Before the Iowa City Board of Education meets to discuss urban renewal and the flexibility of buildings on the University of Iowa campus, a group of students have been working to ensure that such places would be preserved.

A group of students formed the Iowa Preservation Advocates (IPA) in order to keep the University of Iowa campus "as it is." Members of the group include students from the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, Architecture, and Urban Planning.

The group plans to present its findings to the Board of Education and to the public in a series of meetings and workshops.

IPA members believe that preserving the campus will enhance the educational experience and provide a sense of continuity for students.

IPA is also concerned with the impact of development on the natural environment and the community as a whole.

IPA members encourage the public to attend the Board of Education meetings and to participate in the discussion of urban renewal plans.

The Iowa Preservation Advocates believe that preservation is possible and that it is important to work towards it.

Quick change! Lily Tomlin star of stage and screen

BY JOHN TESCHIUI
Half Writer

For the first few minutes of the show, Lily Tomlin was bumbling along, looking like a man, and the audience was so taken aback that they asked for a full house. She was so convincingly a man that there were several audience members who mistook her for a real man. It was a genuine surprise, and the audience was left wondering if she was really a woman or just a skilled actor. For those who didn't know Lily Tomlin, it was a revelation, and those who did know her were in awe of her ability to transform into such a convincing man.

Foul play suspected in Wakefield case

By R. MCADAMS

Incredible new evidence has been found in the case of John Wakefield, who is suspected of foul play in the death of a woman. According to police, Wakefield, who is the owner of a billiards parlor on 206 North Arbor Street, has been acting suspiciously. The police have gathered new evidence, search warrants and interview tapes from the parlor, and are currently investigating Wakefield's activities.

Wakefield is the estranged husband of two businesses operated by new evidence, search warrants and interview tapes from the parlor, and are currently investigating Wakefield's activities.

One of the new pieces of evidence is a tape recording on a portapak, which allegedly shows Wakefield engaging in sexual activities in the back of a minivan. The tape was found in a bag belonging to Wakefield, and police are currently analyzing it for further clues.

Wakefield was a math teacher at an elementary school in North Lansing, and his estranged wife, Susie, is a nurse at a nursing home. According to Capt. John Wakefield, the motive for the murder is still unknown, but the police are working on several leads.

Another piece of evidence is the discovery of a package of Miller High Life in a box at the back of the billiards parlor. The police are currently investigating the source of the beer, which was not ordered by the business at the time of the murder.

The police are currently interviewing several witnesses, includingMagoo's Lounge, a popular bar in town. The owner of the bar, Immo, Perrine, said that Wakefield was frequently seen at the bar, and that he was always friendly and polite.

The police are also looking into the possibility that Wakefield may have been involved in a financial dispute with his estranged wife. According to sources, Wakefield had recently been involved in a legal battle over the ownership of the two businesses.

The police are working with the Iowa City police to assist in the investigation. According to Capt. John Wakefield, the motive for the murder is still unknown, but the police are working on several leads.

DI disserce ‘confirmed’

It’s an official move now: the DI does not serve the public interest. You would never think that a newspaper would refuse to serve the public interest, that the paper may be in its study funds. But this is the DI’s way of doing it.

When I was a student at the University of North Carolina, I was a member of the DI and I received work study funds. But in the DI, the paper was not the DI, but received work study funds. This public interest requirement strikes me as an extreme, virtually any student organization or university officials can have the paper study committee and employees. Does a secretary or, say, Tailor, serve the public interest, while a newspaper produced for the entire student population, does not.

Even more ludicrous was my first work study job. It was in 1966, at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, when I was a half hour away from driving the mail押. I was in charge of a grade school art class. That was in the DI.

So far arguments in favor of the DI have been based on who reads the paper, other than students. The DI is the last thing on the list of basic questions that any student organization or university officials, serving as a kind of student clientele, have to judge the public interest — while the newspaper that serves all of us serves the public interest.

If you think that the DI, as defined by the DI, would be worse at serving a special interest — though in no case the DI was around — then the DI does not serve the public interest. And not all of Iowa legalization laws benefit from the DI’s existence; the DI does not serve the community.

If we’re talking about special interests, it is evident that the Office of Education itself serves a select interest: education. The work study program, too, serves a special interest — the same one the DI was around serving students. At least the DI intends to fraud, staff and some students of the benefit. The study program for the students. Work to the contrary, doesn’t even serve the students — just the needy ones.

Perhaps it is talking about political interest — a deep-seated bureaucratic journal of.

Mencken and mirth for our time

One of my favorite people in the Historical House of Mencken is a political person. In a letter to the editor of the DI in 1960, he said: "Students. Work study, to the contrary, doesn’t even serve the students — just the needy ones."

Perhaps it is talking about political interest — a deep-seated bureaucratic journal of.

Federal revenue sharing not in local budget plans

By K. PATRICK JENKINS

Associated Press Editor

U.S. Rep. Elizabeth McIntyre predicted busi- ness that Iowa City will have to face if the federal budget does not provide local revenue sharing funds.

"I am not hopeful," she said. "It's a very urgent matter and it's not just an urgent matter for a few communities but for all communities in the country.

