Council Israel okays buffer zone

By The Associated Press

Israel agreed Monday to keep the United Nations buffer zone on the Golan Heights. But the government angrily denounced the U.N. Security Council for "surrender to Syrian extortion" and declared it will take no part in the council's Mideast debate next month because the Palestine Liberation Organization will be invited.

In an eleventh hour compromise Sunday, the council agreed to Syria's demand that the PLO be included in the debate next Jan. 12 and Syria accepted a six-month extension of the U.N. Golan force.

A Palestinian spokesman at the United Nations said the council had thus recognized the PLO "as the sole representative of the people of Palestine," as the General Assembly did last year.

Israeli officials privately voiced concern that the United States had failed to veto the resolution or at least abstain from the vote. They said the government found only "partly satisfactory" an undisclosed explanation cabled to Jerusalem by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

In Jerusalem, police seized 20 students who broke into U.N. headquarters in an attempt to deliver a petition to Maj. Gen. Ensis Silasvuo, commander of U.N. Mideast forces. The students were later released and the state radio quoted them as saying they were beaten by U.N. forces.

The U.N. General Assembly meanwhile began a week's debate on the Middle East. Nonaligned nations readied a resolution calling for an arms embargo against Israel.

The Israeli government, after a six-hour cabinet meeting in Jerusalem, said it would agree to maintain the 1,192-man U.N. Disengagement Observer Force separating Israeli and Syrian troops.

But in its communique it pointedly empowered a committee to decide on "proposals for further settlements on the Golan Heights," rendering the occupied Syrian territory less negotiable than ever.

Israel refuses to negotiate with the PLO, the umbrella organization for Palestinian guerrillas.

The U.N. resolution, passed 13-0, did not specifically invite the PLO to the Mideast debate. But a compromise statement read by the council president said it was "the understanding of the majority" that the guerrilla leadership would be asked to participate. U.S. Ambassador Daniel Patrick Moynihan said the United States was not part of the majority, but that it "can't veto" an invitation to the PLO.

The Syrian government and the PLO both expressed themselves "very satisfied" with what they viewed as a diplomatic success. They and other militant Arab governments heaped bitter criticism on Egypt for signing a second-stage Sinai pact with Israel.

A spokesman for Egypt's President Anwar Sadat termed the renewal of the Golan force "a step forward in escalating the momentum of peacemaking that Egypt has called for. Despite the abuse (of Egypt), the Syrians have come around to what Sadat has advocated all along — taking whatever step best served their interests."

In other Mideast developments:

—Israel pulled out of the occupied Abu Rudeis oil fields on the southwest coast of the Sinai peninsula, completing its withdrawal from Egyptian fields seized in the 1967 war. The Israelis handed the fields over to U.N. troops and Italian technicians Sunday and the Egyptians were moving in Monday.

—Kuwait signed an agreement with British Petroleum and Gulf Oil Co. for full takeover of all oil operations on its soil. Oil Minister Abdul Muttaleb Kazemi said the companies will be paid $50.5 million for their 40 per cent share in the Kuwait Oil Co. The figure is about $15 million less than had been expected.

The Persian Gulf emirate paid $112 million last year to gain 60 per cent ownership of the company and it has been negotiating for months for the remaining shares, owned 50-50 by Gulf and BP.

—Egypt threatened to hold up a 1976 trade agreement with the Soviet Union unless the question of rescheduling its massive debt to Moscow was resolved. A reliable source in Cairo said talks between the two sides to resolve the issue would resume when Finance Minister Ahmed Abu Ismail returns from London later this week.

—An Israeli military court in the occupied Gaza Strip sentenced an Arab to 25 years in prison for planting an explosive device on an Israeli bus nine months ago. The bomb failed to explode.

European talk tests unity

ROME (AP) — Common Market leaders opened a two-day summit meeting Monday in a major test of their will to overcome nationalistic and economic differences and unify 250 million Europeans.

Britain's insistence on breaking ranks and having its own seat at energy and economic talks scheduled to begin Dec. 16 in Paris, the election of a Europe-wide parliament and plans for a Common Market passport topped an informal agenda of the nine leaders.

Setting a tone for the summit, French President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing declared in a preconference speech that the "European community we are building has happily made military rivalry among its states anachronistic." But, he said, "peaceful rivalry" is indispensable.

The leaders of Britain, France, West Germany, Italy, Ireland, Luxembourg, Belgium, The Netherlands and Denmark met under tight security in the 17th century Barberini Palace, a baroque masterpiece designed by Bernini.

As they drove up in a motorcade, about 100 demonstrators held up placards demanding European elections across national boundaries by 1978 and free elections in Spain. Hundreds of police and soldiers fanned out in nearby streets and no incidents were reported.

British Prime Minister Harold Wilson's demand to go it alone in economic policy, driving a wedge through the solidarity of the economic community, figured to dominate the opening day talks.

Beame: still in charge

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — New York Mayor Abraham Beame denied on Monday that new state controls over budget decisions in his financially shaky city had taken operation of the city out of his hands.

"The mayor of New York is still the manager of the city," he told newsmen at the annual meeting of the National League of Cities here. "He still runs the city, and determines priorities. He hires and fires, and develops programs."

In return for state aid to help avert a New York City default, a board composed of state officials, city officials including Beame, and private businessmen, has been given authority over spending levels and borrowing policy in the city.

The feeling of some other mayors was most succinctly put by League President Carlos Romero Barcelo, Republican mayor of San Juan. "Mayor Beame no longer runs New York, and no other city wants to be in that situation," Romero said.

Beame asserted, however, that the board "does not determine priorities. They don't have any input in telling me how money is to be spent."

In interviews at the conference, more than a dozen mayors of both parties have said they doubted other cities would seek the same kind of federal aid which President Ford has proposed for New York. One reason nearly all of them mentioned was the loss of local control which New York has suffered over its budget.

Beame said he thought the city would avert a default, which looms on Dec. 11, if the Congress approves President Ford's plan for federal loans to the city of no more than $2.3 billion in each of three years.

Pitt teachers walk out

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A strike Monday by the city's 3,700 public school teachers is giving 62,000 pupils a head start on the Christmas holiday vacation.

But teachers say they are planning tutoring centers for some pupils if the walkout continues into the new year, and some community organizations are making plans for classes outside schools.

The teachers struck at midnight, overwhelmingly rejecting a last-ditch proposal by the school board of a $1,000 across-the-board salary increase in 1976.

