

Committee proposes expanded bus service

By STEVE FREEDKIN
Staff Writer

Operating Iowa City Transit's winter bus routes throughout the school year is a top priority on a list of proposed improvements to be presented to the Iowa City Council today.

Half-fare taxis and free bus service for the elderly and the handicapped, further changes in the operation of Iowa City Transit, Coralville Transit System and CAMBUS, and increased efforts to promote mass transit are also on the list of 11 improvements proposed in a report by the Transit Advisory Committee of the Johnson County Regional Planning Commission.

The transit committee includes representatives of the three bus systems and the two cab companies, City Council members, UI administrators, and citizens.

First on the transit committee's list is an increase — to nine months — of the expanded Hawkeye Route currently run from January to April by Iowa City Transit. According to Iowa City Transit Superintendent Steve Morris, one bus is added to the Hawkeye Route so that service is every 15 minutes, instead of every 20 minutes, during the cold months. This change also effects the North Dubuque route, decreasing service to every half hour, instead of every 20 minutes. Also, an east-side route close to downtown is run every 15 minutes to alleviate crowding on the East College, Towncrest, and Mall buses, according to Morris.

The altered Hawkeye-North Dubuque-east side routes were run last winter, and will run again in 1976, Morris said.

"The thing I hate to do is mess people's travel patterns around," he said. By running the altered routes during the entire school year, instead of just during the winter, the bus system would not change riders' travel patterns as drastically, according to Morris.

Second on the transit committee's priority list is an increase of four Iowa City Transit routes and the two Coralville Transit System routes to every 20 minutes during the school year, while the Red and Blue CAMBUS routes would be increased to a 6-minute headway (time between buses) year-round.

According to Bob Donnelly of the transit committee, the Iowa City routes to be effected would be those which currently have the highest peak-period ridership increase. He didn't know which these were, but guessed that the West Benton and Mall routes would be included.

Morris wasn't sure which routes would be effected, either. According to Morris, second priority is to expand the winter Lakeside Apartments-Bon Aire Trailer Court express route to all year service. This route runs from Lakeside and Bon Aire to downtown without stopping every half hour during the winter. It supplements the regular route, which makes stops all along the way. The express also goes past University Hospitals to Seville Apartments along a route similar to the old West Benton route, he said. Morris said the express takes some of the strain off the regular Lakeside route, and the two together give Lakeside and Bon Aire four buses every hour.

The changes listed by the transit committee as first and second priorities would have a "low" cost to Iowa City Transit, according to the committee. A "low" cost is considered by the committee to be less than 5 per cent of the system's 1975 budget. A "medium" cost is 5 to 15 per cent, and a "high" cost is 15 per cent of the transit system's 1975 budget, the committee report stated.

The committee's third priority improvement is to provide free bus service during non-peak hours for the elderly and the handicapped, and half-fare taxi service for them.

According to the committee, the cost of Iowa City's half of the taxi fares would be "medium," and "low" for Coralville. The cost of free bus-rides would be "low" for both communities.

Promotion of mass transit ranked fourth on the committee's list. Ideas included for consideration were: to encourage employers to stagger work hours to reduce rush-hour loads on bus transit services; to evaluate how buses can be used to aid school children, including possible contracts with schools for service; and to encourage employers to subsidize their employees' transit by purchasing fare-passes and selling them to employees at reduced rates.

The employer subsidy idea would be an alternative to employers' expenses for parking facilities, Donnelly said.

The transit committee prepared the list of priorities as part of a yearly update to the Transit Development Program. The program was prepared last December by Kenneth J. Dueker and Brent O. Bair of the Institute of Urban and Regional Research. The list was finished for presentation to the Iowa City Council at a transit committee meeting Tuesday.

The priority list also included these recommendations:

- 5) One-hour headways for all Iowa City routes until midnight six days a week, all year ("high" estimated cost);
- 6) Thirty-minute headways until 10 p.m. on all Iowa City and Coralville routes all year ("high" cost to both);
- 7) Reducing Saturday headways to 30 minutes on all routes in Iowa City and Coralville all year ("medium" cost to Iowa City, "high" cost to Coralville);
- 8) Adding hourly Sunday service on all Iowa City and Coralville routes all year ("medium" cost to Iowa City, "low" for Coralville);

-9) Increasing peak-hour service to 20-minute headways during the school year for the seven routes not covered in Item 2 (which suggested the same upgrading for four routes, Item 9 would have a "medium" estimated cost);

-10) Increasing CAMBUS route coverage to include the Harrison Lot ("medium" cost to the UI); and

-11) Extending CAMBUS service from midnight to 2 a.m. from the present midnight cutoff ("medium" cost).

Any changes in mass transit operations must be approved by the operators of the transit systems. Iowa City Transit changes must be approved by the Iowa City Council, Coralville Transit System changes by the Coralville Council and CAMBUS changes by the UI administration. The half-fare taxi proposal must be approved by the Iowa City and Coralville councils, and also by Ralph Oxford, who owns the two cab companies in Iowa City.

The transit committee's list is being presented to the Iowa City Council for further study.

Shriver: Decriminalize pot

By MARK COHEN
Staff Writer

Democratic Presidential candidate R. Sargent Shriver, in a Daily Iowan interview Tuesday, endorsed unconditional amnesty for Vietnam-era draft-resisters, decriminalization (but not legalization) of marijuana, and equal rights for homosexuals.

