It would be better for the family of Jimmy Carter to be in the presidency, who would win the presidency in the college election rather than President Ford, the highly popular Carter said.

The Daily News Tuesday night.

"We've won," Carter said at the University of Evansville. "I'm not only happy with the election vote, we'll take it. But we haven't scored the popular vote."

The victory for Carter, who had received the vote of the entire nation, who would have been President if he had won, was not widely expected.

The Democratic nominee for President, who had polled more than 40 per cent of the national vote, was declared the winner of the presidency.

"The Democratic nominee had to be the choice of the country, who would have been President if he had won," Carter said.

The Democratic nominee's lack of a past presidential record kept many fewer votes than people who would have won, Carter said.

"I don't think we should forget that Jimmy Carter is not a good politician, but we have a choice in two men for the presidency, who would have been President if we had voted for one of them.

"The Democratic nominee had to be the choice of the country, who would have been President if we had voted for one of them.

Familiar tactics resumed

Carter, health — Ford, defense

By The Associated Press

Washington — After a lackluster campaign, President Reagan challenged President Carter last week with familiar tactics in a series of public appearances. The reunited Republicans have more than 18 years of experience using the same anti-Carter campaign strategy, which has proved to be effective in similar situations.

In the past, the GOP has taken advantage of Carter's relative inexperience and the public's dissatisfaction with the Democratic administration. The strategy has been to attack the president's record, highlight perceived failures and offer a clear, policy-oriented alternative. The goal is to create doubt and uncertainty about the president's ability to lead, thereby opening the way for an easy victory.

But this year, with the election only a few months away, and with Carter's approval ratings at an all-time low, the Republicans face a more complex challenge. They must find ways to make Carter look weak and inept while highlighting their own strengths without appearing too aggressive or confrontational.

The first step in this process is to recognize that the public has become accustomed to hearing about Carter's problems. The challenge for the Republicans is to focus on these issues in a way that is both effective and not perceived as an attack. They must find a balance between addressing the public's concerns and highlighting their own strengths.

The second step is to make sure that the Republican message is clear and consistent. The Republican candidates must present a cohesive platform that addresses the nation's most pressing issues, such as the economy, national security, and foreign policy.

The third step is to make sure that the Republican message is delivered effectively. The Republicans must make sure that their message reaches the voters through all available channels, including television, radio, and the internet.

Finally, the Republicans must be prepared to respond to any counterattack. The Democratic Party will undoubtedly come up with creative ways to counter the Republican message. The Republicans must be ready to respond with their own counterarguments, and be ready to adapt their strategy as needed.

In conclusion, the Republican strategy is a complex one that requires careful planning and execution. The Republicans must be patient, focused, and persistent in their efforts to defeat Carter. Only then will they be able to take advantage of the opportunities presented by this election cycle.

The Madison Street dudge

With the coming of winter, for the past few years, but also ever since Madison Street has been the route of the campus. Weather may have been early this year, but this time there will be no Madison Street closing, as far as I know.

It is possible that the council is looking into the proposal to close Madison Street between Washington Street and Green Avenue. They yielded to pressure from downtown merchants and lined to abandon it.

It is true that the council is studying the closing of Madison Street, but the issue is whether it will be closed or not. The council has not made a final decision yet.

In conclusion, the Madison Street dudge should not be closed because it is a vital part of the city's transportation system. It is used by many people and it should be maintained for their convenience.

Remember the good days, when you used to be proud to show off to others how many possessions you have? In fact, the great majority of possessions you have are now just occupying a lot of space.

It is not necessary to keep everything that you own. It is better to have a minimal amount of possessions and enjoy the freedom that comes with it.

Diane Freeman

It is probably expedient for the council to listen to these arguments since downtown merchants have more money at their disposal.

In conclusion, the Madison Street dudge should not be closed because it is a vital part of the city's transportation system. It is used by many people and it should be maintained for their convenience.

Refocus builds on tenuous past

By BILL NEWSLE

The TV's Refocus program is in place to address the fact that economic pressures and physical difficulties forced the demolition of the CPR's own television and film studios in the 1970s. The studios, according to the recent report, will now be housed in new facilities.

It is the opinion of many in the industry that a significant amount of talent and resources has been lost.

The decision to demolish the facilities was driven by a combination of factors. These include the cost of maintaining the old facilities, the need to modernize the production environment, and the desire to reduce overhead costs.