"Everyone is enthusiastic for the strike," said Paul Francis, strike chairman of the Pittsburgh Federation of Teachers.

"We are not hell-bent for any kind of strike," Al Fondy, the PFT president, told cheering teachers Sunday night. "The only thing that stands now between the deterioration of this school system is all of you out there and your union."

A school spokesman said 225 teachers and 187 paraprofessionals reported for work Monday. However, Francis said the union's count showed 125 teachers and 34 paraprofessionals on the job.

Pupils from first grade through 12 were told to report to school at 1 p.m., but the board later said schools would not open.

1st Russian nominated

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — A Russian Orthodox churchman is among nominees to the six-member presidium of the World Council of Churches, the first to be proposed from a Communist-bloc nation, it was learned Monday.

Two women, one a North American and the other an African, also were reported on a nominating committee's slate to be presidents of the interdenominational body, the first women of their continents to be recommended for the top offices.

Although the nominees are to be presented Tuesday to the council's General Assembly, there still are lengthy processes allowing objections, substitute nominations and for any denomination to declare a candidate "unacceptable."

This is deemed possible, but not likely, for the Soviet-bloc churchman.

The assembly represents 286 Protestant, Eastern Orthodox, Anglican and Old Catholic denominations totalling about 500 million members in more than 90 countries.

Student claims Union ignoring students' needs

By LARRY PERL
Staff Writer

The Union is not meeting the needs of students in terms of space allocation and use of rooms and offices, Activities Board member Leslie McKinley, A4, told the Collegiate Associations Council (CAC) Monday night.

McKinley came to CAC with a proposed philosophy for the Union which CAC approved. The proposal reads: "The Iowa Memorial Union is an integral part of the student services at the University of Iowa... The key to the Union is its students... Its services and programs are presented to further the educational development and to complement the classroom experience."

"When you walk into the Union," McKinley said, "it's all businesses. Businesses have most of the offices. The Union management gives priority in scheduling rooms to conferences, rather than student groups."

"In the past the Union was much more student-oriented," McKinley continued. "There used to be a Union board, but it fell apart when the Union lost Director Loren Kottner in 1966."

That board has since been replaced by the Union Advisory Committee, which is composed of five students, two faculty members and two staff people, all of whom report directly to Phillip Hubbard, UI vice-president of student affairs. "This committee is supposed to make policies concerning the Union," McKinley said, "and it's just now starting to do this."

"We're trying to push the educational value of the Union," McKinley added. "Every office and service the Union provides should have some educational value to students. CAC (in the Union) teaches students how to run a meeting. Even the food service has some educational benefit in that it shows people how to set up for a banquet."

Butcher spices sausage with cinnamon and love

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The spicy odors of sausage making still float from Iacopi's meat market in North Beach, where once coriander, cinnamon, fennel, mace, nutmeg, wine and peppers wafted from the back room of every little Italian butcher shop.

But tighter standards, high taxes and costs of production shooed all but a tiny cadre of sausage-stuffers out to the suburbs after World War II to practice the art described in a cookbook 1,700 years ago.

knows that no two sausage makers make the same sausage.

Most of this small production goes to Iacopi's friends who can't bear to face a sausage from a foreign neighborhood or a strange hand. They detect the unspecified ingredient: love. "I have a lot of old customers," Iacopi says.

Another diehard is 78-year-old Fred Casissa, patriarch of the Buon Gusto salami factory, still standing its savory ground after nearly 30 years to produce 50,000 pounds of salamis a month.

"It is my life," said Casissa, a virtuoso who proudly sees each shipment off in the parking lot. At Iacopi's the whirling chopper goes on duty every Friday afternoon. Into the machine go two parts pale pork butt to one part red beef, seasoned differently for a different result.

Into the hot, red Calabrese sausage go chilis, sweet pepper, fennel seed and salt; the sweet white Sicilian sausages get fennel seed, black pepper and salt, while the brown Tuscano variety is ground with garlic, cinnamon, nutmeg, pepper and salt.

The mix emerges from the grinder's pot to be pressed into shimmering intestinal casings. Strings flick dextrously and the long casings are tied off into strands of sausages, ultimately to join olive oil, vegetables, eggs and tomato paste to appease neighborhood appetites. At the salami factory, four parts of lean beef are ground up with one of pork, pork fat, shots of sauterne, and coriander, mace, cinnamon, black pepper and garlic.

The fragrant cloud that results, along with the overhead racks of salami curing underground, wafts onto the street to mingle with the sweet aromas of the neighborhood bakery, barbershop and espresso house, and a Chinese fortune cookie factory.

Minister describes 'riot' at Russel Means' trial

SIoux FALLS, S.D. (AP) — A Lutheran clergyman testified Monday that he saw American Indian Movement leader Russel Means strike a tactical squad member, but he said it was in retaliation for an initial blow by the policeman.

The Rev. William "Walt" Weber, Sioux Falls, said in defense testimony that during Means' riot trial at Sioux Falls he saw the squad member try to lodge a stick under Means' chin before Means struck back.

"All hell broke loose after that," Weber said.

The minister said that he and other Lutheran clergymen meeting at the time for an American Indian Concerns Conference were asked in a telephone call from AIM leader Vernon Bellecourt to view the court proceedings April 30, 1974, at the Minnehaha County Courthouse.

Means is on trial for rioting and injury to a public building for a melee that broke out when tactical squad members were asked to remove spectators in the courtroom that day who would not stand in respect for Judge Joseph Bottum.

Weber said that Bellecourt told him he was afraid of what might happen if spectators were forced to leave the courtroom during hearings on an earlier Custer disturbance.

Bellecourt had testified Monday morning that he asked the Lutheran clergymen to monitor the "racist" court proceedings.

Bellecourt's brother Clyde testified prior to Weber that he had come through Sioux Falls during the last part of April 1974 to offer assistance. He said he heard general talk of demonstrating.

Clyde Bellecourt then testified that Means told persons at a meeting the night before the disturbance that demonstrations would be peaceful because of lack of funds to bail out anyone arrested.

Clyde Bellecourt said volunteer spectators were requested at the meeting because only 20 were allowed in the courtroom. He said there was discussion of legal aspects of not standing for Judge Bottum.

Ed. confab to peer into 21st century

By LORI NEWTON
Staff Writer

This year's 60th Annual Education Conference, sponsored by the UI College of Education, will examine the influence that trends and events of the present will have on education in the future.