The former director of the Peace Corps and the Office of Economic Opportunity, and George McGovern's 1972 running mate, also said he favors an aggressive U.S. role in worldwide disarmament talks.

Shriver — who emphasizes his foreign affairs and "executive" experience — this week was on a five-city swing through eastern Iowa.

DI: What is your stance on amnesty?
Shriver: "I've been in favor of amnesty since 1970."

DI: What type of amnesty?
Shriver: "For everybody who refused to fight because they were morally opposed to the war in Vietnam — unconditional amnesty."

DI: What is your stance on pot?
Shriver: "I'm not for the legalization of it, but I'm for the decriminalization of it."

DI: Why decriminalization?
Shriver: "Because I don't think a person should be made into a criminal for using it, any more than I think they should be made into a criminal for being an alcoholic. I try to encourage people not to use marijuana, alcohol or tobacco."

DI: What about hard drugs?
Shriver: "I'm heavily in favor of controlling hard drugs. I think that's one of the most socially and morally debilitating aspects of modern life. And it's all based on greed. If there wasn't a lot of money to be made out of it, nobody would do it. I think the people who prey on young people, those people ought to get maximum mandatory sentences. I think they are almost without justification."

DI: What is your stance on equal rights for homosexuals?

Shriver: "I'm in favor of non-discrimination because of the way they conduct their sexual life. That's a matter for their private concern, and therefore I don't think that in business or civil rights they should have their rights taken away from them simply because of their sexual habits."

DI: How will your administration treat the Palestinian Liberation Organization (PLO)?

Shriver: "I think the PLO has to be handled by the United States in conjunction with the state of Israel and not in opposition to the state of Israel."

DI: Does the United States have a commitment to prevent a Communist takeover in Angola?

Shriver: "As far as I know, we have no commitment whatsoever."

DI: What role, if any, should the United States play there?

Shriver: "That is a role that should be defined between the Congress and the State Department and the executive branch."

DI: Are you in favor of removing the U.S. nuclear force in South Korea?

Shriver: "That's right. I don't think we should have nuclear weapons on the ground in Korea in forward positions. Because, if any hostilities were to occur, our advance nuclear weapons would be overrun so quickly there would be a tremendous temptation to fire them right away — or else they'd fall into the hands of the enemy... It's very easy to have vessels in the Sea of Japan and around Korea, moving vessels that can fire nuclear weapons into North Korea if we had to."

"Secondly, I'm for withdrawing the American troops because the South Koreans have got a much bigger army than the North Koreans. They can defend themselves in a conventional war themselves."

"But, all of this, I think, has to be done in conjunction with Japan... And these (policy changes) have to be done in a planned, well informed manner by both the Koreans and the Japanese and ourselves and by the Russians and the Chinese. Because if they know exactly what we're doing and why we're doing it, they should not misinterpret what we're doing. It should not be interpreted as any sign of weakness."

DI: Of course Korea brings up the question of U.S. support for right-wing, dictatorial governments. Would you continue such support for President Park of South Korea?

Shriver: "As we proceed through a diplomatic process of the type I have just described with respect to Korea, it is through that kind of process that we have got to bring persuasion to bear on President Park in South Korea."

"I think it is totally unrealistic to think that in some parts of the world we can clap our hands and cause democracy to come into being overnight."

DI: Would you support the use of U.S. food, technology and arms to gain influence with other countries, especially in reaction to a boycott against the United States?

Shriver: "I don't think that is the way to conduct foreign affairs at this time in the history of the world. We've got to try to conduct foreign affairs in a cooperative rather than confrontational style."

DI: You have come out against massive arms sales abroad. Should all such sales be subject to Congressional approval?

Shriver: "Of course they should be. Secondly, there's no point in trying to stop American arms sales without having an agreement with the Russians on disarmament itself. We say we send arms to various places because the Russians are sending arms there. The Russians say the same thing — they're sending arms there because we're sending arms there. You can exchange the speeches between the two countries and just change the names and the sentiments or thoughts are identical. We've got to stop the whole process by engaging aggressively in disarmament talks."

DI: How will you get the Russians to agree to cooperate in meaningful talks?

Shriver: "The first thing I can do is to answer their invitations to do just that. Three times this year Brezhnev has given big speeches asking for disarmament discussions and he's never gotten an answer. Lyndon Johnson used to say, 'I'll go anywhere for peace. I'll go anywhere where there is a legitimate interest in discussing disarmament between the Soviet Union and the United States.'

"If we can begin to get an agreement, then I think we can begin also to bring the French, for example, and the English into such an agreement. We've got to get the arms suppliers together and stop supplying arms. If they can get OPEC together to stop supplying oil, we ought to be able to get ourselves together to stop supplying arms. It's a much more deadly business."

DI: What types of weapons systems and what type of defense strategy would you employ?

Shriver: "I want to institute a defense strategy which keeps us strong, which we are now, coupled with a herculean effort to start disarmament. Escalation means going into things like the cruise missile or Air Force radar warning system missile, or going from five Trident submarines up to 18 Trident submarines... or a whole bunch of nuclear-powered surface missile carriers at a cost of $1,250,000,000 a boat. I don't want to spend $1,250,000,000 for one boat."

DI: What sort of qualities would you look for in a secretary of state?

Shriver: "I'd want one who is well informed on world-wide conditions. Secondly, who had some experience in managing the bureaucracy of a foreign policy organization. Third, a person who is really interested in the problems of people around the world, not just power."

