BROWNS-BARIEL years

The Burns-Bariel years were a turbulent period for Supervisor Floyd Burns, who was elected to office in 1962 and served until 1967. Burns was known for his aggressive style and controversial actions, which led to numerous disputes with other county authorities, including the auditor. The rivalry between Burns and Bariel, his successor, was a major topic of discussion during this time. The Burns-Bariel period was marked by a series of legal battles and public scandals, including allegations of misuse of public funds and conflict of interest. Despite their personal animosity, both men were instrumental in shaping the political landscape of the county, and their legacies continue to be debated by historians and residents to this day.

Van-go!

An unlisted phone number was apparently dialed by a person who was looking for a van. The call went unanswered, and the person left a message on the answering machine, saying, "I'm looking for a van. Can you help me find one?" The message was not returned, and the person continued to call, leaving additional messages.

Quinlan's career spanned several decades, and she continued to act well into her later years, even appearing in some modern films. Her legacy as a Hollywood icon is still remembered today.
Regents express concern
Allocations ‘inadequate’

WASHINGTON, Iowa (AP) — The State Board of Regents on Friday rejected an increase of $6.4 million request to offset higher-than-expected expenses at the three state universities examined by the General Auditor. The university presidents said the universities are facing significant financial challenges.

The legislature allocated $6.4 million to Iowa State University, $10.5 million to the University of Northern Iowa and $5.8 million to the University of Iowa. The board also approved $2 million in matching funds for the three institutions.

The regents were asked about the UI graduate program in business and health administration. The program has been cut back and the UI president has said he would consider a smaller program.

Administrative support is important to the program, the regents said, given students' interest in changing the demands of the job.

Wednesday, the UI Board of Regents, elected students, faculty members and students, will continue to discuss the program and the administration will continue to meet with students and faculty members.

Meeting at a Lawmakers Legislative, the board raised a possibility to look into the possibility of hearing the three state universities' budget for next fiscal year.

The system, currently set to use servers for local locations, would make it possible to connect to community groups as many as 150 people each with large queues at each location.

Shaky future for guaranteed loans

WASHINGTON (AP) — American children have stopped growing taller, thereby breaking a century-old trend of youngsters towering over their parents, the government reported Tuesday.

"We're not sure whether that trend has reversed itself or whether it will continue," said Linda Murphy, a professor at the University of Iowa who was not involved with the study. "It's possible that this is just a blip in the data, but we need to follow up to see if this is a real change," she said.

The study, which is the first of its kind in the United States, examined data from more than 3,000 children across the country over the last 80 years. The children were measured at age 3, 6, 9, and 12, and then again at age 15, 18, and 21.

The results showed that the average height of boys and girls has increased over the past century, but that growth has slowed significantly in recent years. In fact, the average height of 15-year-old boys in the United States is now lower than it was in 1920.

The study also found that the increase in height has been greatest for children in economically disadvantaged families, who are more likely to be taller than those in more affluent families.

"These findings suggest that economic factors, such as access to nutritious food and education, play a significant role in determining a child's height," said Murphy.

The study was funded by the National Institutes of Health and the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development.

Media share the blame

To the relief of virtually everyone the primary season ended yesterday with the "Super Bowl" all American politics -- the presidential primaries in California, New Jersey and Ohio.

The election year has been pleasant virtually to all. The media have overplayed it in emotional terms, and partly at that. That Jimmy Carter and Jerry Brown won in the most populous state and New York, whose governor Jay Rockefeller was re-elected, accorded the American electorate a personal victory.

The vote was expected to remain the presidential primaries with voter disinterest between those two nations. To Nixon's Revenge, constitutional for that reason, but can only be struck down as the court reinterprets

Soviet crop may fall short

U.S. crop eyed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union says it needs more meat and that U.S. exports may be more valuable to America farmers for more than previously expected. According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, information officials were reluctant to make public projections of grain on the market.

David Schoonover, a specialist in U.S. Foreign Economic Affairs, told the Associated Press that export plans are not likely to make the U.S. part of a similar Soviet export market.

Last year's largest foreign buyer of 189 million metric tons was the European Union, which imported grain for the Soviet Union.

The United States, which has exported up to 10 million metric tons of grain to the Soviet Union, was reluctant to make public projections on which country would be likely to make the U.S. part of a similar Soviet export market.

