Geneva talks

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The black-and-white tensions on Student's future were within a day of ending yesterday with the announcement of a deal that would all but end the world's most controversial nuclear dispute.

The agreement's terms will be announced today, and it is expected to end the three-week-old crisis in which 30,000 students and their supporters have been blockading the entry to the Zeta House, a student dormitory.

The agreement calls for the release of all students arrested during the protest, and it is expected to grant the students permission to hold their own congresses and to designate their own leaders.

Ireland

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — A round of talks involving the Irish government and the Irish government's chief negotiator, the Irish deputy minister, on Thursday was described by the Irish government as a "positive step in the search for a peaceful solution to the current crisis." The talks took place in Dublin and were attended by the Irish prime minister, the Irish deputy minister, and representatives from both sides.

The talks were held in an effort to resolve the ongoing crisis in Northern Ireland, which has been characterized by violence, political tensions, and a lack of progress in the peace process.

Missile

LONDON (AP) — A U.S. Navy team arrived here late Friday night to retrieve a Soviet missile that sank after be­ ing launched near the British island of Scilly, off the west coast of England.

The mission was carried out in co­operation with the British and is a sign of the increased cooperation between the two nations in the wake of the Cold War.

The mission was led by Rear Adm. James D. Bosworth, who is a veteran of the Vietnam War, and was accompanied by a team of experts from the U.S. Navy.

Vietnamese

NONG XAU, Thailand (AP) — The Vietnamese government is planning to begin the process of reunification in Vietnam, according to a statement released by the government.

The government announced that it is preparing to begin talks with the Vietnamese government in an effort to reach a peaceful resolution to the long-standing conflict.

The statement said that the talks will be held in Hanoi and will include representatives from both governments.

The government also said that it is committed to the principles of democracy and human rights.

Minority law forum held

By DAVID SPITZOFF

A panel of black and Chicanos representing law schools exclusively attended by minority students was assembled at the University of Iowa School of Law on Monday. The forum was organized by the National Conference of Black Law Students and the National Conference of Chicana Law Students.

The panelists included a variety of perspectives on the state of minority education in law schools. The panelists discussed the challenges faced by minority students, the role of affirmative action, and the importance of diversity in the legal profession.

The panelists expressed frustration with the low numbers of minority students in law schools and called for increased efforts to increase diversity. They also highlighted the importance of mentorship and support systems for minority students.

The panelists emphasized the need for law schools to do more to attract and support minority students. They called for more diversity in the faculty and administration and for the implementation of programs that specifically address the needs of minority students.

The forum concluded with a call to action for law schools to take concrete steps to increase diversity and to support minority students in the legal profession.

Death abolitionists appeal court ruling on jury selection

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Abolitionists who lost their latest battle in the Supreme Court are appealing the death penalty in several states. The appeals, which are being handled by several abolition groups, have been filed in several states in recent months.

The appeals are the latest in a series of legal actions challenging the constitutionality of the death penalty. The appeals focus on a variety of issues, including the fairness of jury selection and the use of race in jury selection.

The appeals are being handled by several abolition groups, including the National Coalition to Abolish the Death Penalty, the Death Penalty Information Center, and the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund.

The appeals are expected to be heard by the Supreme Court in the coming months. The court has agreed to hear arguments in the cases and is likely to issue a decision in the coming months or years.

Strategies for Success in Iowa City and the World. Attraction All Black Students!

In an effort to strengthen the Black community spirit in Iowa City, we, the members of the Afro-American Graduate Student Association, request the attendance of all members of the Black Student Body at our first Black Awareness Meeting. The meeting will convene at 8 pm today at the Afro-American Cultural Center.

By working with the Black Student Center and the local community, we can ensure that the event is a success and that all members of the Black Student Body feel welcome and valued.

The meeting will provide an opportunity for all members of the Black Student Body to come together and discuss ways to increase the number of Black students in Iowa City. The meeting will also provide an opportunity for the members of the Black Student Center to share their experiences and offer support.

We encourage all members of the Black Student Body to attend the meeting and to share their thoughts and ideas. We believe that by working together, we can increase the number of Black students in Iowa City and create a stronger Black community spirit in Iowa City.

The most important task of the sheriff is to protect the lives and property of every county resident. I will concentrate on this by performing routine patrol myself if necessary. Good county residents will also contribute to better crime prevention. I will initiate lower meetings to communicate with and understand county needs. Together we can carry on effectively as Johnson County Sheriff.

I will visit county schools to talk with younger and encourage citizen hand radio owners to report accidents to the sheriff's office immediately. I will also encourage citizens to participate in county activities to promote understanding on both sides.