"Secretary Kissinger is a very brilliant man, but I think he's made one error in that he has concentrated almost exclusively on power — economic and military power."

UI officials offer ARH $5,000 for dorm repairs

By a Staff Writer

Instead of giving a rebate to each student who has lived in temporary housing, the UI Administration is offering "$5,000-worth of an improvement program" to Associated Residence Halls (ARH), the governing student body for all UI dormitories.

Mitchel Livingston, UI director of Residential Services, said a direct rebate could not be made to students placed in temporary housing this year because such a rebate would be "against Board of Regent's policy."

UI Vice President of Administrative Services William Shanhouse said the $5,000 offer was "a consideration" to ARH "because we had temporary (dormitory) housing without a temporary housing rate."

Students placed in temporary housing have been charged this year under the multiple housing (4 or more students per room) rate: $485 per year. The rate negotiated for temporary housing during the next academic year is $470 per year, or a decrease of 3.1 per cent.

"Now we have a temporary housing rate," Shanhouse explained. "We are simply saying that ARH can have the prerogative or recommending $5,000-worth of an improvement program."

ARH members are not sure, however, whether they will accept the money. Steve Lombardi, A3, chairperson of the ARH Housing Committee, said ARH is interested in getting feedback from students on the matter.

Suggestions for spending the money are also being sought, Lombardi said. Any proposal submitted by ARH for spending the money is subject to administrative approval, according to Livingston.

Both Shanhouse and Lombardi said it would be difficult to go through temporary housing records and figure daily rebate rates for students.

Lombardi said the administration claims there would be clerical problems in distributing rebate money and a decision would have to be reached whether to give rebates to students housed in temporary quarters during previous semesters.

This semester ARH has sought lower rates for temporarily housed students and financial compensations for students in temporary quarters.

Lombardi also said the ARH has negotiated a refund for linen service to temporarily housed students and an increase in the minimum amount of square footage for dormitory residents.

Temporarily housed dormitory residents who did not receive adequate linen service — either paid for the free linen service or did not receive service — are eligible for the 8 cents a day refund, Lombardi said.

Livingston said eligible students can contact the house managers in the dormitories in which they were temporarily housed.

Refunds will be credited to a student's university account or, students leaving the UI may receive the funds, Livingston said.

The new square footage standard calls for a minimum 65 sq. ft. of space, not including closet space, for a resident instead of the present 50 sq. ft. space required under Iowa law.

The new square footage requirement was negotiated in response to residents being housed in "small triples" in Currier dormitory, according to Shanhouse.

The move is designed to "maintain the quality of living" in the dormitories," Shanhouse said. Students now living in the Currier rooms are being transferred, he said.

ARH recently negotiated for the next two school years a 15 per cent decrease in the temporary housing rates, decreasing from $485 to $412.25 a semester.

Lombardi invited students' ideas on spending the money which he said could be used to "make this place a more pleasant place to live and give students some sort of compensation."

Suggestions would be studied by ARH and subject to administration approval.

Ford vetoes tax break

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford vetoed a bill Wednesday that would hold down income taxes for another six months, saying it should be accompanied by a limit on federal spending.

There was increasing speculation, however, that the Democratic-controlled Congress would be able to override Ford's 41st veto and continue this year's temporary tax reductions through June.

House leaders scheduled a vote Thursday morning to try to get the two-thirds needed to overturn the veto, before Congress starts its Christmas vacation Friday.

Ford vetoed the bill 10 minutes after he indicated to reporters he hoped his veto would be sustained. He said Congress still had a chance to pass before Christmas a bill which he could approve.

"Your taxes don't have to go up," Ford said, obviously addressing the American people. Ford started the five-minute statement by saying he is going to veto the temporary tax extension bill which was passed by both houses.

He said he was doing so because, "Congress failed to cut federal spending at the same time."

Instead, he said, the bill which he is vetoing represents only a temporary six-months extension of a recession-fighting tax cut initiated last May. Congress is expected to extend the tax cut through all of 1976, an election year, if it can override the veto.

If Ford's position is not overridden, the American worker would see a $3 to $4 weekly increase starting next month.

In his statement, Ford recalled that he had warned Congress in October that he would veto the tax bill if it were not coupled with a lid on federal spending.

He said that he had asked for a $28-billion tax cut, with a corresponding limitation in spending that would hold the fiscal 1977 budget to $395 billion.

He said the bill which he received Wednesday would only amount to about an $18-billion tax savings for Americans in 1977.

JFK 'friend' fields queries

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A dark-haired mystery woman who befriended President John F. Kennedy and reputed Mafia figures said Wednesday that she had a "close, personal relationship" with Kennedy and visited him at the White House "more than 16 or 20 times."

Judith Campbell Exner, whose name surfaced in a congressional probe of a CIA-Mafia plot against Cuban Premier Fidel Castro, wore dark glasses as she talked with reporters at a jammed news conference.

She said she had met the married chief executive at the White House and other locations. A reporter asked, "Did you ever go to bed with John Fitzgerald Kennedy?"

"That's in the personal area," she replied, and refused to elaborate despite repeated questioning on specifics of her relationship with Kennedy.

Her involvement with Kennedy first surfaced earlier this week in a Senate Intelligence Committee's report on CIA assassination plots. The report, which said she had no involvement in CIA assassination plots, said there were 70 telephone calls between an unidentified person and the Kennedy White House.