The conference will open at 9:45 a.m. today in the Union Ballroom. Dr. Harold Shane, professor of education at Indiana University, will deliver the keynote address, titled "Designing Education in Anticipation of the Twenty-First Century."

Following the keynote address, group sessions will be held on various topics, including programs for the handicapped, learning resources, women in administration, informal education, legal roles and community relations.

One of the prominent events of the two-day conference will be a "Crystal Ball Luncheon" this afternoon. The luncheon will enable participants to dine and converse with an expert in education.

Registration for the conference, which is open to anyone interested in education, will be held at 9 a.m. today in the Union Ballroom lobby. A fee of $7 covers administration, coffee, and all conference events, excluding meals and the social hour. The conference is free for students.

WSUI may join public radio system

By CYRENE NASSIF
Special to the Daily Iowan

WSUI, the university's public radio station, may become part of a statewide public radio network if the Iowa legislature approves a request for the network during its session next year. This will not cause any changes for listeners here, but some of the programs WSUI creates will be broadcast across the state by three new stations.

The State Board of Regents voted in October to support a program that would provide all Iowans with public radio. The network would be a joint effort of the Regents, the State Board of Public Instruction, and the governing board of the Iowa Educational Broadcasting Network (IEBN).

The committee appointed by the Board of Regents to study the possibility of statewide public radio decided that an Iowa educational radio network was feasible because there is presently an FM educational radio in eastern and central Iowa; and broadcast facilities in other parts of Iowa could be used to make this service available to all Iowans with only a reasonable expense for interconnection.

The Regents voted to support funding requests totaling $90,000 (to match $180,000 of funding from the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare) to launch the statewide public network.

The committee proposed that the radio network utilize the four existing FM radio stations at the three state universities. Stations are to be added at Sioux City, Council Bluffs, and Fort Dodge. Also, "repeater translators" would be added, enabling the network to reach

Iowa 2000: envisioning stronger state government

By MARIA LAWLOR
Staff Writer

A state conference focusing on what Iowans want their local and state governments to be like in the year 2000 will be held in the Union Dec. 12.

Iowa Gov. Robert Ray, UI Pres. Willard Boyd, and Sen. John Culver, D-Iowa, will be among 45-50 officials and organizations that will participate in the day-long Commonwealth Conference. The conference is being sponsored by the UI Institute of Public Affairs.

The theme of the conference is "Strengthening State and Local Government to Bring Federalism into Balance — What We Want Iowa state and local Government to Be Like in the Year 2000."

According to Clayton Riggberg, the institute's director, the goal of the conference is to get Iowans discussing, and debating, their ideas on what Iowa governments should look like in 25 years.

"It's our hope that the conference will bring out Iowans' expressing visions and dreams about their governments," Riggberg said. "Not just dreams on how governments should operate, but dreams for creating a better climate of governments."

Ray, Boyd, Sen. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, and Cornelius Bodine Jr., an executive with Iowa Beef Company, will speak during the morning session.

The afternoon will be divided into concurrent discussions concerning national resources, energy, life enhancement and economic development.

The session on natural resources, to be led by Jean Lloyd-Jones of the Iowa League of Women Voters, will concern "Preservation of Iowa's land" and "Resource Recovery." The energy session, led by Ralph Schlenker of Iowa Power and Light Company, will focus on "What are Iowa's Energy Plans?" and "Transportation in Iowa's Future." The life enhancement session, led by Robert Engel, assistant professor of higher education at the UI, will focus on "Lifelong Education" and "Lifelong Health." And the economic development session, led by Eber Eldridge, a professor at Iowa State University, will focus on "Management of Growth in Iowa" and "What will be the Tools for Economic Development?"

The public is being urged to participate in the five panel discussions sessions at the convention, according to John Goldner, an editorial assistant for the institute and a principal planner of the convention. Among organizations participating in the panel sessions are the Iowa League of Women Voters, Iowa Student Public Interest Research Group, Iowa Power and Light Company, the Iowa Department of Transportation and the Rock Island Railroad Company.

A $5 fee will be charged to persons planning to attend the conference and luncheon. Persons who wish to attend just the conference will be charged $3.

40,000 flee to Brazil

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Portuguese are coming by the thousands as refugees and emigres to Brazil, a South American country that speaks their language.

Portuguese-Brazilian societies here say about 40,000 have come here so far this year not only from troubled Portugal itself but also from Mozambique and Angola, two territories in Africa that recently gained independence from the Portuguese.

About 12,000 have fled to Brazil since September from Angola, which gained independence last month in the midst of a civil war in which three native groups are struggling for power.

the entire state.

The Board of Public Instruction would be responsible for the new stations, which would be run by the area community colleges. IEBN would be responsible for the interconnections linking the stations. The four university stations would remain under the control of their respective universities.

It was suggested that the Board of Regents' university radio stations should be considered major sources of program materials created in Iowa for use on the state wide system.

While the operation of the stations would be under local control, a committee "would deal with matters of mutual interest such as exchanging of programming, improvement of the quality of programming, initiation of new types of programming and allocation of costs to the various stations for programming that might be purchased collectively," according to the committee's summary report.

Dr. H.V. Cordier, the director of WSUI, said, "I believe that considering the audience we have now for our station here, we can assume that there will be an audience for the new stations. There are many things we do—like the "All Things Considered Show" which is a news and public service program—that all people should have access to statewide."

Cordier also added that stations with production capability, like the university stations, will make their programs available to the new stations.

Under the proposal, most programming would be cultural and informational. Specialized programming for groups such as the blind, health care personnel and 4-H clubs could be offered on "sub-carrier frequencies."

Spending its way out of a bag

Rest easy, American taxpayer. If the Army doesn't put your tax dollars to ill use on purpose, it will do it by mistake.

Auditors perusing a series of errors in the Army's books have found possible violations of federal law. According to a report issued by the Army's audit agency, "Army procurement appropriations were over-obligated and foreign sales may have been subsidized at the expense of the Army's direct funds." Over-obligations and subsidy are both prohibited by federal law.

According to Asst. Army Sec. Hull, the group in charge of the Army's books, the International Logistics Command, has been under-equipped and swamped with work.

It is not clear exactly how much money the taxpayers shelled out to allow the Army to make illegal progress payments to arms contractors before they had been fully paid by the foreign government. But according to Hull, the largest point of overspending cost $580 million.

