Academy wants to can aerosols

WASHINGTON (AP) - The National Academy of Sciences, in a report on aerosol delivery systems, has recommended that the Food and Drug Administration consider regulating aerosols used for the delivery of prescription drugs. The academy said that, in some cases, aerosols could be harmful to users and that the FDA should consider regulating aerosols to ensure their safety.

The academy noted that aerosols are used to deliver drugs in many different ways, including inhalation, injection, and topical application. It said that aerosols can be harmful if used incorrectly, and that the FDA should consider regulating them to ensure that they are used safely.

The academy recommended that the FDA consider regulating aerosols to ensure their safety, and that it should consider developing regulations that would be specific to the different types of aerosols that are used for different purposes.

The academy also recommended that the FDA consider regulating aerosols to ensure that they are manufactured and distributed in a way that is consistent with good manufacturing practices.

In addition, the academy recommended that the FDA consider regulating aerosols to ensure that they are marketed in a way that is consistent with good advertising and promotion practices.

The search of year-old Sherron Dodge, the 16-year-old woman who was last seen in May, ended Monday when her body was found in a shallow grave near a highway in the town of Delhi, Iowa, about 40 miles north of Dubuque. The body was discovered by a farmer who was looking at the area for his cornfield. The farmer, who found the body near a highway, said he was looking for a cat that had been reported missing. The cat was found and returned to its owner. The body was taken to the County Coroner's Office for an autopsy.

South Africa mulls U.S. consortium plan for Rhodesia

WASHINGTON (AP) - The United States has asked South Africa to help in negotiations to bring about an end to the Rhodesian one-man war. The U.S. is considering a plan put forward by Rhodesia's opposition leaders which would feature a consortium of countries to help negotiate with the white minority government in Rhodesia.

Rhodesia's black leaders have rejected the proposals of the international community, which would serve as a bridge between the black liberation forces and the Smith government.

The consortium plan is supported by Rhodesia's black minority and would be under the aegis of the International Conference of European Churches.

The consortium plan is likely to come up for consideration in the next few weeks, according to some reports.

The Rhodesian government has rejected
all proposals for a cease-fire and peace talks, asserting that it will continue its fight until black majority rule is established.

The U.S. has indicated its willingness to support Rhodesia's black leaders, asserting that it will not recognize any government that does not include black South Africans.

Cost heart of housing problem

By J. C. GRANDAU

The Daily Iowan

The heart of the housing problem in Iowa City today is the lack of available low-cost housing.

In Iowa City, as in many other college towns, landlords have been faced with rising rent levels.

The problem is complicated by the fact that the city's population has increased significantly since the early 1960s, and the demand for housing has outpaced the supply.

The housing shortage is particularly severe in the downtown area, where rents have skyrocketed.

The city has taken some steps to address the problem, including the establishment of a rent control ordinance.

However, these measures have not been enough to solve the problem, and many students and low-income residents are living in substandard conditions.

The city council has expressed concern about the situation and is working to find solutions, including the possibility of creating more affordable housing units.

The housing shortage is a significant issue in Iowa City and is being closely monitored by the city council and other local officials.
Beyond reproach

The organization of police and sheriff’s departments and state and local government agencies has led to a wave of resignations as a result of the question of control. A recent survey of chiefs of police and sheriffs in the United States reveals that the larger departments are experiencing a significant erosion of control. The survey, conducted by the National Sheriffs’ Association, found that 60% of the respondents reported a decrease in control over their departments, with the largest decrease occurring in departments with more than 100 officers. This trend is particularly concerning given the increasing demands placed on law enforcement agencies.

Local governments have also experienced a decrease in control, with 50% of the respondents reporting a decrease in control over their departments. The decrease in control is most pronounced in departments with a population of less than 10,000.

In response to the erosion of control, a number of agencies have taken steps to improve their control. The National Sheriffs’ Association has recommended that departments increase the number of supervisors, increase the number of training hours, and implement a system for reporting and tracking of incidents.

Arms control impact statement: new way to slow the arms race

Male ego and genes
disqualify Richards

In the future, a man's disqualifies his ability to be a hero, because the impact of his role in the world. The importance of a man's role in the world is often seen by society as an indication of his value.

Robert Richards, a man, in a study of male hormones and their impact on male behavior, has found that male hormones can alter behavior in at least two ways. First, male hormones can change the way a man perceives and responds to situations. For example, a man with high levels of male hormones may be more likely to take risks and engage in impulsive behavior. Second, male hormones can change the way a man perceives and responds to other people. For example, a man with high levels of male hormones may be more likely to perceive other people as threats and respond to them with aggression.

The impact of male hormones on male behavior is not limited to the individual. Societies that place a high value on male hormones may be more likely to reward and encourage male behavior, which can lead to a society that is more aggressive and less tolerant of diversity.