Fromme, 27, gets life term

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme, shrieking and hitting her prosecutor with an apple before being carried from the courtroom, was sentenced to life imprisonment Wednesday for trying to kill President Ford.

The red-haired follower of convicted mass murderer Charles Manson demanded at the hearing that Manson be released from prison. She also reiterated concern for the ecology.

"You fool," she screamed at U.S. District Judge Thomas J. MacBride. "I'm trying to save your life!"

Growing agitated as sentencing neared, she told the judge: "I want Manson out. I want my world at peace. I know none of you can bring it."

"... I stood with a gun and said, 'Don't make me shoot,' and you said, 'Do it! Do it!' You keep asking for it. I've done everything I can, save killing you."

Ms. Fromme, 27, was convicted Nov. 26 of trying to kill Ford when she pointed a gun at him during his visit to Sacramento on Sept. 5.

Senate favors no Angola aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate on Wednesday moved toward action to prevent secret U.S. arms shipments to anti-Soviet factions in Angola as some senators said they feared another Vietnam-style American commitment.

Several senators described the secret three-hour debate as "wrangling." Sen. John McClellan, D-Ark., reportedly refused to disclose how much the Ford administration already has spent in Angola and how much it seeks to spend in the future.

As the Senate resumed debate in late afternoon, a block of senators opposed to further aid predicted they would succeed in finding a way to stop the expenditures.

At the White House, a spokesman for President Ford said the United States has placed no American advisers in Angola of any kind and does not plan to send any.

Iowa coal mines potential energy

By STEVE FREEDKIN
Staff Writer

If enough of the sulfur and other impurities in Iowa's coal can be successfully removed, Iowans will use their state's own coal much more than they do now, according to Kenneth Clark, associate professor of geology at the UI.

Clark was interviewed on "The Coal Connection: Iowa's Energy Solution?" — a half-hour program aired on KCRG-TV Wednesday night.

"What we're looking for is a balance between impurities and heating value," Clark said. Iowa coal "has a higher heating value per unit of weight" than coal from Wyoming or Montana, he added.

KCRG News Editor Dale Brodt said, "Iowa is in a fight for survival. The state is almost totally dependent on other states for energy." Iowa's industrial growth has "come to a standstill." Coal under the state may be the solution to this problem, Brodt said.

"About 7 million tons of coal are consumed annually in Iowa, mostly by utilities to power their plants," Brodt said. But only 15 percent of that coal is mined in the state, he added.

State Geologist Sanley Grant said Iowa's drilling program in the past few months has produced evidence that "we have far more (coal) resources than we thought we had." Brodt added that there are 20 billion tons of coal under one-third of the state. "What remains to be seen is whether the coal can be produced so that it is environmentally acceptable to most of the consumers," Brodt said.

The problem is that "Iowa coal is pretty high in sulfur content. As a result of environmental standards (on sulfur emissions from power plants), mining companies have shied away from it," Grant said.

A study of sulfur oxides in the air recently completed by the Iowa Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) indicates "that a great more Iowa coal can be burned than had been anticipated without exceeding air quality standards," according to Etc., the DEQ weekly.

This winter, at least, Iowa probably won't have much of an energy shortage. Federal energy adviser Sam Tuthill said, "Iowa is expected to be in good shape unless it is an extremely cold winter."

But he warned: "A few degrees can make a big difference in Iowa."

2-year-old case settled

By a Staff Writer

A two-year-old sex discrimination case, filed by the city of Iowa City against the Westinghouse Learning Corp., has been settled out of court.

The City Council agreed unanimously Tuesday night to the settlement agreement.

In the settlement, the city agrees to not re-open the case against Westinghouse, according to City Attorney John Hayek.

The sex discrimination charge was leveled in a lawsuit against Westinghouse filed in December 1973 under the city's human relations ordinance. In the suit, the city alleged that the corporation failed to consider an Iowa City woman, Stephanie Dawn Potter, for a permanent position in the corporation in December 1972 "for the reason that the said Stephanie Dawn Potter was a woman."

Potter reportedly had been employed on a temporary basis. After a term of unemployment with the corporation, Potter reportedly returned to find that the permanent position had opened up but had been filled by a man. Potter quit shortly thereafter.

According to the city's suit, the city's Human Relations Commission found "probable cause" that discrimination had occurred and attempted unsuccessfully to conciliate the matter.

By terms of the settlement, Westinghouse agrees to reimburse Potter $1,200 and to publicize a policy of affirmative action in employment.

In the settlement agreement, Westinghouse does not admit to "any violation" of local, state or federal civil rights laws.

School Board to vote on salary-increase proposals

By BRIAN HILL
Staff Writer

Annual teacher salary increases that "will average $1,241 and range from $970 to $1,785" will be voted upon at a special public meeting tonight of the Iowa City Board of Education, according to Assistant Superintendent David Cronin.

The increase request was approved Tuesday night by the Iowa City Education Association (ICEA), and was one of two recently negotiated wage proposals released Wednesday by the school district. The wage proposal would represent a 9.5 per cent salary increase totaling $600,414 over this fiscal year, Cronin said. He added that this would increase the starting annual pay of a teacher with a B.A. degree from $8,600 to $9,200.

This would raise the average salary level for teachers "from $13,000 to around $14,200" in the 1976-77 school year, according to Board of Education President Robert Vermace.

The other wage increase request came from the Iowa City Association of Educational Secretaries, which asked for a 10.2 per cent raise involving a supplemental $57,273.