The sheriff must be a positive, highly visible symbol of law enforcement in the county. My proposal will result in better county relations and greater understanding. More efficient law enforcement will naturally follow.

Carter: capability to bring constructive change

A vote for Jimmy Carter tomorrow is not only in the best financial interests of the country. Only two major candidates are seeking the presidency. One of them is going to win.

A virtual certainty a year ago, Gerald Ford has demonstrated his capability to bring constructive change to the nation. Against all the odds, he has carried the country through a period of major economic and social problems.

In the support of the Democratic platform promising full employment, Carter has promised few social programs and has not yet to balance the budget. Ford has proposed a team of experts to deal with these problems.

Ford has also proposed new social programs such as health care and education. Carter has promised few social programs and has not yet to balance the budget. Ford has proposed a team of experts to deal with these problems.

Ford is not only a candidate for the presidency, he is also a candidate for President. He has demonstrated his capability to bring constructive change to the nation. Against all the odds, he has carried the country through a period of major economic and social problems.

The progress under his administration has been admittedly 'lukewarm,' but Ford has never promised us anything like the economic boom of the Eisenhower years. Carter, on the other hand, has promised us a quick remedy for our economic pause.

Carter advocates a quick remedy for our economic pause. Under Carter, the economy would grow at a healthy rate without inflation. This would provide the people with more purchasing power. Carter also promises to reduce unemployment and to increase the number of jobs. Carter's programs are based on a more realistic understanding of the economy and its problems.

Tar/Taste Theory Exploded.

Taste-science breakthrough gives low tar MERIT the flavor of cigarettes having 60% more tar.

By locating certain flavor-rich ingredients in cigarette smoke, ingredients that deliver taste way out of proportion to tar, researchers at Philip Morris have disproven the theory that cigarette flavor depends on the amount of tar that goes with it. They’ve discovered how to pack flavor—unprecedented flavor—into a cigarette that delivers one of the lowest tar levels in smoking today.

The discovery is called ‘Enriched Flavor.’ It’s extra flavor, natural flavor, and only MERIT has it.

Tests Verify Taste
In taste tests involving thousands of cigarette smokers like yourself, MERIT was reported to deliver as much—or more—taste than current low tar leaders.

What’s really startling is that these brands have up to 60% more tar than MERIT.

You’ve been smoking “low tar, good taste” claims long enough.

Now smoke the cigarette. MERIT. Incredible smoking satisfaction at only 9 mg. tar.

Bears hand Vikes first setback, 14-13

CHICAGO (AP) — Walter Payton's 2-yard touchdown run in the first quarter and a couple of breaks which led to another touchdown in the final period gave the Chicago Bears a 14-13 triumph Sunday over the Minnesota Vikings, who had the last undefeated team in the National Football League.

With the Bears leading 14-0 at the half, Ford Foust had a pick of 49 yards on a pass interference which gave the Bears the ball at the Viking 40. After a short drive, John Shan, Allen's halfback and coverage man, had to fly out to the end zone for what proved to be the winning touchdown.

Minnesota came right back with a touchdown on an 88-yard drive which was halted by a pass interference call before Frank Gumbet, who earlier had the lost of Allen's inker, lined up for a safety.

Payton completed both of his passes for 40 and a career total of 46,167 yards, surpassing Dallas' career total of 46,169 yards.

Next Year: a Congressman of Extraordinary Promise

Next year, with Jim Leach in Congress, the people of Iowa City will have a man they can count on in Washington.

A man of accomplishment in international relations, a leader destined to bring new vision to Congressional participation in foreign affairs.

A man of experience in government, respected enough to have represented this country in substantive international negotiations on disarmament, natural resources and international cultural and educational policy.

A man dedicated to represent us, to keep the revenue sharing funds that finance our bus system operating and in helping all our citizens in those dealings with the federal government.

A man experienced in the workings of the national government, and determined to act as an effective advocate for the university, the city and the state.

A man of compassion, ability and vision; a Congressman of extraordinary promise.
Economy issue '76...

By NEIL BROWN
Staff Writer

In their efforts to abate the American people's cynicism toward government, both presidential candidates focused part of their campaign strategy on the so-called "spiritual" issues — leadership, compassion, love and trustworthiness. But when it gets down to having to make that decision of which candidate can best govern the nation, the voters must look at the issues.

A look at the positions taken by Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter on major domestic issues such as unemployment, inflation, tax reform, welfare, abortion, crime and housing indicate some sharp differences between the two, especially in economic policy.

