Detroit (AP) — A proposed settlement of the Detroit bankruptcy case has been approved by the city's attorney and union administrators, according to a filing in federal bankruptcy court. The settlement was reached last week between the city and the city's General Retirement System, the city's labor and the city's creditors.

Political signs

City Manager Neil Barret said Monday that the city is "very, very, very pleased" that the court accepted the settlement, which will allow the city to move forward with its plan to emerge from bankruptcy.

The settlement includes a $238 million bailout for the city's pension plans, a

 $200 million bond sale to help cover the city's ongoing costs, and a commitment to pay back about $385 million in past-due interest on

Brick allies may save it

BY HENRY WOLFE

The old Brick Defense Committee is on the verge of achieving the lifetime ambition of purchasing the old Brick ally, thus saving the Old Brick.

According to testimony by John H. Mitchell, who, on the basis of attempting to save Old Brick, "general partners," has purchased over $20,000 in an expense account for the purchase of Old Brick.

The investors have also made an application for a $25,000 loan from a local financial institution to make up the deficit for the purchase of Old Brick for the State Board of Regents.

The request committee with the application for the loan for the purpose of saving the building is the Brick Historic Preservation Committee under Judge William R. B. Under the contract, the receipts were to have taken as partial payment the sale of a large number of shares of stock in the Heaven and Harold Streets.

The current owners of the Old Brick, the Brick Urban Church Corp., were to have received the late payment. The contract has been temporarily postponed to give the Defense Committee attempting to save Old Brick, time.

Dalla, along with plaintiff Robert C. McCumber, a professor-appraiser, approached plaintiff Museum Director a week ago with a proposal that the value of the Old Brick is $180,000 due to the expected financial difficulties of the Skyline Homeopathic School.

The proposal is to purchase the Old Brick and lease it to the Defense Committee as a temporary home for the School's apartments.

Dalla, according to Bick, it would be a good kind of state in the case of this building. However, the prospect of a joint effort among the City Historical Preservation Committee to work out a plan to save Old Brick.

The trial, which took place in Public Interest Aids, was heard by U.S. District Judge John Dean, and Parkinson and Mitchell were given.

All have repeatedly been asked by the defense that it was a mistake, and it was claimed it was a mistake.

In response to the appeal court's order of yesterday, Parkinson and Mitchell are not saying they will take the case.

But Brick Allies is also facing a challenge from a new proposal that the White House's Planter's case and the White House's Platform case would be merged in a sense of the Old Brick. D.C., was not a part of the original Brick's design when it was presented to the D.C. Historical Preservation Committee. In American party could 'make the difference'

Melvinsky says 3rd party hurts Leach

By ROY C. LIEFFEL
Staff Writer

Including the American party candidate for the First District congressional seat in Monday's debate between Rep. Ed Mahoney and incumbent United Republican Michael Leach, Melvinsky said he was struggling in his attempt to end Leach's chances, Thursday.

Melvinsky said it is important to the smaller parties that the American party candidate be "the difference," in the eight districts in which the party is running candidates.

"Leach has been running on votes from the far right, and going along with the small men and pre-exposed views," Melvinsky said.

Since the debates started, "I'm glad we had them. I think there were some good sound bites, and they have taken some of the wind out from the third party candidate and I hope, and I think that worked out fine." he added.

As for his own campaign, Melvinsky said, "I think we're going to keep getting closer and closer, and we're going to have to work hard in the next three weeks to get the student vote." he said.

He noted that student voter quality could be a problem and that the student vote would have to be thought of if he is going to win.

According to Melvinsky, students aren't as involved but are just as concerned about issues as they were when they started into 1975 and 1976. However, there are different issues, he said.

"You don't have the war in Vietnam anymore. There's a different kind of environment in the United States now. It's not open if it was in the draft, they were a lot happier with what's been happening."

Melvinsky cited several examples of issues directly concerning students, and what he's been trying to do about them.

"This whole world of," he said, "we've had a job bill with a provision for work-study funds, and we got vetoed.

"The housing - for which there is a tremendous need here in Iowa City. The administration vetoed the housing bill."

"Then there's the kind of frustration that are out there," he added.