Vermace said he views the proposed teacher contract "as a superior agreement — one of the best in the state."

He said he expects the board to ratify both proposals during its meeting at 7 p.m. today at the district's administration building, 1040 William St.

"This will put some pressure on the administration to establish priorities for recommendation to the board regarding possible budget cuts," Vermace said.

"These salary schedules are far superior to those of the Des Moines or Cedar Rapids school districts," said Cronin. "In looking at the entire scale, we feel the proposed pay levels are most competitive."

Cronin said the agreement is "based on rewarding teachers" who not only continue their employment with the district, but who also improve their educational level.

Other contract improvements for teachers include one additional day each of emergency leave and personal leave, and a total of 25 days "association leave" for employees absent on ICEA business, said Cronin.

In the fringe benefit package, teachers could be insured for a maximum of $15,000, depending on their annual pay.

School District Business Manager John Gillespie said if ratified, 73 per cent of the funds needed next year to cover these contracts and other expenses would be paid by an estimated $900,000 increase in state aid. Due to a boost in state revenues, each school district is to receive "a 9 per cent increase based on allowable growth," he said.

"Iowa City will receive an extra $102 per pupil and we have a few more than 9,000 students," said Gillespie.

The remaining 27 per cent of the increase would come from local property taxes which, he said, would result from an increase in assessed valuations now being prepared by the county auditor.

Security suspects group behind parking lot thefts

By MARY SCHNACK
Staff Writer

Campus Security suspects that an organized group is stealing tape decks and citizen's band (CB) radios out of cars in university parking lots.

Capt. Oscar Graham said that items worth approximately $700 have been stolen out of cars in university lots since Saturday night.

Between Saturday night and Sunday morning two CB radios, valued at $170 and $160, were stolen out of two cars parked in the hospital ramp. Another car in the same ramp had two Electro Set speakers worth $100 and 15 eight-track tapes worth $105 stolen during the same time period (11 p.m. to 7 a.m.).

Sometime between Saturday night and Monday night a car was vandalized in the Area 30 parking lot behind the Health Science Library. Taken from that car were an $80 tape deck, two speakers worth $10, six eight-track tapes worth $30 and a $10 sweater.

A $130 eight-track tape player and a $6 hunting jacket were taken between Monday night and Tuesday night from a car in the Riverside Storage Lot.

Entrance was made into all but one of the cars through a broken rear window. Windows in the other car were pried open.

Graham said he has learned that all the Big Ten schools are experiencing similar vandalism of cars on university property. "It must be profitable," Graham said. "There must be a high re-sale value."

Graham said he does not know how these kinds of thefts can be prevented, but added, "the thought behind it is the visibility of them." Graham suggests that tape decks and CB radios should be moved out of view when vehicles are left unattended. "I don't know whether that's feasible or not, but it would take some of the potential away of the items being stolen," Graham said.

Sex crime prevention high priority

Rape is a shrinking problem in Iowa City. At least, that seems to be the premise from which Chief of Police Harvey Miller is operating.

He proposed to the city council Monday that the police cut time spent on the Sex Crime Prevention Unit, staffed by Larry Donohoe. Miller said that although enforcement of sex crime regulations is "a necessary function" of the police department, "I don't think we can devote 100 per cent of a person's time to it."

The SCPU was established in June of 1974 (Fiscal Year 1975), under a grant from the Iowa Crime Commission. The grant provided 90 per cent of the money for the unit's operations. But this fiscal year (FY76, beginning July 1, 1975) when the city applied for the grant to be renewed, the funding was to be 80 per cent — with the city paying 20 per cent of the program's cost.

The grant is retroactive; that is, the city first spends the money, then is reimbursed by the government.

But Councilwoman Carol deProse said that when the city gets the grant it agrees that 100 per cent of the person's time will be spent on sex crime prevention.

Therefore, if Donohoe no longer devotes 100 per cent of his time to the SCPU, the city will get no money from the government, and must come up with all funds necessary to run the office — or whatever is left of it.

Terry Kelly of the Rape Crisis Line said, "It's not the time to be cutting back, it's the time to be expanding. If they (police) don't do it, I don't know who's going to."

Kelly predicted that there "definitely will be a reduction in the number of cases investigated," but that rapes will increase this spring.

She added that the public announcement that less time may be spent in sex crime investigation and prevention "may alleviate the fear" of being arrested for rape.

Miller said it was not his intention to stop the service, but that he would prefer several officers be trained for the job, to have at least one on each shift. He reiterated that it is not necessary to devote 100 per cent of anyone's time to the job.

The current grant period runs until June 30, 1976. The city could reapply for fiscal year 1977 funding, said Jim Lynch, project planner for the Johnson County Regional Planning Commission.

But the local matching funds required would probably be higher, he said. While the first year's ratio was 90 per cent grant funds to 10 per cent local, the current year's is 80-20. And next year it might be, for example, 70-30, he said.

After the third year the city would have to pay for the program entirely, Lynch said.

No matter how this year goes, the city will eventually have to pay for the SCPU. But it's a service that is both needed and wanted in the area. Given more time, it might be able to increase the number of rapes reported, the number of arrests, and hopefully, the number of convictions.

Every three minutes some woman in the United States is raped, Kelly said. About 10 per cent are reported, and of that, less than 10 per cent are convicted.

Rape is a serious and growing problem. This is not the time to hedge bets or to reduce forces — but to increase them.