The audit reported over and underpricing of $101 million (resulting from the Army's lack of a clear price policy); $56 million in overpricing and $45 million in underpricing.

Costs of such items as test ammunition and transportation were sometimes computed incorrectly, resulting in a possible $26 million overcharge and $24 million undercharge, according to Hull.

It's ironic that a branch of the military, famous for its frequent use of the tax dollar, should be accidentally spending this money because of inadequacies in one of its own departments. And it is entirely avoidable. The Army should correct this situation by doing what it has always done in a tight situation: spend its way out of it.

'Witnessing'

TO THE EDITOR:

We wish to indicate our support for your (Bump Elliott's) action in not allowing religious "witnessing" at halftime at Friday night's basketball game (DI, Nov. 25). We agree with you that religious positions should not be advocated before captive audiences.

We do believe that religious interests and concerns should not be restricted for those who wish to be involved in them, and are happy to see that Mr. Sokol has kept open the possibility of religious programs in public places for those who wish to attend.

Editorial judgment questioned

TO THE EDITOR:

I wish to complain about the lack of maturity and editorial judgment which evidences itself in your front pages.

In your Nov. 21 issue, three full columns were devoted to fiction, while a professor's death, a story on JFK's assassination, and an attempted arson were relegated to inside pages. In former issues, you have devoted front page space to a woman crawling among the boonies with her ROTC squad, to an editorial, and to some reporter gushing his personal experiences about a political rally.

When a prominent psychology professor was found dead while on leave from teaching duties, that story was slotted inside with the movie ads, while you devoted front page space to ridicule of the Dolphin Club queen. Additionally, your Nov. 21 issue devoted as much space to Barf the weather dog as it did to Reagan's presidential announcement.

I really wonder if you know what you are doing. The Daily Iowan is not yours; you only hold it in trust through the appointment of elected representatives on Student Publications, Inc. Please give more consideration to the over-all news needs of your readership. You have yet to demonstrate obvious qualities as a news editor; don't branch into fiction editor until you do.

Up in arms Democracy: whose version?

TO THE EDITOR:

On Nov. 3 Rep. Peter Rodino, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, announced his support of a ban on all handgun ownership in the United States.

This legislation, as well as legislation supported by Rep. Robert McClory, could eliminate the private ownership of all handguns in the United States. McClory's legislation, HR 9763, would make mandatory sentences for citizens who owned handguns. It would open the avenue of police to search the homes of any citizen in the United States for the purpose of confiscation of his personal handgun collections, whether they be antique, target pistols, or a handgun kept for the protection of his property and family.

The problem we have is that of an increasing crime rate in the United States. The problem stems from the fact that 93 per cent of those convicted of a crime on the level of a felony never reach jail.

My contention is that the government could in no way eliminate all the handguns, nor does it have a right to do so. However, I do believe that if a mandatory prison sentence of five years was imposed upon anyone convicted of using a firearm in a crime, the crime rate would decrease.

I would urge our citizens to make their lawmakers understand that they are opposed to any new legislation that would impair their right to purchase and possess firearms lawfully, and at the same time, urge them to draft legislation for mandatory prison sentences for crimes committed with a firearm or dangerous weapon.

Gary Louis, E3
Foster Rd.

EDITOR'S NOTE: HR 9763, according to Jim Conroy of Rep. Ed Mezvinsky's Washington office, would:

—Provide a mandatory jail sentence for "anyone using a gun in the commission of a crime." The sentence would be from two to 10 years for a first offense and five to 20 years for a second offense. The bill does not provide mandatory sentences for citizens owning handguns.

—Provide for registration of handguns, and ban "Saturday Night Specials"—that is, those cheap handguns that are not useful for hunting or target practice, but are primarily used to shoot people.

According to figures from the 1974 Statistical Abstract of the United States, 34,983 persons were convicted of a felony in that year; and of that, 17,540, or slightly over 51 per cent, were imprisoned.

Backfire

Defending the First:

'Be more careful'

Connie Stewart's editorial "Defending the First" (DI, Nov. 26) is very wide of the mark. The First Amendment to the Constitution reads as follows: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances."

I wish especially to call attention to the passage, often ignored today, which says no law can be passed which prohibits the free exercise of religion. (Since the passage of the Fourteenth Amendment, of course, the Bill of Rights has been binding on all levels of government.)

How, then, was it an act of defending the First Amendment to the university to censor Athletes in Action, a group primarily dedicated to spreading the gospel of Christ? The nature and purpose of the group is clearly stated in its literature. If Church and State were the issue, perhaps they shouldn't have been invited in the first place.

I contend that the issue is not Church and State at all. The only action which the university could take which would have the effect of establishing religion would be to make some kind of religious ideas or observances compulsory. The idea that allowing religiously oriented activities to happen on campus constitutes any kind of official blessing or endorsement of any religious ideas will not stand up.

A university is not a political organization any more than it is a religious organization. Yet political speakers, and even political candidates, speak here all the time without the slightest hint that the university endorses their ideas. Just imagine the storm of protest that would result if the university attempted to censor one of them.

There is one difference, of course. The event was not a formal speech, but a basketball game. The argument has therefore been advanced that the spectators at the game would have been a captive audience. I am aware of no law or custom which says that people must stay in their seats during half time, or even during the game, for that matter. Beyond that, college students have developed quite a talent for tuning out what they don't want to hear, such as boring lectures, commencement speeches, etc. The advance publicity for Athletes in Action identified who they are and what their purpose is. Anyone who would be outraged by a Christian witness would probably not go to the game anyway.

The captive audience argument has not fared well at the Supreme Court, where recently laws prohibiting the sale of sexually explicit newspapers in outdoor racks and showing movies with nude scenes at drive-in theaters were declared unconstitutional. Mr. Justice Powell, writing a majority opinion in one case, even wrote that anyone who did not wish to see these things could avert their eyes. So much for the captive argument. The Supreme Court is on record as saying that free expression is more important than the right not to be offended. This is now the law of the land. What the university has done, with Ms. Stewart's approval, is prohibit the free exercise of religion. Proclaiming the gospel to convince other people to believe is an important part of Christianity. This is not unusual. Republicans and Democrats, woman's libbers and male chauvinists, environmentalists and oil company executives, people who want Gerald Ford or Fred Harris or Harold Stassen to be the next President, all do the same thing. I don't understand why Christian evangelism meets with such hostility as it often does, when other ideas are expressed freely in nearly any and all circumstances without anyone batting an eyelash.

