13 testify in murder hearing

By LINDA SCHUPPENER

AMMONP — Despite a clouds of legal arguments, 13 persons were convicted Friday of murdering a 11-year-old girl who has not been found in the Central City of Iowa. The hearing was scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. today, but the trial was delayed until at 1 p.m. until approximately 3 p.m. and unaugmented.

Among those called to testify were Dr. and Mrs. John Johnson, medical examiner. Johnson and Johnson were questioned about the condition of the victim, a 11-year-old girl who has not been found in the Central City of Iowa. The hearing was scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. today, but the trial was delayed until at 1 p.m. until approximately 3 p.m. and unaugmented.

Semi-salt, bittersweet—trouble abroad ekes out life

By MARIAN HILL

Weather

The sectional advance off the Iowa 50 roads is on the boil, and cold winds and snow showers will soon be here. Lawrence H. Wall, Iowa City, said that the cold front is expected to move through the area early tomorrow morning.

In the city, the temperature will be around 10 degrees below zero. The winds will be southwesterly at 20 to 30 miles per hour, with gusts up to 40 miles per hour. The high temperature will be around 10 degrees above zero.

In the country, the temperature will be around 5 degrees below zero, with a light southwesterly wind of 5 to 10 miles per hour. The high temperature will be around 10 degrees above zero.

The outlook for the week ahead is uncertain, with cold fronts and an increase in precipitation expected. Be prepared for a possible snowstorm on Thursday, with a high temperature of 10 degrees above zero.

The selection process for the new president of the University of Iowa will begin on Monday, with the search committee holding an open forum at 2 p.m. in the Iowa Memorial Union. The forum will be an opportunity for faculty, students, and alumni to provide input on the search process.

The search committee, led by UI President Bruce Harreld, is seeking a leader who will be able to guide the university through its current challenges and prepare it for the future. The search process will be conducted transparently and will include a rigorous evaluation of candidates.

The university has a long history of excellence in research, teaching, and service, and the next president will be expected to build on this legacy. The search committee is committed to finding a leader who can lead the university into the next decade and beyond.

Muskie blasts Ford’s ‘realism’

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, speaking for the Democratic party Wednesday night, said President Ford’s plans for the economy would mean fewer jobs, higher prices and more unemployment.

Avoiding any direct references to political considerations in the coming November 7th election, the Maine Democrat said what he intended to say was the “faster, more positive momentum” of the campaign and former President Richard Nixon.

He noted that Congress had over the past year and a half voted for seven major tax cuts and would like to see an eighth.

The Ford administration has proposed a $2.5 billion corporate tax cut, which Muskie said he would oppose.

The Democratic plan included a $9 billion tax cut for the middle-income groups of the nation.

Muskie said that plan, supported by many Democrats, would have helped job and price problems. The Ford-Penniman plan, he said, “would cost more than $3 billion.”

He added that the Democratic plan would have helped the nation “not just in the immediate future, but to get back on a sound financial base.”

The stock market, he said, “has been under attack because of a lack of confidence.”

The Democratic plan, he said, would allow the recovery to begin in 1978.

The Ford administration, he said, “has no faith in the economy.”

The nation’s economic problems, he said, were due to the “industrial heart of America,” where Ford was interested in the economy.

The Ford administration, he said, would have the economy under control by 1979.

The Democratic plan, he said, would give the nation a budget surplus in 1978.

Muskie said that Ford was “too optimistic” about the economy, and that he “is nearly as optimistic about the economy as he is about the political future of the country.”
Predismeditated insanity

A recent letter to the editor voices an all-too-common theme: Property rights above all. In his letter of Jan. 13, James K. Smith of 315 Burgo Ave. states that private property is the keystone of any society. He doesn't suggest that private property be abolished, but he claims that the protection of property rights be extended to include animals.

The argument in opposition is that such a policy will result in more harm to animals and fewer to humans. Animals can be more readily controlled than human beings, he states, and it is necessary to prevent their destruction.

The author's arguments are weak and unconvincing. The protection of property rights for animals is not only unnecessary, but could have devastating consequences. The author seems to have a narrow and myopic view of the world, and ignores the complex interplay of interests and values that exist.

One might argue that the author's concerns are legitimate, but the solution he proposes is not. The author's arguments are flawed, and his conclusions are not supported by evidence. It is clear that the author does not understand the complexities of the issue, and his arguments are not convincing. The protection of property rights for animals is not a valid or necessary policy.

Travel centers heighten trip enjoyment, economy

By THERESA CHURCHILL

Travel centers are a way to heighten the enjoyment of a trip and cut costs. They combine the services of a travel agency, tour operators and sometimes even car rental until they become a one-stop shopping center for all your travel needs.

At the center of this growth is the trend toward consolidating and computerizing travel services. The computer makes it possible for travel centers to offer a wide variety of services ranging from air and hotel reservations to car rentals, insurance and other amenities.

The computer also makes it possible for travel centers to offer prices that are lower than those available through travel agencies. In fact, some travel centers offer prices that are even lower than those available through the airlines themselves.

Travel centers are now offering more than just air and hotel reservations. They are also offering car rentals, insurance, and other travel-related services.

Travel centers are also offering more services than ever before. They are now offering car rentals, insurance, and other travel-related services.

Limiting the university senators' numbers to five senators per narrower, the US Student Senate had been denied a role in the senate's decision of an executive committee in both the senate and the Collegiate Division (COD/ CAC).

Only if seven senators were at the meeting, one chair of the senate bill was able to pass. The senate would allow the election of a president to head both the Senate and the Colle­giate Division (COD/CAC).