Artist's reply

TO THE EDITOR:
Dear Mr. Doumakes (DI, Dec. 15):

Blaine Haunspenger

take your head out of your ass and look around. The vast majority of today's people sanction alcohol consumption, as exhibited by the huge number of taverns already in existence. Show me a cause-effect relationship between owning a bar and perverting morals. By your standards, people who go into bars in the first place must already be corrupt.

You speak of our colleagues as though you represent them. Through my contact with the members of the Alpha Chi Sigma (chemistry fraternity), I have found that a majority of them willingly consume alcohol. Show me incongruity.

Finally, I won't even comment on the terms "sinful pastime," and "hedonistic," since they are asinine in themselves. I should only hope that chemists as a group are not judged by the puritanical attitude you have presented in your letter.

Dorm rate hike disputed

TO THE EDITOR:

The university administration's current proposal to raise dormitory and married student housing rates, although slightly modified by ARH, is an incredible affront in light of present widespread dissatisfaction with university "housing policy." It is unfair to students living in already overcrowded units and can only contribute to the housing crisis in Iowa City as a whole.

Any prospective tenant is aware that housing in Iowa City is a "seller's market." Rents are high, vacancies are far below acceptable levels and people seem to have no choice but to pay exorbitant prices for inadequate housing. In this situation it is unfortunate to see the university competing with private investors, in a market characterized by an upward spiraling of rents so drastic that the city council is investigating the possibility of price fixing by landlords.

The administration proposes to raise married student housing rates in order to be competitive in an inflated market. The agreement reached between ARH and the administration concerning dorm rates even goes beyond what is competitive on the private market.

Under this agreement a dorm resident, who occupies a room for a total of about eight months, will pay approximately $112 per month for a single room, $82 per month for a double, and $65 per month for a triple. Even among Iowa City's outrageously high rents, these are ridiculously large amounts to pay for the small space allotted in a dorm room.

The $164 per month paid by the occupants of a double room would cover the rent on many full private apartments. Considering that the university does not have to allow for a profit margin, these figures appear even more unreasonable.

It has been a repeatedly stated university policy that a dormitory overload at the beginning of each semester is acceptable and that present facilities are adequate to meet the demand for student housing. This is contradicted by the administration's recent action: the proposal to turn more single rooms into doubles and more doubles into triples, further crowding the dormitories, is evidence that regardless of their rhetoric the administration does foresee a need for more housing units.

They are preparing for this by packing more students into existing housing rather than building needed additional units. In doing so, the university is placing financial analysis above the academic need of students for secure and reasonable living quarters. Students are being treated as numbers, not as human beings...

The argument that a rent increase is needed to cover costs is unconvincing in light of the $1 million surplus in last year's housing budget, which has never been sufficiently explained. As a nonprofit, nontax-paying institution, university costs are increasing less than those of private investors. Thus there appears to be no justification for the rent increase other than the financing of additional building. Capital expenditures should not be financed out of student rent payments. A building fund for additional housing should be a university priority.

Responsibility for the overall housing situation in Iowa City is continually being shifted back and forth between the city and the university. In actuality the two are completely interrelated, and students and other tenants suffer the consequences. The university is doing nothing to alleviate Iowa City's housing shortage, and is in fact using the shortage to extract higher rents from people who have no alternative but to pay.

It can be argued that the university is aiding private landlords in doing the same. By not building in the face of increasing enrollment, the UI guarantees a surplus of would-be tenants, who are at the mercy of competitive landlords. The university's rent increase at this point is likely to encourage a corresponding increase among other landlords — who must remain "competitive." As the largest landlord in the city, university actions are certainly not isolated in their effect.

The real issue is not how much time dorm residents are given to respond to this rent hike, nor whether the rents are raised along ARH's guidelines or along the administration's. The predetermined nature of the increase only gives resident representatives the opportunity to negotiate among unacceptable alternatives. Administration acceptance of the ARH plan is much more of a victory for the administration than for dorm residents. Students do not have to accept the assumptions and limits put to them by the university administration.

The university's "housing policy" is typical of the abusive nature of tenant-landlord relationships in general. Dorm and married student housing residents are tenants renting from the largest landlord in this city. As such, they presently are powerless to affect their individual living situations. We feel the only way to counter this imbalance is through large-scale collective student action.

Ticket switch

TO THE EDITOR:

Last Sunday, Dec. 14, we were planning to see Handel's Messiah presented by the Iowa City Chamber Singers at Hancher Auditorium. We understood from the posters advertising this event that tickets for students and senior citizens would be 50 cents at the door.

After waiting in line for 45 minutes, we finally got to the front of the line only to find that the price for students had been changed to $2.50 for college students. As far as we know, this change occurred only after the great demand for tickets was noted.

Even if the prices weren't changed as we stood in line, since when is a college student not classified as a student? In other words, if they were not going to include college students they should have stated it on the posters and not have posted the signs in the dormitories where students would just assume that they were included in this classification. What Christmas spirit!

Chemistry hoax — but who's laughing?

As part of this newspaper's editorial page policy, authors of letters to the editor are routinely called for verification of their letters. This precaution is usually not necessary; most of our letter writers are simply individuals or organizations who want to reply to DI articles or letters, or to "speak their piece." The editorial page welcomes such feedback from its readers.

But although letters are genuine 99 per cent of the time, this paper, as does every other paper with a letters column, occasionally receives a hoax letter. The Steve Winkelman letter (DI, Dec. 11), which garnered a response printed below, was one such hoax.