Melvinsky urged students and citizens to become more active in the electorate, and to become more vocal in supporting student issues such as the Housing Coalition in the Hawkeyes, which is trying to get the administration to look into the question of the National Student Lobby in Washington, D.C.

The National Student Lobby was "effective in getting support for Basic Educational Opportunity Grants," he said.

Melvinsky noted that "students are beginning to realize that they've got to do something, instead of demanding of an authority to do their right."

In an interview with Priory Magazine, Jimmy Carter made an analysis of the nation's news media that has been widely publicized. He said that the national reporters were interested in the day-to-day events and could not see the long-term implications of their work. Carter believed that the media had a responsibility to report the truth, even if it was difficult. He said that the media should not be afraid to criticize the government and that they should be held accountable for their actions.

In the same interview, Carter addressed the issue of national marijuana arrests. He said that the government was spending a lot of money on this issue, and that it was a waste of resources. Carter called for a decriminalization of marijuana, as he believed that it was not a serious problem and that it should be treated like any other drug.

Carter also discussed the topic of the military budget. He said that the military was the biggest expense in the federal budget, and that it was time to stop spending so much money on it. Carter believed that the military was not as important as the education and healthcare budgets, and that the government should focus on these areas instead.

In addition, Carter talked about the issue of political campaign broadcasting. He said that the use of television and radio for political advertising was a waste of time and money, and that it should be banned. Carter believed that the politicians should focus on the issues and the policies, and not on the media.

Carter ended the interview by expressing his belief in the power of the people. He said that the people had the ability to change the world, and that they should use this power to make a difference. Carter called for a more active and engaged citizenry, and he believed that the government should work to create an environment where this could happen.
Tuition increase may spare compulsory fee hike

By J. P. THOMPSON

The state board of Regents votes tuition at the three state universities, the UI collegiate association (CAC) and student organizations on Thursday, but they will ask that mandantory student fees be raised by an equal percentage. The state board of Regents has cited the need for state funding to keep up with demands, but they have also indicated they expect to increase the amount of money received from mandantory student fees.

The board of Regents also voted to fund the mandantory student fee, including nearly $40,000 per year, which amounts to less than half of the state budget. Staff Writer, By S.P.

If the question of raising mandatory student fees is going to use these figures to show that the additional money among eligible student activities. So far, the three state universities, the University of Letters Film Series, and senate have already received more than they can accommodate. Student senate unanimous vs. tuition hike

BY DOUG TRUEW

Student senators yesterday unanimously passed a resolution opposing any future increase in the state Senate.

The resolution, presented as an expected pressure to the regents to consider a raise, was passed by the student senate's executive committee and supported by the student government. It was approved by the regents at their meeting in December.

"We urge the regents to reject the proposal," said Ed Kutcher, the student government's president. "We believe that the current fee structure is not adequate to support the University of Northern Iowa's educational mission."

The tuition hike proposal, submitted to the regents by their president, was met with a strong response from the student government, which passed a resolution opposing any increase in tuition.

"We are not opposed to an increase in tuition and fees," said Kutcher. "We are opposed to any increase in tuition and fees that is not supported by an increase in state funding."

The student government's resolution was passed unanimously and was supported by the student senate and the college of arts and sciences.

"We believe that the current fee structure is not adequate to support the University of Northern Iowa's educational mission," said Ed Kutcher, the student government's president. "We urge the regents to reject the proposal."

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee on Wednesday moved forward a proposed U.S. cuts in nuclear arms.

The bill, which passed by a vote of 10-5, would reduce the U.S. nuclear arsenal to 10,000 warheads over the next decade.

The measure now heads to the House for consideration.

The Senate also voted to authorize the deployment of cruise missiles in Europe.

The bill was sponsored by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and Sen. Richard Lugar, R-IN.

The eighth school in the state's history to be a part of the National Games in 1980, the University of Iowa's women's field hockey team will host Rutgers Tuesday night.

Rutgers, fields a strong team with the help of its in-state 5-3 team at Vermont.

The team will be a part of the World Games in Vermont, and the 1980 Olympics.

"We're not in the same class as East or Penn State," said Greenberg, who has been the coach at Iowa for 15 years.

The women's team has been coached by the same coach since 1965, and has won 10 of its last 11 games.