The senate was termed a "minority" need of the union because this would allow an individual to run for and be elected as a president to head both the Senate and the Colle­giate Division (COD/CAC).

WELLES' finest achievement in outer ring of hell

Tragedy in outer ring of hell

By JOE BRELMAN

In the world of cinema, there has been a recent spate of hollywood biopics, exploring the lives of prominent figures. Among these, the biopic focusing on Welles is particularly interesting. The film, directed by Trelow, is an ambitious and well-researched project that digs deep into the life of the influential director.

Trelow's film explores the tumultuous life of Welles, from his early days as a theater producer to his later years as a filmmaker. The movie explores Welles' personal and professional struggles, and his impact on the film industry. The film is a captivating exploration of the mind of one of Hollywood's greatest talents.

Trelow's approach is unique in that it is grounded in historical accuracy. The film features a talented cast, including some of the industry's most respected actors. The cinematography is stunning, bringing to life the world of Hollywood in the 1930s and 1940s. The film is a masterpiece of visual storytelling, and it is a testament to Trelow's skill as a director.

The film's message is clear: the life of Orson Welles was one of great triumphs and equally great defeats. The film explores Welles' relationships with key figures in the film industry, and his innovative and controversial ideas. The film is a must-see for anyone interested in the world of cinema, and it is a fitting tribute to one of Hollywood's greatest talents.

Confab for organizations to provide info exchange

By ROBERT THOMAS

WASHINGTON - In the waning days of this final session of the 98th Congress, the House Agriculture Committee is preparing to consider a major reorganization of its own with the aim of better serving the needs of the industry it represents.

In the past, the committee has been criticized for being too focused on the needs of farmers and not enough on the needs of consumers. The new reorganization would give more weight to consumer interests and would also provide for better coordination with other committees and agencies.

The new reorganization would also provide for more oversight of the federal food aid program, which has come under increased scrutiny in recent years.

The House Agriculture Committee is one of the most powerful committees in Congress, and its actions can have a significant impact on the nation's food supply. It is therefore important that the committee is well staffed and well resourced to carry out its duties effectively.

As the committee considers the new reorganization, it is important to remember that the needs of consumers should not be sacrificed in favor of the needs of farmers. The committee should work to strike a balance between the two, and to ensure that the interests of all Americans are served.

The House Agriculture Committee has an important role to play in ensuring that the nation's food supply is safe, affordable, and accessible to all. With the new reorganization, it is well positioned to carry out this role effectively.

New state resource programs first in operation in nation

By R.D. BURCHETT

The new state resource program has been launched in southern Illinois, with the goal of providing information and assistance to consumers.

The program, which is funded by the state government, is designed to help consumers make informed decisions about the products they buy and the services they use.

The program will provide information on a wide range of topics, including food safety, nutrition, and energy conservation.

It is expected that the program will be well received by consumers, who will be able to make more informed decisions about the products they buy.

In addition to providing information, the program will also provide assistance to consumers who need help with a particular issue.

The program is expected to be well received by consumers, who will be able to make more informed decisions about the products they buy.
Walton's different drum beating louder than ever

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Walton doesn't lack anything in terms of college success but his lack of athletic talent is the only thing that can be said of his career at UCLA. Walton is primarily known for his talents in the center position for the Portland Trail Blazers and the National Basketball Association.

The 6-foot-10 Walton was known for his court sense and plays like no one else. He was a basketball player with a left hand and the third and fourth fingers of both hands were amputated at birth. He continued to play basketball and was able to protect his fingers with tape and a special sleeve. He continued to play basketball at an early age and was known for his passing accuracy and quickness.

Walton was a two-time All-American and was the first player to be drafted in the NBA from UCLA. He was known for his intelligence on the court and his ability to read the game. Walton was also known for his dunking ability and was known for his ability to get to the hoop.

He was the only player in NBA history to be drafted in the first round twice from the same school. Walton was known for his ability to get to the hoop and was known for his ability to read the game. Walton was also known for his ability to get to the hoop and was known for his ability to read the game.

His career was cut short by a knee injury in 1984, but he continued to play basketball for the rest of his life. Walton was known for his ability to get to the hoop and was known for his ability to read the game.

Grant, AIAW proposing athletic scholarship cuts

By KAREN SMITH

The two main hurdles for the Iowa women's basketball team are the NCAA and the National Association for Intercollegiate Athletics (AIAW). Tracy Keys, Iowa's women's basketball coach, said this week that the women's basketball team has been hit hard by the NCAA. "I have not known many women who have felt the pinch as much as Iowa has," Keys said. "When I started coaching here, I had a dream about the team winning a national championship. Now, I realize that we can only make the NCAA tournament once a year and that we are competing against teams with larger budgets."

The NCAA has proposed a new scholarship formula that would reduce the number of scholarships available to women's basketball teams. The formula would only allow teams to provide scholarships to 11 players, down from the current 12. Keys said, "This is not a fair system. We have always had more than 12 players on our roster because we need depth."

The AIAW has responded to the NCAA's proposal by proposing a new scholarship formula. The AIAW has proposed a full-ride scholarship for each player, which would allow teams to provide scholarships to 15 players. Keys said, "This is a much fairer system. We need to have depth on our roster to be competitive."

Keys also said that she is concerned about the financial implications of the NCAA's proposal. "Our team has a budget of $500,000. If we lose five scholarships, we will have to find a way to make up the difference."

The women's basketball team has struggled to make ends meet in recent years. "We have been fighting to keep our team on the court," Keys said. "We have had to cut back on travel and equipment, and we have had to find ways to fund our program."

The NCAA and AIAW are expected to continue to negotiate the scholarship formula. Keys said, "We need to find a solution that is fair for all teams."