The writers of the Bill of Rights realized that any other attitude of the State toward religion except neutrality could lead to tyranny, so they wisely wrote that the State should neither establish nor interfere with it. More recently, the Supreme Court has said, "We agree, of course that the State may not establish a 'religion of secularism' in the sense of affirmatively opposing or showing hostility to religion, thus 'preferring those who believe in no religion over those who do believe.'" (Zorach vs. Clauson)

The university, as a state school, should be more careful in observing the First Amendment, but it has at least been somewhat consistent in its interference with visiting groups. Ms. Stewart, in opposing the university's interference with the Pilobolus dance company and supporting its interference with Athletes in Action, is guilty of a serious double standard, for the issues are the same. In fact, the freedom of artistic expression is only implicit in the Constitution. Freedom of, and state neutrality toward, religion is explicit.

All-American politician

linda clarke

It isn't hard to figure out what kind of man Jerry Ford is. He watches football a lot and refers to himself as "a team player." He likes baseball, hot dogs, apple pie (if he didn't, he'd say he did), and for all we know he would be driving a Chevrolet if the limousine weren't always waiting. Of course he wouldn't want you to think he was against Fords or VWs either. He's just a superfine, golly gee whiz, swell kind of guy.

Which makes you wish he were coaching a football team somewhere. He is a politician's politician, and in this country that is not a compliment. Back in 1888 James B. Bryce wrote about American politicians: "The only thing remarkable about them is that being so commonplace they should have climbed so high."

It is no accident that a Jerry Ford got to be President, as Richard Reeves documents in his soon-to-be-published book, "A Ford, Not a Lincoln."

When Ford became House minority leader, Reeves points out, "His success was the triumph of lowest common denominator politics, the survival of the man without enemies, the least objectionable alternative."

During the campaign for minority leader Ford was a master at being inoffensive. As Reeves tells it, one night his campaign managers had to persuade him to stay in his office telephoning congressmen for support by bringing him sandwiches and then pointing out how they'd go to waste if he went home for dinner. It wasn't that he didn't want the post. He did, "but it was not his style to get actively engaged in a fight. You can lose friends that way." He won.

As minority leader Ford was an accommodator. He never actively forged a political position. The act of aggressive leading inevitably offends somebody somewhere. So Gerald Ford, and many politicians like him, built his career and life on avoiding offending anyone. Like many professional campaigners (and if you are in the House that is what you are), he spent a lifetime not "trying to tell people what they want to hear," but rather, avoiding telling people what they did not want to hear.

As a congressman, Ford (and there are many others like him) was a professional at making his voting record look like all things to all men.

"Amendments, motions to recommit, and other parliamentary parlor tricks make it possible for a Representative Ford to assert that he voted for final passage of every major civil rights bill during his tenure. Or he can let people know that up until the final votes, he fought to block every piece of civil rights legislation. He did both. . . . Whatever Ford's deepest feelings were about civil rights—and friends said he had no deep feelings either way—he was able and willing to use that issue and others to trade for the valuable status of having no enemies in his own party. He kept the good will of conservative Republicans opposed to civil rights measures and of party liberals favoring those laws.

And look where it got him.

When Watergate appeared on the horizon, Ford jumped to his party's defense, often mouthing little speeches delivered moments before by the White House. "He didn't even bother to read the damn things," said a colleague. "If the White House wanted something said, Jerry just jumped up and said it." In return the White House treated him with disdain. John Ehrlichman sat in his White House office one day in 1971, saying "what a jerk Jerry is."

But they appointed him vice president. He wasn't their first choice. He hadn't been the first choice for House minority leader either, but in both cases he was the least controversial, the least offensive.

According to one White House staffer, one of the reasons Ford was appointed despite Nixon's antipathy to him was that "so many people thought Ford was too dumb to be President." So it made the chance of impeachment appear more remote.

Now Gerald Ford is President. A nicer man you could never find. People love him. His main asset: nobody dislikes him. It is no wonder his advisers are having trouble making him look like a leader; he isn't one.

One party leader summed up Jerry Ford in this way: "Ford is very open-minded. Most of his problems come from the fact that he's too damned fair. . . . You can't help but like and admire him. But when it comes to implementing a plan which requires a delicate sense of timing, a concern for the intricacies of details, an interweaving of the component parts, Ford is at a loss."

Let us all hope that nothing too complicated occurs in the next few months.

Program 'trains people to help themselves'

Lay-psychiatrists end shrinkage

By KEVIN BLIND
Special to The Daily Iowan
The problem of demand exceeding supply extends to the number of psychiatrists to help people.

"We used to think we could train enough therapists to deal with everyone's problems," admitted Eugene Gauron, UI professor of psychiatry.

Because this goal has been found to be impossible, Gauron, and Patricia and Vern Kelly were given federal grants to train people of various occupations — bartenders, beauticians and postmen — in the techniques of helping people while they carry out their jobs.

Recently, because of the success of the program, the Board of Directors for the Johnson County Mental Health Center has authorized the center to carry on the program with local funds.

Gauron said he got the idea for training lay helpers three years ago while reading an article concerning a similar situation in Susanville, Calif. Susanville is located in northern California; since most of that state's population is concentrated in the southern part, there were no resources for adequate mental health services.

"What they did was train people to help themselves," Gauron said.

Because Iowa is mostly a rural state, Vern Kelly, JCMHC psychiatrist, feels that the same problem applies to over half of Iowa's communities.

Kelly pointed out two other problems which lend themselves to the program: "Some people don't need professional help with their problems; and, there are those people who would never go to a psychiatrist."

In recruiting people for the program, Kelly said they were after the natural helpers; people known to the community as easy to converse with, such as a certain gas station attendant in, say, Tipton.

"What we did was simply suggest that they keep on doing what they had been, and maybe we could help them do it better," he added.

"They are interested in people and they have the ability to listen with sympathetic gestures and mannerisms, leading the speaker to feel they have found someone who understands their plight," Gauron said.

Kelly feels it is important to point out that because someone is trained by the center, that person doesn't become an agent of the center.

"They are simply offered a continuing education but are free to do what they want," he added.

Presently the program is not in operation. The two federal grants which helped initiate the program in Tipton and Williamsburg ran out a year ago.