The Winkelman letter, which was typed on letterhead stationery from the Department of Chemistry, Division of Analytical Chemistry, was written as a joke. Steve Winkelman doesn't exist, except as a long-standing joke in the Chemistry Department. Winkelman has had "offices" located in various closets in the Chemistry-Botany building and has been "registered" for classes.

In trying to get verification for the letter, we called the number provided by the letter writer. The man who answered our call said Steve Winkelman wasn't in the office, and he suggested we call the department office.

We called the department, identified ourselves as being from the DI, and asked to be put in contact with Winkelman. The woman who answered the phone asked if the call was about Winkelman's letter to the editor. When we said it was she said Winkelman was out, but that he had told her to tell the DI the letter was confirmed.

The woman, Danae Ames, a clerk-typist in the Chemistry Department, said later that the letter was a joke. She said Winkelman "does not now, nor has he ever, existed." The letter, which she said she only confirmed and didn't help write, was written by another individual whom she has refused to identify. Ames said she viewed the letter not as a hoax or fraud, but as a joke.

But such a "joke" isn't funny to the DI, nor to our readers who have every right to expect that what they read on the editorial page is genuine. If the letter's real author was sincere he or she could have used his or her real name.

By putting a glaring spotlight on these people we don't mean to minimize our role in the publication of the letter. The letter's confirmation was odd, and we were wrong in not being sufficiently suspicious to hold it back. Next time we will not be so trusting.

Unfortunately, our readers may not be so trusting, either. We at the DI have been raked over the coals for sloppy journalism, and often with very good cause. Our letter writers should be held to an equally high standard.

Winkelman 'wasted'

TO THE EDITOR:

This is an open letter to Mr. Steve Winkelman (see editorial above). Your letter attacking Dr. Eymann (DI, Dec. 11) was so inane that I am compelled to submit a rebuttal. Your entire letter was composed of so many unsupported accusations and archaic beliefs as to be nearly self-condemning.

First, I was under the impression that Dr. Eymann was going to invest, with two other people, in the purchase of a tavern, not go to work in one. You sir, presume too much trying to dictate how Dr. Eymann invests his own money. You made the statement, "...graduate students and professors in chemistry are much too dedicated to their teachings and research to indulge in such a frivolous activity as barhopping."

Disregarding the fact that you haven't shown that Dr. Eymann would be "barhopping" by investing in a tavern, since when has Dr. Eymann not been dedicated? Further, how will investing in a tavern inhibit that dedication? If Dr. Eymann chose to purchase shares of stock in a chemical supply company, I'm very confident that you would not condemn him. Where is the correlation?

Let's look at another of your ridiculous statements, "...pervert the community morals for his own gain." Why don't you

Timing, worth of nuclear demonstration questioned

Some comments about the Iowa City coalition against a proposed nuclear power plant story (DI, Dec. 16) deserve response.

The article quoted members of Citizens United for Responsible Energy (CURE) speculating on why the Iowa City coalition did not participate in CURE's plan for protest marches across the state last Sunday. Jane Magers, CURE chairperson, said, "I was under the impression that they were going to participate."

In a two-page letter and in a phone call to Ms. Magers last week, we outlined our reasons for deciding not to participate. We cannot figure the source of Jane's "impression" that we would be part of the marching.

CURE member Bill Anderson said, "The Iowa City coalition asked us to join their coalition this fall, but we refused because we felt the two organizations could work more efficiently separately."

There are more than two organizations involved. The coalition itself is not an organization. It is three organizations which have agreed to consult with each other and coordinate anti-nuclear activities to avoid duplication of effort, take advantage of the strong points of each organization, and thereby "work more efficiently."

The Iowa City coalition includes the Iowa Student Public Interest Research Group (ISPIRG), Free Environment (FE), and Citizens for Environmental Action (CEA).

We find it ironic that the same organization which refused to enter this cooperative venture is now complaining that we are not cooperating with them.

CURE member Gary Goldstein said, "It's very unfortunate that there wasn't a turnout in Iowa City. And specifically in a university town. The purpose of ISPIRG is to get students out into the community and get the community involved. It seems that one is detached from reality when studying at a university. One seems to think that the world exists in books, and tends to leave out the community."

Specifically in a university town, there is one reality from which students cannot become detached: finals week. The scheduling of the march at the start of a week of cramming, packing for vacation, and getting gifts together was one reason why the coalition was unable to participate.

As for "leaving out the community" and thinking "that the world exists in books" — Mr. Goldstein is mistaken in leveling this charge against the coalition members, who are among the most politically active people inside and outside of the university.

Some other reasons for the coalition's non-participation:

—We were notified only three weeks in advance. To participate properly, we would have had to prepare and distribute news releases; write a letter to our 1,600 local supporters; telephone our 20 coalition members; obtain a parade permit; schedule parade marshals; choose a parade route; obtain candles; and do everything else necessary to organize a march. There just wasn't time.

—We feel that a protest march would not rally support among people who haven't yet been reached with our side of the nuclear debate. When we approach members of the public, they ask, "What's wrong with nuclear power?" We feel that education efforts to answer this question would be more valuable at this time than protests.

—Our members are engaged in several crucial time-consuming projects which could not be interrupted for planning a protest march. For example:

—We're maintaining close contact with our senators and representatives, including visits to the Washington, D.C., offices of Reps. Ed Mezvinsky and Mike Blouin.