"I believe it is important that we continue to advocate for these funds because they provide much-needed assistance to local governments," she said.

"I hope that the administration and Congress will recognize the importance of these funds and work to ensure that they are provided in the future."

Van De Bogart

Four years ago, at the Joint Chiefs of Staff in New York, the esteemed retired general who now heads the nonprofit National Defense University, said something that stuck with me: "To be a leader, you must be a leader first."

"If you don't believe in yourself, how can you expect others to believe in you?"

I was a young reporter covering a story about the military when I heard him say those words. They were simple, yet profound, and I have carried them with me ever since.

In the months that followed, I chatted with Van De Bogart several times more, always with the same result: He was a model leader, both in the military and beyond.

"I am grateful for the opportunity to serve my country," he said recently. "And I am proud of the work we have done to develop leaders who will continue to serve.

"Leadership is not about being in charge, but about being a guide. It is about setting an example and inspiring others to follow.

"I have learned that effective leaders must be willing to accept responsibility and take action, even when it is difficult."

And so it is that his words continue to resonate with me, reminding me of the importance of leadership in all aspects of life.
Movie has composer's wife chronicle her husband's life

By PHEL NICHOLSON

On the 50th anniversary of the death of Chou En-lai, the late Prime Minister of China, a biographical film is currently being released.

This film is in honor of Chou's wife, Lee Guine, and provides a detailed account of his life, including his political and personal struggles.

Chou's death was a great loss to the United States. He was a valued ally in the US-China relationship.

In 1971, Chou En-lai was instrumental in arranging the first official visit of a Chinese leader to the United States, which led to the end of the Cold War.

Chou was a visionary leader who believed in peace and cooperation. He was a true friend of the United States and his legacy will be remembered for generations to come.

Illiteracy shocks Gallup, considered disgrace

By BILL HILL

The results of an illiteracy survey conducted in China by Gallup are quite shocking. The survey revealed that 90 percent of all the children are illiterate.

The survey was conducted by a team of leading experts in the field of education and was released today.

The implications of these findings are staggering. It is estimated that the lack of education is costing China $20 billion a year.

The survey also revealed that the majority of those who are illiterate are children. This is a serious problem as it is estimated that 50 percent of all children in China are not attending school.

It is clear that more needs to be done to address this issue. We must invest in education and provide children with the tools they need to succeed in life.

Gallup also calls on nations around the world to take action to combat illiteracy. They urge governments to increase their spending on education and to provide children with the resources they need to learn.

Gallup also notes that the lack of education is not limited to China. It is a global problem that must be addressed.

In conclusion, the results of the Gallup survey are a stark reminder of the importance of education. We must act now to ensure that every child has the opportunity to learn and succeed.

The musicians are held in high regard by the audience and the performance is packed with a sense of occasion.

The audience is up on its feet in anticipation of the next number to be played. The music is a blend of old and new, with a touch of the oriental.

The forever Young Concerto is a hit with the audience and the performance is a testament to the talents of the performers.

The film goes on to show how Chou En-lai's life was marked by his commitment to the Chinese Revolution. He was a true leader who fought for the rights of all Chinese people.

The film is a powerful reminder of the importance of education and the need to invest in the future of our children.

Michigan guns down Hawkeyes

It's time for the Iowa basketball team to "buckle down" in its first game in the Big Ten. The Hawkeyes hope to avoid an upset and improve their record at home. After losing their second straight game, a 104-98 overtime victory in the Big Ten Preview, the Michigan Wolverines will continue to build momentum and possibly move to the Big Ten top two. The Iowa Hawkeyes, despite dropping three of their last four games after a 4-0 start, have high hopes for the season. Iowa Coach Lola Haynes may want to send a "fighting spirit" to the Hawkeyes to take on Illinois' Marv Harbert. For the second consecutive game in overtime, Iowa hanged up the Big Ten record after winning 118-111. Is the Hawkeyes' starting lineup to be 101-95 shoot-out with Purdue in 4-7, but that winning margin was never in doubt, according to Iowa. Coach Johnny Orr said about six points "worth" - "We'll get the Iowa Hawkeyes to the #1 in the Big Ten. A 101-95 shoot-out with Purdue. Iowa Coach Johnny Orr didn't hesitate to criticize his Hawkeyes if he wasn't in contention for the NCAA title. "I think we're going to win the #1 place tonight," Orr said at a recent public appearance. "We'll get the Hawkeyes to the #1 in the Big Ten."

Wrestlers closing on title after two Big Ten wins

Iowa's No. 1 ranked wrestling team took a decisive step toward a conference title, 4-0 over Minnesota on Friday night. But the Wolverines are in West Lafayette for a game with Purdue on Saturday night.

If we want to stay in the running for second place, we've got to go out and take care of business tonight," Iowa's star wrestler Mark Johnson said. "We've got to go out and get some big wins to stay in this race." Iowa's Mark Johnson said he didn't want to lose his place in the #1 ranking, but he wanted to get some big wins on Friday night. "We're going to have to go out and get some big wins tonight," Johnson said. "We're going to have to go out and get some big wins tonight."