Male hormones are not the only factor that can influence male behavior. Social and cultural factors also play a significant role. For example, a society that values and rewards male behavior may be more likely to encourage male behavior, even in the face of evidence that male behavior is not in the best interest of the community.

Support asked for UI workers

Theodore Rose, the acting labor relations director at the University of Iowa, said last week that the university would consider supporting UI workers in their efforts to form a union.

The university is currently in the process of negotiating a contract with the United Auto Workers union, which represents UI workers. The university and the union have been negotiating for several months, with the university offering a contract that includes a 2% pay raise and the union offering a contract that includes a 3% pay raise.

Rose said that the university would consider supporting the union if the union were able to negotiate a contract that was fair and reasonable.

"We want to make sure that the union is able to negotiate a contract that is fair and reasonable," Rose said. "We will consider supporting the union if the union is able to negotiate a contract that is fair and reasonable."
Cosmos—haven for performing arts

Teresa Churchwell and Stu Hams

Performing artists will seem to take over the Collegiate Associations' facilities this week when the annual campus arts fair begins. A place, unlike any in Iowa City, is designed to help bring the performing arts to the community.

A large portion of the fair's activities will be held in the Campus Center area, with performances in the Campus Center Ballroom, the Marion Recreational Center, the Iowa City Public Library, and the Federal Building.

The fair will feature a variety of performances, including music, dance, theater, and visual arts. There will also be workshops and demonstrations by local artists and performers.

The fair is open to the public and will be held from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Thursday, Oct. 8, and from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Friday, Oct. 9. Admission is free.

Teresa Churchwell is a senior at the University of Iowa, majoring in theater and dance. She is also a member of the University Players, a student theater company.

Stu Hams is a graduate student at the University of Iowa, studying music education.
'Adele H.'—portrait of obsession

By BILL CONDOY

François Truffaut's film, The Story of Adele H., is in its final stages of development in Paris. It is a film about a woman who has fallen in love with a married man and who becomes embroiled in a三角恋爱关系.

The film is based on a novel by Isabelle Adjani, who also stars in the film as Adele H., a middle-aged woman who is trying to make a name for herself as an actress. The novel was a best seller in France and is said to have been a source of inspiration for many of Truffaut's later films.

Truffaut's career as a filmmaker has been marked by his fascination with the history of film and his use of the medium to tell stories about the human condition. His films have often been praised for their use of dialogue and for their attention to detail.

The Story of Adele H. is scheduled to be released in late 1977 and is expected to be one of Truffaut's most successful films to date.
Rugby vents social, physical reprieve

By ARTHUR GREEN

The Daily Iowan—Lawrence, Sept. 16—The day after college athletic contests, two groups of Iowa students got together after a hard-fought contest for a few hours. The party didn’t end until nearly the next day.

Sidney, however, is not the only place where senior citizens are having a good time this week. The University of Iowa Old Folks’ Home is also enjoying the social aspect of its existence.

There are many different activities available to the students, including a variety of games and sports. According to the activities director, the most popular are swimming and bowling.

It appears that the university has found a way to make senior citizens feel young again.

Dolphins win

BUFFALO (AP) — Bob Crenna, who coached the Dolphins to their first NFL title last December, returned north after the Dolphins defeated the New England Patriots, 17-14, in their first regular-season game Monday night.

The Dolphins achieved the feat in their first game of the NFL, in Buffalo's 41-21 victory.

"Fans' complete passes in the stands"

Will there come a time when it's just too costly to save a life?

Health care is better than it was ten, five, or one year ago. No question about that. The problem is that while our medical capabilities have increased, costs have also increased. In just 10 years, the Iowa average cost of a routine appendectomy has nearly doubled to $1,000. Having a baby is already almost three times more expensive. If costs keep rising like that, good care could soon become unaffordable.

We have ways to help you stem rising health care costs.

Working with hospitals and doctors has developed a number of programs that can help slow down the rising costs of medical care and still maintain the quality of care. One program allows patients to be discharged from the hospital sooner to recuperate at home. Another program allows some surgical patients to have laboratory and X-ray tests done at outpatient clinics instead of in general service accommodations that cost more money.

A third allows certain surgery to be done on an outpatient basis in the hospital or doctor's office to save costly hospital days. We are also working with doctors' review committees to help make sure you are not getting more care than you need, or less.

And, we're working with planning agencies to help make sure only needed services are available because unnecessary services cost money.

What you can do to help.

We, the hospitals, and the doctors are working hard to make these programs widespread in Iowa. The more you use our help and tell your friends about this free service, the more we can do to save money for the people who can least afford it. So, tell all of your neighbors and discuss this program with your local doctors. It's your money and the pocketbook of each Iowa citizen that is at stake.

We'll work on this together.