Crisimolin testifies footsteps

footprint not Mark’s

SOUTH IOWA, IOWA (AP) — The family of a 15-year-old girl who disappeared from the town of Mark last year has filed a lawsuit seeking answers and compensation from the state of Iowa and the city of Mark.

The lawsuit, filed by the family’s attorney, says that the state and city failed to properly investigate the disappearance of the girl and that the family was not properly notified of any developments.

The family, represented by the law firm of Johnson & Johnson, said in the suit that the state and city “failed in their duty” to protect the girl and that they “failed to communicate effectively with the family.”

The family is seeking unspecified damages for the loss of their daughter and the emotional trauma caused by the disappearance.

The lawsuit also calls for creation of a state commission to investigate disappearances of children in the state.

A spokesperson for the state attorney general’s office said they could not comment on the lawsuit.

Meanwhile, the family of the girl is holding a fundraising campaign to cover legal and other expenses.

They have set up a GoFundMe page and are seeking donations from the public.

The family said they are determined to find their daughter and bring her home.

History

The city, founded in the 1850s, is located on the banks of the Mississippi River and is known for its rich history and cultural heritage.

The city was settled in 1836 by John Mark, a former slave who purchased his freedom and founded the city on the site of his former slave owner’s plantation.

The city quickly grew and became a major port for the transportation of goods and people along the river.

In the late 19th century, the city was the site of a major railroad and industrial boom, with the construction of the Mark Bridge and the opening of the Mark Cotton Mill.

The city’s history is rich with notable figures, including several presidents and governors.

Today, the city is known for its historic sites and cultural events, including the annual Markville Art Festival and the Markville Museum.

The city is also home to a number of schools and universities, including the University of Mark.

In recent years, the city has undergone a revitalization effort, with the construction of new buildings and the renovation of historic structures.

The city is now a popular destination for tourists and visitors, with its rich history and beautiful setting.

The city is also a hub for economic development, with a thriving business community and a number of major employers.

In conclusion, the city of Mark is a treasure of history and culture, with a rich past and a bright future.
Veteran's field strong in Kemper golf tourney

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) - Bob Hope solidified his status as a celebrity golfer by winning his second title in 15 years as a pro-amateur player Thursday when he won the $35,000 Kemper Invitational. Hope, 68, who has won 24 tournaments in his career, won $10,000 for the win and $5,000 for his 18-under-par round. He finished at 16-under-par 272. Hope, who was paired with Ken Venturi, finished two strokes ahead of Bob Charles and Bill Rogers, who shared second place.

Major league attendance up

With the baseball season underway, major league attendance is up by 15 percent over the same period last year, it was announced Wednesday. Though Barryman's guess, the attendance for 1976 is expected to increase by 5 percent over last year's figure. About an equal number of people were watching games for the past two seasons.

Seventeen teams have increased attendance, thanks to the Boston Red Sox, whose attendance is up by 20. The Brooklyn Dodgers, Chicago White Sox, Detroit Tigers, and Philadelphia Phillies have also shown increases.

The Los Angeles Dodgers lead the major leagues in attendance with 1,248,000 fans. The New York Yankees are in second place with 1,200,000 fans.

RED'S MORGAN 'NOT HOT TO TROT'
PITTSBURGH (AP) — During the current upturn of the Pittsburgh Pirates, second baseman Red's Morgan, who was once known for his practice throwing around the bases, has been back in the spotlight. In the first two games of the series, Morgan has four hits, including a critical sixth-inning bases loaded single in the last game. He now has a hit in six of his last seven games.

Morgan has been impressive, but it's not just his batting that has caught the attention of the fans. In the last game of the series, he made a diving catch for an out on a deep fly ball, showing off his athleticism and defensive skills.

Morgan's success is not limited to the field. He has been active in community service, including a recent appearance at a local charity event. He has also been working on his fitness regimen, including strength training and cardiovascular exercises.

Morgan's dedication to his craft is evident in his approach to the game. He always arrives early to the park, preparing mentally and physically for the day's contest. He is known for his focus and intensity, never allowing distractions to interfere with his performance.

The Pirates are off to a hot start this season, and Morgan's contributions have been a key factor in their success. He continues to prove that he is not as old as he looks, and his presence on the field is a welcome sight for fans everywhere.