One of the key issues that the team at Refocus is working to address is how to ensure that the new facilities are equipped to support the needs of the production teams.

Refocus has a long history of producing high-quality content for broadcast and distribution. The team is committed to maintaining that level of quality in the new facilities.

The new facilities will feature state-of-the-art equipment and production spaces designed to support the needs of the production teams.

In addition to the production spaces, the new facilities will also include spaces for post-production, editing, and other related activities.

The team at Refocus is working closely with the production teams to ensure that the new facilities meet their needs.

The team at Refocus is committed to maintaining a strong focus on quality and creativity in the new facilities.

Tittle: Action Studies more than '60s

By JOHN OSBORN

Despite a decrease in student attendance, the Action Studies program is still operating and still providing educational resources to the community, according to John Buckley, Action Studies director.

The program started in 1968. Buckley said it was started to combat the furor surrounding Vietnam. It was a nationwide movement of students attempting to channel university animation that has appeared since Walt Disney's 'A Unicorn in the Garden' in 1954.

The movement's goal was to provide an alternative education to the so-called 'brainwashing' being done by the University of Iowa. Action Studies began as a student-run program that involved a group of students who wanted to provide an alternative education to the community.

Buckley said the program could be considered a precursor to today's alternative education movement. He said the program was a response to the war in Vietnam and the social unrest of the 1960s.

The program was started by a group of students who wanted to provide an alternative education to the community. The group consisted of seven students, including Buckley, who met at the night school to plan the program.

The group decided to call it Action Studies and they began by publishing a newsletter called the "Action Newsletter." The newsletter was distributed to all students on campus and it provided information about the program and its activities.

The program was successful and it eventually expanded to include a variety of activities, such as workshops, seminars, and conferences. It also provided resources such as pamphlets and alternative textbooks.

Today, the program continues to provide educational resources to the community. The program is still headed by Buckley and it continues to offer workshops, seminars, and conferences.

"The idea was to provide an alternative education to the community," Buckley said. "We wanted to provide something that was different from what was happening on campus.""

Reds look for sweep, 6-2

NEW YORK (AP) - Cincinnati's Tommy Hutton provided the crucial hit Monday night, a three-run double that gave the Reds a 5-2 lead they never relinquished.

The Reds' 5-3 victory over the New York Yankees extended their winning streak to five games, matching the longest series sweep in the club's history.

"It's a great feeling to have that kind of momentum," said Hutton, who scored three runs.

The Reds improved to 7-0 in their last seven games and swept the first two games of the series against the Yankees, who dropped to 4-6.

The series finale on Tuesday will feature Ken Griffey Jr. against Dave Righetti, the pitcher he faced earlier in the week.

"It's a good matchup," said Griffey. "I've had some good at-bats against him in the past and I'm looking forward to seeing him again."
Soccer

The UI Soccer Club lost Wednesday, 4-1, to Bradley in their second game of the season.

Despite being a close match, the Hawkeyes were able to pull away in the second half, scoring four goals to Bradley's one.

Midfielder Alex Ritter scored the lone goal for Bradley in the first half, while Hawkeye striker Alex Johnson took over the second half, scoring three goals to secure the win.

Johnson's first goal came just 20 minutes into the second half, putting the Hawkeyes up early.

The Hawkeyes continued their dominance in the second half, scoring twice more before the final whistle, securing their win.

The Hawkeyes will look to continue their winning streak as they prepare for their next game against Northern Illinois University next week.

Bench battered, but still golden

NEW YORK (AP) — Chris Groppi, former Iowa battery mate who has helped Iowa win his past seven starts and his batting average is now over .300, was still the man with the golden arm for Iowa.

The Bank of Iowa has been a phenomenon in the baseball world, but Groppi's achievement has put him in a class of his own.

Groppi went 6-0 in seven starts and his average is now over .300.

Connors falls behind

BOSTON (AP) — Manager John Connors' first place lead in the World Series opener was smothered by Boston's 8-2 win Wednesday night.

Connors had been outscored by 10 runs in his first four starts, but had struggled this season.

In the sixth inning, Connors surrendered a single to Boston's Kevin Youkilis, allowing the Red Sox to take a 2-0 lead.

Connors fell behind 3-0 in the seventh inning, giving up a two-run home run to Boston's Dustin Pedroia.

Connors' struggles continued in the eighth inning, when he allowed three more runs to score, giving him a total of five runs allowed for the inning.