But since the approval by the board for funds, Kelly has been contacting people involved in the initial program and asking them what suggestions they might have for the new program to improve it.

"We hope to have it going again by the first of the year," he said.

In the new program, Kelly wants to pick up where the old program left off in Tipton and Williamsburg, and also expand the services to other communities in the three-county area (Iowa, Cedar, and Johnson counties).

He also plans to extend such services to Iowa City. "The rural setting of the original program was largely to attract the grant," he said.

Ronny Wieland, a psychiatric nurse presently employed at the center, has been selected as the director of the program.

"I think it's a good project," Kelly said. "By giving away what we know, we make a further contribution to the community."

Cavities sour high profits from school's candy sales

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles City school district officials say they are caught between growing dental decay among pupils and high profits from million-dollar-a-year candy sales at school cafeterias.

"I'd like to eliminate the candy, but I don't want to eliminate the funds," said Kathleen Brown Rice, member of the Los Angeles City Board of Education and sister of Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.

The consumption of candy by the district's 725,000 pupils is deplored by most school health and home economics officials. However, school board members find it difficult to ignore the profits from candy sales which cover many expenditures at the 682 schools, including band and drill team uniforms and instruments.

"The school stores are in large measure a reflection of the capitalism of our society," Rice explained. "If they don't provide what the students want, they're going to go off campus and buy it."

Mary Ann Sesma, a physiology teacher, put it more succinctly: "This is not a Fascist state. People are going to eat as they choose."

And what Los Angeles pupils choose to eat is $1.43 million worth of candy sold in school cafeterias last year, despite educational efforts to warn the pupils of dental dangers posed by excessive candy consumption.

"It's been a battle that we have been fighting for a long time. I can't say we're winning," assessed Ruth Rich, health education supervisor for the city schools.

Informal surveys indicate the quality of breakfasts and lunches served at the cafeterias have a direct bearing on the amount of candy purchased by the pupils.

At one school, where pupils frequently sold their tax-funded free lunch tickets for a quarter apiece with which to buy candy, one pupil said:

"By the time you get to the 12th grade, you're so sick of the same old burritos and hamburgers. Besides, the food stinks."

James M. Ferguson, a psychiatrist at University of California at San Diego, attributed the extensive candy purchases to the influence of television advertising, family eating habits and the easy availability of candy.

Ferguson said the practice of using candy as a reward in disciplining children is another factor contributing to the popularity of candy.

Conversation experiment: energy by remote control

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — Two Vermont power companies hope to be turning some of their customers' appliances on and off by remote control by the end of the year in an experiment to save money and conserve energy.

The state's two largest electric companies are gearing up for consumer tests of ripple control: sending a signal down a power line to control selected appliances such as hot water heaters, washing machines, clothes dryers and food freezers.

The idea is to run the equipment during periods when there is little demand on power company generators. Electricity is less expensive to produce and the companies charge their customers less during such periods.

During periods of heavy use, the utility would send an impulse down the line to turn the appliances off.

Green Mountain Power Corp., the state's second largest utility, unveils its ripple control system Tuesday.

Within the next few weeks, the company plans to install equipment in the homes of 100 South Burlington customers participating in a two-year study of ripple control.

The state's largest power company, Central Vermont Public Service Corp., is testing ripple control transmitters and receivers to see if they withstand Vermont's cold, stormy winter weather.

Central Vermont hopes to have the equipment in operation on a test basis by the end of the year, said John Romano, energy systems analyst for the Vermont Public Service Corp.

Halsted was an early advocate of equal rights for women.

A private funeral service will be held at noon Thursday at St. James Church in Hyde Park, with burial in the family plot there.

County wants unused vans for rural transport system

By LARRY PERL
Staff Writer

Johnson County has applied for two minibuses formerly used by the now defunct State's Elderly Area Transportation System (SEATS). The minibuses are now among several such vehicles which sit unused in a State Highway Commission garage south of Cedar Rapids.

First assistant County Atty. J. Patrick White said he expects word within the next few days on the county's application for Comprehensive Emergency Training Act (CETA) funds which would be used to hire and train a bus driver, and to hire a coordinator for the two buses.

Former SEATS committee chairwoman Florence Spaine said Monday the buses would be used to transport people from rural areas such as Solon, Oxford and Lone Tree into Iowa City and back to their homes.

"Oxford and Solon don't even have grocery stores," Spaine said. "These people need a place to do their shopping. There's also a problem in getting the elderly and people who don't live near a busline to church on Sundays. Right now, there's nothing for these people."

SEATS formerly operated 10 buses in a federally funded program started in 1974, but ran out of funds and folded last August.

"This happens so often with federally funded programs," Spaine said. "They just didn't think the program was worth funding anymore." The county has submitted plans for operating the two buses through June 30, 1976 with federal and county funds. "Right now CETA is providing the funds," Spaine said. "By June, though, the counties will probably take over."

The other counties who have applied for buses are Washington, Iowa, Cedar and Benton counties. "Linn and Jones counties didn't want to participate because they said Cedar Rapids already has its own elderly transportation program," Spaine said. Linn and Jones counties are in the Cedar Rapids area.

Spaine said the Johnson County application has been in for two months. "As far as I'm concerned, it's all a lot of bureaucratic hurry-up and wait," she said.

Court finds student guilty of shoplifting and assault

By LINDA SCHUPPENER
Staff Writer

Christopher Vargas, 21, was found guilty in Johnson County magistrates court Monday of shoplifting and assault and battery in connection with a Sept. 15 incident at Things, Things and Things. Vargas had posted a bond of $33.50 on the assault and battery charge and a bond of $44.50 on the shoplifting charge. Both bonds were forfeited to pay Vargas's fine after he was found guilty.

Store manager Barbara Voss told The Daily Iowan Sept. 16 that one of the owners of Things, Thomas J. McMenamin, had seen Vargas stuffing something under his jacket when he was in the store. McMenamin then asked Vargas to accompany him to the office and told the cashier to call the police.

Because of a similar shoplifting incident which had taken place the preceding week, Voss told the DI she went over to block the door to keep Vargas from leaving. Vargas pulled away from McMenamin and, Voss said, "hit me with his hand or arm, knocked me down, jumped over me and ran out the door."

According to Voss, Vargas had tried to stuff two bedspreads under his jacket but threw one down inside the store and dropped the other one outside.

