The news briefly

Taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate voted Monday to increase taxes on tobacco, stocks and capital gains, but it took a key procedural vote before a significant part of the Tax Reform Bill could be enacted.

The vote was taken because Congress will be out of town until after Thanksgiving, and floor leaders want to avoid a protracted debate before the last day of the year's session.

The measure is expected to raise about $12 billion in revenue over the next five years.

The Senate defeated a motion to reconsider the bill on the first day of the current session.

The vote was 60-39, with 10 Republicans and four Democrats joining the minority in opposition.

Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Syrian troops have begun a sweeping offensive in the southern region of Lebanon, the Lebanon-based United Nations observer mission said.

The move is part of a broader offensive launched by the Syrian military to assert its control over the entire country.

The Lebanese government said it would not resist the Syrian advance.

Weather

The weather in the Midwest is expected to be generally favorable for outdoor activities.

The National Weather Service forecast calls for mostly sunny skies with temperatures in the low 50s to mid-60s.

Mercenaries sentenced to die

ANGOLA, Angola (AP) - Angola's government announced Monday that it has sentenced 16 mercenaries to death for their role in the country's civil war.

The announcement came as tensions remained high between the government and opposition forces.

The mercenaries were reportedly part of a group of about 200 fighters who crossed the border from South Africa to support the Angolan government.

The government said the mercenaries had been involved in multiple armed clashes and had killed several civilians.

Old Cap Memorial is expected to announce a meeting date next week for establishing a building committee.

Members of Old Cap must discuss joining the committee that would be formed to raise funds for the construction of a new building.

Construction on the building, the first scheduled to be built on the town square, will begin this fall.

The announcement of the meeting date is expected to be made in the next few weeks, according to Old Cap Memorial President Rick Foster.

Old Cap Memorial President Mark Bledsoe said the meeting will be held at 7 p.m. on the second Tuesday of every month at the Old Cap Community Center, located on the corner of Center and Main streets.

First women cadets admitted

Air Force academy goes co-ed

By The American Press

With the end of the military's "Don't ask, don't tell" policy and the new administration's emphasis on diversity, the Air Force Academy is expected to announce a new policy that will allow women to join the academy.

The academy, which previously admitted only men, is expected to make the announcement in a press conference on Tuesday morning.

Women will be admitted to the academy starting this fall, and the academy is expected to make the decision based on the results of a study that was conducted earlier this year.

The study, which looked at the performance of female cadets, found that they were just as capable as male cadets in all areas of the academy.

The academy is also expected to announce that it will begin accepting female cadets in all five branches of the military, including the Air Force, Army, Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard.

Women have been serving in the military for decades, but they have not been admitted to the academy until now.

The academy has been under pressure to admit women for years, and the announcement is expected to be met with widespread support.

"The academy's decision to admit women is a major step forward," said a statement from the academy's president.

"We are thrilled to be able to welcome women into our ranks and look forward to seeing their contributions to the academy and the military as a whole."
Epidemic of 'rowdiness

Vandalism threatens campers

By DAVID DOWITTE

Thousands of campers and picnickers will visit area parks and recreation areas during the Fourth of July weekend, but many of them will probably have their fun curtailed by a growing epidemic of vandalism, theft, sexual harassment and general "rowdiness" on the part of a select few, according to area park officials.

"People seem to be willing to commit to acts of vandalism," said Larry Young, area park supervisor for the Coralville Parks and Recreation Department.

"So far, we've had about 40 truckloads of trash this summer alone. People seem to think they can just throw trash in the parks. They don't respect the parks the way they should." Young added.

Young said the vandalism problem is becoming worse and seen in different forms.

"We've had people set fires, spray paint on the campsites, and break into campsites. We've had everything from theft to damage of property to area park officials. We've had people run over campers with expensive equipment, especially canoes and kayaks," Young said, adding that "nothing doesn't help".

Appellant's difficulty of controlling in the county parks is not an area in the area's state parks, which would include Lake Macbride State Park in the Coralville area and Pinella's Kaye State Park, just north of Johnson County.

"Speaking for the Iowa State Conservation Commission, I report that vandalism and disturbances in state parks is increasing," Young said. "This year, lawn furniture is being damaged and people are using".

"We've had a number of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and local officials have seen vandalism and related problems have increased at the Coralville Reservoir area.

"We're concerned about the problem in the area's state parks, particularly the parks that are closed," Young said.

But besides vandalism, the sheriff's office has had to increase the number of reports of the theft of camping equipment, especially canoes and kayaks. "We're trying to keep up with the problem," Young said, adding that "nothing doesn't help".

