WASHINGTON (AP) - The way President Ford has run his administration during the last 10 months suggests that 4 a.m. is too late to appreciate how much trouble he can be in. The new president has been so self-righteous, so myopic, such a lapsed fanatic in his foreign policy, that few Americans are likely to be as satisfied with his performance as he is with his own.

Ford's administration has been a disaster, and it's a wonder he's not more concerned about the country's economy.

But his record is not as bad as many believe. He has been a capable president, and his foreign policy has been a success. He has also been a good friend to the American people, and he has been a good leader.

In the end, it's clear that Ford was a good man, and his legacy will be valued for his contributions to the country.

A lesson unlearned

This country's "adventures" in Vietnam taught us a number of valuable lessons. Among them was the realization that our allies could be more rapidly replaced than we had first supposed. The Navy, for example, had been forced to rely so heavily on indigenous forces in the South Vietnamese that it was found necessary to train and deploy them in order to maintain combat readiness.

A tale of two tricksters; or, the treat's getting harder to find

By GALE GODBOW

It was one of those gloomy Halloween nights when only the boldest and the bravest are out looking for treats. A boy had worked up his own special trick-or-treat street, armed with an enormous shopping bag. He was the center of attention for the entire neighborhood. A boy and a girl were trailing behind him, each one carrying their own smaller bags. They were obtained from the king of the hill, a local store owner.

The boy greeted an open door with "Trick or treat!" and marched to the first door. But he was disappointed to find that there was no one inside. He followed this with "Trick or treat!" at every other house, and even the last one of the block.

The boy sat down in the street and listened to his bag. It was full of spooks. He was about to leave when he heard a voice from across the street. The homespun fanner called out, "Where's your bag!"

"It's full of spooks," the boy answered.

Across the street, the homespun fanner continued, "If you don't want to come inside, come out here and I'll give you something."

"No, thank you," the boy said. "I'm just looking for treats."

"You can have these," the homespun fanner offered, handing the boy two little bags. "That should keep you busy."

"That's not what I meant," the boy said.

"Oh, I know. But I thought you might like to have something to keep you busy."

The boy thanked the homespun fanner and went on his way. He found another house that was open, and the boy was delighted to find that the treats were just as good as those at the first house.

He continued on his way, knocking on door after door. He found that most of the houses were open, and the boys and girls inside were happy to give him treats. He was having a wonderful time, and he was sure that he would find more treats on his way back home. He walked back to the street, where the homespun fanner was still waiting.

"You're welcome," the homespun fanner said.

"Thank you for your treats," the boy said. "I had a wonderful time."

The homespun fanner nodded and smiled. "That's what it's all about," he said.

That night, the boy decided that he would keep the homespun fanner's advice in mind. He would continue to look for treats, but he would also be sure to thank the people who gave them to him. He was determined to make the most of his Halloween night, and he knew that he could do it with the help of the homespun fanner.
Potter spins personal statements

By MARY TURNER
Staff Writer

DONNEY, Iowa — Not much of a talker, Harriet Potter can be a mine of valuable information. And without the backing of her old bible, there would be even fewer words to describe the 106-year-old woman who just might have told the biggest story of all.

"I threw away the old bible," Potter said. "I'd rather keep personal stories."

All of Potter's personal stories, from the time she was a young girl, are filled with fascinating facts. Some are about the people she knew, while others highlight the events of history.

Potter's first personal story is about her days as a schoolteacher. Potter taught in a one-room schoolhouse for nearly 30 years, and it was during this time that she began to collect stories about her students.

"I used to keep a diary," Potter said. "I'd write down every detail about my students, even if it was something as simple as what they had for lunch."

Potter's second personal story is about her time as a nurse during World War I. During this time, she served in a field hospital in France, and it was there that she learned to speak French.

"I never spoke another language before that," Potter said. "I had to learn French quickly in order to communicate with the soldiers."

Potter's third personal story is about her time as a civil rights activist. During this time, she worked to end segregation in schools and workplaces.

"I was a leader in the civil rights movement," Potter said. "I knew that if we didn't fight for our rights, we would never get them."

'Enriched Flavor,' breakthrough brings unprecedented taste to low tar smoking.

Today there's a way to get real taste from a cigarette without high tar.

That's the report on a new taste discovery called 'Enriched Flavor.' A way to pack flavor—extra flavor—into tobacco without the usual corresponding increase in tar.

The cigarette packed with 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco is remarkable new MERIT. If you smoke, you'll be interested.

Tests Verify Taste

In tests involving thousands of smokers of filter cigarettes, the majority reported

MERIT delivered more taste than five current leading low tar cigarettes having all the way up to 60% more tar. Repeat: delivered more taste.

In similar tests against 11 mg. to 15 mg. menthol brands, MERIT MENTHOL was reported to deliver as much—or more—taste than the higher tar brands tested.

You've been smoking "low tar, good taste" claims long enough. Now smoke the cigarette. MERIT: Unprecedented flavor at 9 mg. tar. One of the lowest tar levels in smoking today.