"He looked like a pouty pigeon" with the bedspreads under his jacket, she said, "real conspicuous." Voss said Vargas appeared to be with two other men who claimed they did not know him. The two other men said Vargas lived on their floor in Burge dormitories, but said they did not know his name.

"Science tells us emphatically — indeed, in no uncertain terms and without hesitation, that no two snowflakes are alike. And I would only hasten to add that I agree completely with science's findings. I see a hand."

"I would just like to say Dr. Leaton, that I have conferred with several of my esteemed colleagues, and we feel a demonstration of this theory you so confidently espouse is in order."

"Your point is taken in jest, son... science also tells us that in some cases — though not in every case — water is merely melted snow."

Want third win

Hawks take on Nebraska

Fresh from an opening game win by 30 points, the Iowa Hawkeyes will meet tonight a strong defensive team from Nebraska, picked to finish among the top four in the Big Eight this year. Game time is 7:35 p.m. in the Iowa Field House, with a varsity-reserve game slated for 5:15 between the Hawks and Augustana. Public tickets are on sale for the game in the Field House for $3.

Iowa head Coach Lute Olson has juggled his lineup somewhat for the game due to center Fred Haberecht's temporary loss to the team with a knee injury.

Starting for the Hawkeyes will be Bruce King at center, Larry Parker and Dan Frost at forward and Cal Wulfsburg and Scott Thompson at guards. King has moved into Haberecht's spot while Parker is the new face in the starting five.

Haberecht is expected to be out for two weeks with a sprained knee he sustained in Saturday's 111-81 win over Augustana (S.D.).

"Nebraska's a good, experienced ball club," Olson said. "They're really a good man-to-man ball club. They're very quick defensively, and they're a good rebounding team, especially on the offensive boards."

"They'll be a good test for us," Olson added.

"If we don't control the defensive boards, we lose the threat of the break."

"We've got to continue to get better defensively. We're a little too passive. And we've got to become a little more patient offensively."

Iowa junior varsity Coach Jim Rosborough has listed a starting five he hopes will be able to finish tonight's game with Augustana. The Hawks' nine-man roster for last Saturday's game with Northern Iowa was depleted by four injuries and a foul-out and the team had to play the final three minutes with only four men. They lost a five point lead and the game, 90-88.

Terry Drake and Leon Thomas are both out with sprained ankles suffered in the first half Saturday. Rosborough added it is doubtful that either John Nelson, who sprained an ankle in the second half, or Van Phelps, who twisted a knee before the game, will play.

Rosborough said Keith Rathert, Glen Worley, William Mayfield, Kirk Speraw and Jim Magnuson will start tonight. Worley suffered a cut above the eye which required six stitches Saturday, and Rathert fouled out.

"It was one of those freak things," Rosborough said. "We don't want to get in that position again."

Women cagers lose in last minute

A free throw with 13 seconds to play gave Coe its only lead of the night and a 59-58 win over the Iowa women's basketball team here Tuesday night.

Iowa saw a 12-point halftime lead vanish in the second half as Coe College capitalized on poor passing and ball control by the Hawks.

"We just played poorly to what we're capable of playing," summarized UI Coach Lark Birdsong. "We let some of our emotions get in the way and we didn't play with intensity," she continued. "We lost a lot of tempo and confidence in the second half with some questionable calls," she said.

Iowa was in control of the game midway through the final period, 46-34, before the Cedar Rapids visitors began to chop away at the lead.

With eight minutes remaining in the game, UI guard Diana Williams came off the bench to score a quick basket to put the score at 50-40 in Iowa's favor. Four minutes later, though, Coe was within range at 54-51 after a basket by Janet Lewis.

Forward Kathy Peters gave the Hawks some breathing room with a 12-foot jump shot, but Coe came right back with five unanswered points to knot the contest at 56-56. Reserve forward Becky Moessner hit her second straight shot to give Iowa the lead once again at 58-56 with just over a minute remaining on the clock.

After Coe guard Kay Smith hit a 15-foot jumper, teammate Donna Ayers, the leading scorer with 23 points, was fouled by Moessner moments later and promptly dropped in the deciding point.

Iowa called a time out with 13 seconds left, and Jenni Mayer got the rebound, made the outlet pass to Williams who fed Lynn Oberbillig in the lane. The shot fell short, and so did Iowa's chance for its second win.

"We had the rebound, the pass and the shot," Birdsong explained to herself, "but not the shot... it just hit the front of the rim."

Birdsong admitted that Iowa lost the game before then, however. "We had some poor passing and ball handling errors tonight," she said.

Williams and Peters again paced Iowa's scoring with 16 and 14 points, respectively. Oberbillig was next with nine points. Coe had three players in double figures, with Ayers' 23, Smith's 13, and Lewis' 12 points.

Iowa travels to Ames Friday for a game with Iowa State, a team which easily handled the Hawks a year ago. "We'll have to play much better against them to even stay close," Birdsong warned.

Knight seeks injunction

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Judge Douglas R. Bridges, who is president of the Indiana University Varsity Club, will conduct a preliminary hearing Saturday on a suit filed by Hoosier basketball Coach Bobby Knight.

The suit, filed in Superior Court by Knight as an individual and not on behalf of the team or university, seeks to enjoin the National Collegiate Athletic Association from enforcing its 10-man travel squad rule.

Summonses have been sent by registered mail to the NCAA officials and Bridges said he assumed an NCAA representative would appear for the hearing.

"The most important point in the action... is my feeling toward the players on our squad," Knight said. "In our recruiting of them, a commitment was made to each that he would be a member of our squad at all times, both at home and on the road."

"I think I have an obligation to do everything I can to uphold that commitment. There are also a number of easily apparent reasons why the limitation of a travel squad to 10 players is not conducive to the best possible basketball that colleges and universities can play."

The suit was filed last Friday, a day before the top-ranked Hoosiers belted defending NCAA champion UCLA 84-64 in their nationally-televised season opener.

The 10-man travel squad rule was imposed by the NCAA last August for economic reasons.

Knight is being represented by former Monroe County Prosecutor Thomas Berry; Harry Pratter, IU professor of law, and Stephen Ferguson, a former Indiana legislator.

Iowa head basketball coach Lute Olson said Monday that he favors Bobby Knight's move filing suit against the NCAA in dispute of its 10-man travel roster limitation.

"I think it's great," Olson said. "They made a mistake in instituting the 10-man limit. It's as simple as that."

"I hope the suit stands and they get an injunction to hold over until January when they can change it," Olson added.