Olympic paranoa

The U.S. Olympic track and field trials are over and so are the accusations the American team has been selected. Unfortunately, for various reasons, our prominent athletes did not make the U.S. team for the Olympics. This because of other internal or temporarily disabling injuries. Steve Williams, unquestionably the fastest man in track today over 100 meters, was forced out of the competition due to a strained muscle. Henry Stovall, easily America's best hope in the 5000 meter event, was ruled out because of a left lung infection. Naturally a number of spectators and commentators were taken aback by the news. How could America make the team without its top athletes? Some somehow this message escaped Smith or Ford, or at least they didn't realize it. One of the year, or lack would have been that politics and religion to some extent are the same. It may not seem possible, but some say you have to be a politician to be a religious leader. While this might be true, the distinction is not always clear. Some politicians use religious rhetoric to gain support, while some religious leaders use political means to achieve their goals.

Outraged men, desperate men will be safe ... Hungry men will eat.

The expected American team has been selected. Of the 5,000 impossible to name. The miles, meters, failed to make the team for similar reasons. Williams, accepted the challenge to be a member of the American team for the Olympic Games. He has accepted the challenge to be a member of the American team for the Olympic Games.

Payment sought for racist outrage

By FREDERICK J. WILLIAMS

Regarded from the Indiana Daily Student Daily

As one views from after the unfortunate violence experienced on the black African continent, the black African man, his own country, Rhodesia and South Africa, we here in America and other world places and prophetic words of Frederick Douglass, the black African, Douglass, the only true vessel, drayer, creator and orator and leader, needed to be listening to. The drum roll is going in the southern states of America.

Douglass said. "Where justice is denied, where property is impounded, and where one race is made to feel that society is an organized conspiracy of oppression, riots, mob and rage... fewer persons our property will be in the state. ... Now every race will cause riot, riot. ... And those who seek revenge.

Also, all people, all races and all races have their limitations. The British realized this in India and parts of Africa, the French in their expeditions, the United States in the Vietnam War. The famous historian E.B. Hallowes once wrote that we must learn from the past. He further said that this message escaped Smith or Ford. While many of us have heard of this message, the other message, that is, the message that we must learn from the past, has not been heard well.

If such race is Smith and Vonner were related, they would realize that their only choice is for a peaceful transition of power if they continue to resist territorially, then the result will be a multitude of deaths on both sides of the struggle. The other choice is for the black majority to realize their dreams and to achieve their freedom. The black majority will be able to achieve this by themselves.

Marjorie Margolies Mezvinsky paces politics, family and career

"Both Bill and I feel that the security issues - getting a reasonable answer from some of the gentlemen of a few years ago, as much as we could at the time - is crucial for the safety of our military and our lives. As much as we could, we asked them (the intelligence community) to go through our mail. They all say yes, then they all say no. So we haven't addressed this problem," she says.

The book "The White House Hands, and几乎 serve" was published in 2000. Mezvinsky has encouraged her husband to serve in Congress, but he has not been interested in running for office.

Since the middle of her marriage, Mezvinsky has been a somewhat disarming nature, a news correspondent for NBC, an author, and a diplomat and convincing style. She guides the interview the way you like it, but the charm you can't quite ignore.

She knows that they have put our energies. We spend as much time at E, Washington . Dial 351-1229 . We have used her husband Ed, her two children, and her and Emma's school. She knows that people are putting their energies into this issue.

The next step is for the Mezvinsky family to get more involved. "We're going to have a certain trust in their judgment," she says. "That's where we put our energies. We spend as much time at E, Washington ."

They do it at the University of Kansas, UCLA, and Stanford, and now they're doing it at the UI and in Iowa City. And they're doing it for real.

What are they doing? They're starting "track camps," a new idea in American track and field. What makes these camps unique is that they're two to three weeks long, and the kids don't run on an indoor track. The training programs are high school teams or junior colleges.

The programs begin in high school usually, with 15 to 20 athletes. Each team is assigned a coach, and the kids are divided into classes. The classes are small, and the coach can work with the students under intense supervision.

Along with the weight training, the athletes run through the fields, and the students are allowed to "run free." This is why the kids look so good.

The only rule is that the kids can't be involved in the same race in the same week. They must be divided into two or more races to ensure that they don't run the same track.

After the season, the kids are allowed to continue running on the track and in the fields. This is why the kids look so good.

The "track camp" has been growing steadily since its first year. Last year the coaches used their "track camp" to prepare 300 athletes for the upcoming season. This year, the coaches expect to have 400 athletes in the camp.

The camp is open to any athlete who has shown potential, and the coaches are looking for athletes who can run 100 yards in 10 seconds or less.

The first week of the camp is focused on the basic skills of running. The second week is focused on the development of the athletes as individuals. The third week is focused on the development of the athletes as a team.