—We sent out a legislative alert on the Price-Anderson Act, an important piece of legislation scheduled for a vote soon. The act puts what we consider to be dangerous restrictions on the public's right to compensation for damages from a nuclear mishap, as well as subsidizing the utilities' expenses with federal dollars. Our efforts included a bulk mailing, phone calls, and contact with editors of newspapers to urge them to take a stand.

—We have been monitoring the progress of the Iowa reactor proposal, including personally contacting representatives of the utilities and the Iowa Commerce Commission (ICC). We have been preparing further complaints to the ICC.

We are studying the economics of nuclear power and preparing a report to present to the ICC in hearings we will request next year.

—Members have been writing letters to editors and to Congress. We have been preparing and distributing literature. We have been working on a series of fact sheets and articles on the various problems of nuclear power.

—We have been organizing a petition drive which will start with a petition table at the UI's spring registration.

—We have been preparing an equal-time challenge against a radio station which broadcasted a stock program from a nuclear energy trade association, giving listeners the impression that the interview was prepared by the station. We had to obtain a transcript through undercover work, since the trade association and the station both refused to provide one.

In the light of this information, we hope DI readers will come to different conclusions about the coalition's activity or inactivity than did the members of CURE, who were quoted in Tuesday's article.

For the coalition,
Steve Freedkin (FE)
Joyce Dostale (ISPIRG)

ON PUBIC HAIR
By Guest Lecturer Dr. Emerson Leaton.
"Since the dawn of time man has wondered about his pubic hair. Why is it there?
The mountains he could understand; they were there for climbing. Animals were there to kill and eat. Furnaces were there to keep him warm. But what in the hell did pubic hair do. Nothing.
He also wondered why it always grew out curly. Man could have the straightest of hair on his head, but in experiment after experiment with his groin area, the hair would grow back out curly. Women had the same problem.
To this day science has not advanced enough to answer the important question: Why is it curly?"

ON PUBIC HAIR
By Guest Lecturer Dr. Emerson Leaton.
"Since the dawn of time man has wondered about his pubic hair. Why is it there?
The mountains he could understand; they were there for climbing. Animals were there to kill and eat. Furnaces were there to keep him warm. But what in the hell did pubic hair do. Nothing.
He also wondered why it always grew out curly. Man could have the straightest of hair on his head, but in experiment after experiment with his groin area, the hair would grow back out curly. Women had the same problem.
To this day science has not advanced enough to answer the important question: Why is it curly?"

It's time to lay down your holiday bowl bets

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It starts with a Tangerine, ends with an Orange and in between there might be a pit or two; but, by and large, the best college football teams will be testing each other and the tubes of the nation's television sets in the 1975 Bowl bonanza.

The Bears and the Wildcats will spend the holiday season in California and Arizona watching, instead of say, California or Arizona playing. And the bowls they'll be watching will have more drama, heartbreak and changing leads than those afternoon soap operas, which the bowls will be preempting.

For instance: —Will Bear Bryant finally have a happy New Year? —Can USC win one for long John McKay, or will he leave for the Tampa Bay Buccaneers as the captain of a sunken ship? —Can America forgive punished Oklahoma, back between the television commercials after two years on local radio? —Will Woody Hayes make any friends in Pasadena? —And least we forget: —Who, at long last, is really No. 1?

Aggies would rather be in Dallas, but, for them, it won't be a wasted trip. If USC's departing coach, John McKay, watches that A&M defense, he might find a draft choice or two for his National Football League team. That way he can come away with more than just his fifth straight loss....Texas A&M 24, USC 10.

Richards keeps promise

CHICAGO (AP) — Baseball savvy Paul Richards, now 67, returned Wednesday as manager of the Chicago White Sox, which he molded into winning "go-go" teams in the early 1950s.

Chuck Tanner, who has three years left on a $60,000-a-year managerial contract, was invited to stay with the Sox in any other capacity he wishes. Tanner, Manager of the Year for the White Sox in 1972, said he will make his decision within four or five days.

Richards, a close personal friend of new owner Bill Veck, broke into the major leagues as a catcher with Brooklyn in 1932 and considers himself a wizard at handling pitchers.

He managed the Sox from 1951 to 1954. He has been out of baseball since 1972, and his return came at the behest of Veck, 61, who himself is returning to the game for the first time since he sold the White Sox in 1961.

"Several years ago, I made a half promise that if Bill ever owned a ball club again I'd manage it for him," Richards told a news conference.

Veck, who also will serve as general manager, said he wanted a man at the helm he could feel comfortable with.

Veck bought the White Sox in 1959—the year the club won its first pennant in 40 years—but was forced to sell his interest for health reasons.

NFL says no to expansion

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Football League Expansion Committee Wednesday informally turned down Birmingham and Memphis as expansion franchises for 1976.

A formal vote on the two cities' applications for membership must be taken among all 26 NFL owners. However, the door was left open for possible future membership.

The two cities, survivors of the defunct World Football League, met with the expansion committee for several hours at NFL headquarters.

"We explained to them some of the problems we have at this time to expand," said Dan Rooney, president of the Pittsburgh Steelers and chairman of the expansion committee.

"We had no negatives to Birmingham and Memphis," Rooney said. "Our problems are expansion per se—not these two cities."

Rooney and NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle said the day-long meetings did not get into specific aspects of possible expansion into either city.