"You can't play this game with ten people," Olson said, pointing to the Iowa junior varsity basketball game with Northern Iowa Saturday. Iowa was forced to play the final three and one-half minutes of that game with only four players, after four players were injured and another fouled out.

Hawks' Walters takes Big 10, national honors

Iowa's 6-5, 260-pound offensive tackle Rod Walters was the only Iowa football player named Monday to the Associated Press All-Big Ten first team. Walters was also named to the AP's All-America third team, the only Iowa player to be cited for national honors by the wire service.

Three Iowa players made second team all-conference: Dave Bryant at middle guard, Andre Jackson at linebacker, and Joe Devlin at offensive guard. Tight end Brandt Yocom and safety Rick Penney were given honorable mention on the All-Big Ten team.

Named ahead of Walters at tackle for All-America were Colorado's Mike Koncar and Texas' Bob Simmons on the first team, and Brigham Young's Brad Oates and Southern Cal's Marvin Powell on the second team. Dan Jiggets of Harvard joined Walters on the third lineup.

Chisox' 'Little Nel' dies

BALTIMORE (AP) — Nellie Fox, tobacco-chewing former second baseman for the Chicago White Sox and the American League's most valuable player in 1959, died at University Hospital Monday following a lengthy illness. He was 47.

Fox, of St. Thomas, Pa., entered University Hospital in mid-October suffering from widespread skin cancer.

Born Jacob Nelson Fox, the 5-foot-9, 160-pounder held down the White Sox' second base spot for 13 years from 1950-1963 before he was traded to Houston in exchange for two players, pitcher Jim Golden and outfielder Danny Murphy, and cash.

He played just one full season in the National League before retiring in 1965. He later coached for Houston and for the Washington Senators.

It was with the Sox that Fox enjoyed his greatest success. Fox, a scrappy competitor and a spray-hitter, was a flawless fielder who led AL second basemen in putouts for nine straight years, starting in 1952.

And despite his slight build, he was almost indestructible. Fox set a major league record for second basemen by playing 792 consecutive games from Aug. 7, 1950 through Sept. 3, 1960.

Fox enjoyed his finest all-around season in 1959 when he batted .306 and helped the White Sox to the American League pennant. He was named the American League's most valuable player that year.

Fox compiled a career .288 batting average. He appeared in 11 All-Star Games, batting .368 and hit .375 in the 1959 World Series against Los Angeles.

In the first game ever played in the Houston Astrodome on April 9, 1965, Fox came off the bench and lined a single over second base to score Jim Wynn and give Houston a 2-1 victory over the New York Yankees in an exhibition game.

Minnesota finds more violations

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — The University of Minnesota's investigation into the 112 charges levied against its basketball program has revealed additional violations and will apparently complicate the school's situation with the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA).

"We've found an awful lot they (NCAA) didn't," said Dr. Stanley Kegler, the school's vice president for institutional planning relations. "We started out to find the truth wherever it was and discovered an additional number of infractions."

Kegler estimated that a private attorney and university officials have expended more than 5,000 man-hours to complete the school's investigation.

"I'm sure we've dug our own hole deeper," he continued. "But, our concern has been to find out what has gone wrong and not worry about what the resulting punishment might be."

Kegler said the school's investigation must still be processed along with its recommendations for corrective actions.

"We wanted to be able to complete our report in a timely way, but the NCAA won't give us another extension," said Kegler. "We haven't received any cooperation from the NCAA and we don't expect them to change their minds now."

McCoy Tyner:

First there is McCoy's melodic inventiveness... the clarity of his ideas... he also gets a very personal sound from his instrument; and because of the clusters he uses and the way he voices them, that sound is brighter than what would normally be expected from most of the chord patterns he plays. In addition, McCoy has an exceptionally well developed sense of form, both as a soloist and as an accompanist. Invariably in our group, he will take a tune and build his own structure for it. He is always, in short, looking for the most personal way to express himself. He doesn't fall into the conventional grooves. And finally, McCoy has taste. He can take anything, no matter how wierd, and make it beautiful.

POSSIBLY THE FINEST GIFT YOU COULD GIVE...OR RECEIVE

Long after the dust has settled on other things you buy, a stereo system from the Stereo Shop will go on giving tremendous enjoyment

KLH-SONY-BSR

Here is a system that proves that even in these days of rapidly rising prices it is still possible to find honest value for your money. The Sony 7015 AM-FM receiver offers 15 watts rms per channel, complete controls, and outstanding reliability at a modest price. The BSR 310-AXE is an automatic record changer complete with dust cover and cartridge. The speakers featured in the system are the KLH Model 32, a two-way acoustic suspension design housed in an attractive walnut cabinet. This sound system sells for the moderate price of $359. We also offer a $40 option for this system—the ability to substitute the Advent-2 speakers, which offer slightly improved bass and treble response. The system price with the Advent-2's is $399.

ADVENT-SONY-BSR

This system is centered around the smaller Advent speakers, really amazing two-way speakers offering the full ten-octave range of music at reasonable cost. The new Sony 7025 receiver has a superb AM-FM section and features such as FM muting and high filter which are usually only found on more expensive units. The 7025's 18 watts rms per channel is enough power to bring out the deepest bass and highest highs the smaller Advents are noted for. The BSR 2520 has damped cueing, a counter-balanced arm and comes complete with dust cover and cartridge. Separately these components sell for $549 which makes this system an unbeatable sound-per-dollar value at $479.

ADVENT-YAMAHA-DUAL

The sound in this system comes out of the marvelous large Advent speakers which have become best sellers by offering cost-no-object sound quality at a price people can afford. To power these speakers in a way that will give full satisfaction, we've picked the Yamaha CR400-a receiver offering unbelievably low distortion (less than .1 per cent) and superb FM reception for its price. For playing records the way they should be played, we include the Dual 1225 automatic turntable with walnut base, dust cover and Shure M91ED cartridge. These components separately sell for $762 and are more than worth it. All the better, then, that we can offer this system at $659.

Scrimshaw Belt Buckle

Pictured above is a $25 scrimshaw belt buckle. Scrimshaw is the indigenous art form of the American Whaler. In his idle hours while cruising for whale, he devoted himself to fashioning articles and jewelry of whale ivory. Although his ingenuity was applied to creating various articles, his favorite theme was a whaling scene carved on a sperm whale's tooth. Now the artisan's use elephant ivory.
