It's official — auto strike begins

The UAW and Ford had all but abandoned hope for reaching a settlement in their year-old contract dispute when the auto workers' union announced Thursday night that it would stage a general strike against the company Friday morning.

The news was a stunning blow for the two companies, which have been trying to negotiate a new contract since April 1978. The strike is expected to begin at midnight and is expected to last for at least six months.

The UAW and Ford have been locked in a bitter battle over wages, benefits, and working conditions. The union has long criticized the automaker for what it sees as a lack of commitment to workers' rights.

The strike comes after months of negotiations that have failed to produce an agreement. The union has been pushing for higher wages, better benefits, and more say in company decision-making.

Ford, on the other hand, has been reluctant to make significant changes, citing the company's financial difficulties as a reason for sticking to its current offers.

The strike is expected to have a significant impact on the auto industry, as well as on the economy as a whole. The two companies are the largest employers in the United States, and their actions are closely watched by the rest of the country.

The strike is also likely to have implications for workers around the world, as automakers have plants and operations in many countries. The union has said it will try to avoid spreading the strike to other countries, but it remains to be seen how other automakers will respond.

The strike is expected to disrupt production at Ford plants across the country, as well as at suppliers and dealerships. The company has said it will try to minimize the impact on customers, but it remains to be seen how successful that will be.

The UAW and Ford have both expressed a willingness to continue talks, but it remains to be seen whether they will be able to reach an agreement.

The news sent the stock market plunging, as investors feared a potential recession. The Dow Jones Industrial Average fell more than 200 points.

The strike is expected to have a ripple effect across the country, as workers in other industries are likely to follow the lead of the auto workers.

Butz may stay after all, if Ford wins

The future of Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz is uncertain after a key vote by Senate Republicans yesterday, but some observers believe the iowa farmer-educator is likely to keep his job.

Butz's fate was in doubt after the Senate voted 65-32 to end debate on an amendment to cut his pay and reduce his term to two years. The Senate had earlier voted 63-32 to confirm Butz's nomination to a second term.

Butz's supporters argued that the move was an attempt by the Senate to undermine his effectiveness as secretary. His opponents claimed he was too conservative and too close to big agribusiness.

A Senate vote to confirm Butz's nomination was expected today.

Sterilization pressures intense

India's population control efforts continue to face intense scrutiny. The government has set a target of sterilizing 5 million couples each year, but so far, only about 2 million have been sterilized.

The issue has become a major political battleground, with the opposition parties accusing the government of forcing women to undergo sterilization.

The sterilization program has been controversial, with critics arguing that it is coercive and violates women's rights.

The government has defended its efforts, saying that it is necessary to control the population and prevent overpopulation.

Butz, the latest in the line of Agriculture Secretaries, is likely to keep his job if Ford wins. He has been a key player in the administration's efforts to promote free trade and reduce tariffs.

Butz is expected to play a key role in the upcoming trade negotiations with Japan and other countries.

Group sues to save Old Brick

By JAY BENDIGAY

A suit seeking to permanently bar the planned demolition of Old Brick, a historic landmark in Iowa City, will be filed Thursday.

The suit, which will be filed in District Court, will state that the city is in violation of state law.

The lawsuit is being filed by the Old Brick Preservation League, a group of concerned citizens who have been fighting to save the building.

The building, which sits on the corner of Market and Washington streets, was built in 1876 and is one of the oldest buildings in Iowa City.

The city intends to tear down the building to make way for a new parking garage.

The Old Brick Preservation League has been fighting to save the building since the city announced its plans to demolish it.

The league has held numerous protests and has even filed a petition with the state attorney general to stop the demolition.

But the city has refused to listen to the league's concerns and has moved forward with its plans.

That's why the league is now taking legal action.

The suit will seek to permanently bar the demolition of Old Brick.

The league is hoping that the court will agree that the city has violated state law by not following proper procedures.

If the court were to grant the suit, the city would be forced to stop the demolition and find a way to save Old Brick.

The league is also hoping that the court will order the city to pay for the cost of the lawsuit.

The league estimates that the cost of the lawsuit will be around $50,000.

The league is asking for any donations to help cover the cost of the lawsuit.

Anyone interested in helping can contact the league at 386-2632.

It's a small thing in the bigger picture of the marijuana movement, but it's a step that doctors and the administration are very excited about — and they should be. They've been working on this for decades, and now they're getting it done. It's not that easy, but it's worth it. The University of Oklahoma's medical campus has been working on this for a long time, and they're finally getting it right.

Now jailhouse lawyer Liddy -- doesn't participate in vote

Harry S. Truman, the 33rd president of the United States and a Democrat, once said that if he couldn't speak to the American people directly during an election campaign, he would at least try to speak to them through the press.

Now a California inmate must be content with making his case indirectly through the press.

Richard R. Liddy, who organized the Watergate burglary in 1972, is serving a 30-month sentence at the California Institution for Men in Chino.

Liddy, who won a libel trial against Time magazine and is appealing it here in California, is not interested in running for any public office.

But he won't rule out a bid for a seat in Congress, if he can win a pardon or a presidential reprieve.

"We're looking at it," Liddy said Wednesday at the state prison. "I'm not saying I'm going to do it, but we're looking at it."

Olivier's 'Henry V' tonight

by JULIET ANDREWS

This is the Daily News. In yesterday's newspaper, there was a splendid review of the great new film 'Henry V' directed by the great English director, Anthony H. bout by the State Film Commis-<mation of the Page

The property of the film is immense, perhaps exceeding that of any other picture made in this country. It is a masterpiece of direction, acting, photography, and music, and it is likely to become one of the greatest films ever made.

The story is told in the language of Shakespeare, and the acting is outstanding. The acting of the great English actors is especially noteworthy. The film is a triumph of the English film industry.

Simple screen pass opens Simpson’s return
BUFFALO (AP) - The play started like so many others, a single screen pass. John Simpson was out of the backfield, the ball in his hands, running back over the 50. Then he stopped, his running mate and the backfielders yelling at him to take a knee. John Simpson was really back in the Notre Dame Football.

For most of Members Union’s games against Miami, Simpson had been on as a decoder, a threat to be worried about by the Dolphin defense. But against the Ohio State Buckeyes, Simpson was back in the backfield, running back over the 50. The team was down by two touchdowns, and the offense was in need of a spark. Simpson ran downfield, dodging tackles and making a break for the end zone. The crowd roared as he crossed the goal line, lifting the Buckeyes to a 28-7 victory over their rivals.

“John was a real game changer today,” said head coach Mike Brown. “He brought a new level of intensity to the offense, and his presence was felt throughout the game.”

Simpson’s return to the backfield was a significant moment for the Members Union Football program, as they look to build on their success this season. With Simpson back in the mix, the team is confident they can make a run at the conference championship.

The team will take on their next challenge this weekend, facing off against the University of Chicago. Despite the loss, Members Union is looking forward to the upcoming game and the opportunity to continue their winning streak.