When Gerald Ford took the presidential oath of office, it came the greatest number of economic problems facing the nation since Franklin D. Roosevelt took that same oath. Inflation had risen to a record mark of 12 per cent and unemployment was at a rate of 5.5 per cent and rising. Shortages were prevalent, the free market was in poor condition due to recent wage and price controls, and in the previous few months oil companies had quadrupled their prices. The nation was in possibly the worst economic slump since the Depression.

Today, with the economy still the No. 1 domestic issue, Ford credits himself with engineering a recovery for the nation without high inflation and hopes for sustained growth in the future. Recovery has not come easy.

Ford's conservative brain trust of Alan Greenspan, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, Treasury Secretary William Simon and Arthur Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, helped design the recovery plan, which readily accepts unemployment to ease inflation. Last year, unemployment hit 8.9 per cent, the worst since 1941. Today it is at 7.8 per cent. There are, however, 1.7 million more people working today than when Ford first took office. This is primarily due to the increase in the labor force.

also, U.S. military might

By BECKY STANLEY
Staff Writer

Foreign policy issues, with the exception of America's military strength issue, have not been the major issues of the 1976 presidential campaign.

Nevertheless, there are some important foreign policy issues to which the candidates addressed themselves and with which the next president will have to deal.

Whoever the next president will be, he will have to reach an agreement in the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT II) with the Soviet Union. SALT I, in 1972, recognized the Soviets' attainment ofrough military and strategic parity with the United States.

President Ford met with Soviet Communist party General Secretary Leonid Brezhnev in November 1974 and reached a tentative pact to limit each superpower to 2,400 strategic nuclear weapons over a 10-year period. A SALT II agreement, however, got bogged down because of problems arising in reaching a mutually accepted definition of "strategic nuclear weapons" and in assessing different and often non-comparable strategic capabilities.

Whether there will be a SALT II accord remains uncertain. Likewise, American efforts toward a global nuclear non-proliferation treaty have met with little success.

In the Middle East, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has been successful in disengaging the combatants and initiating a dialogue between the Israelis and the Arabs. But Kissinger's "step-by-step" diplomacy has not solved, or facilitated the solving of the problems between the two. The next president may be called upon to do so and help bring a lasting peace to the area.

America's attention has also been focused on Africa in the past year, where nationalist liberation movements are demanding an end to white rule and colonialism. In Angola, where Soviet and Cuban arms have directly
Politicians motives varied and complex

By DAVID THOMAS

In analyzing the political behavior of candidates, one is struck with the variety of motives that exist. The reasons for entering public office vary greatly, and it is often difficult to determine the primary motivator for a candidate.

The race for Iowa's 1st Congressional District's seat is the subject of much discussion. While both candidates are popular, the race is expected to be close. The Democratic candidate, John Hargrave, is seeking re-election. The Republican candidate, Gus Hall, is running for the first time.

Hargrave is a former governor of Iowa, and has held many high-level positions in state government. Hall is a former member of the Communist Party, and has run for office several times in the past.

The race is expected to be competitive, and both candidates are working hard to attract voters. The outcome of the race will depend on the ability of each candidate to mobilize their base.

In the past, politicians have been motivated by a variety of factors, including personal ambition, financial gain, and a desire to serve the public. Regardless of the specific motivations, it is clear that politicians are driven by a desire to win.

As you move up the political scale, you will find yourself in a world where your decisions are scrutinized by the public. The pressure to succeed can be overwhelming, and it is important to remember that the public's trust is a precious commodity.

In this world of constant scrutiny, it is easy to lose sight of the reasons why you became a politician in the first place. Remember to stay true to your values, and to always keep the best interests of your constituents in mind.

The world of politics can be a challenging one, but it is also incredibly rewarding. With hard work and dedication, you can make a real difference in the lives of others.

In conclusion, it is important to remember that politicians are motivated by a variety of factors. While some may be seeking financial gain, others are driven by a desire to serve the public. Regardless of the specific motivations, it is clear that politicians are driven by a desire to win.

Increased responsibility enlivens supervisors' race

By W. C. LOEPPEL

According to a present member of the Johnson County Board of Supervisors, who has lived his life as a politician and representative in the realm of county government, the recent activity in this sector is not only remarkable but also surprising. He said, "It is really a remarkable period in the history of this country."

This year, four candidates are vying for the three seats on the three-person board. They are Democrat Leonard Clark, Republican Tom Johnson and Democrat Leslie Mezvinsky, a former member of the United States House of Representatives.

The county board is a vital part of the county government, and it is responsible for many of the county's most important decisions.

Clark, who is the incumbent, has been serving on the board for several years. He is a strong advocate for the county's economic development and has worked hard to bring new businesses to the area.

Johnson, a former county auditor, has been a strong advocate for the county's budget and has worked to ensure that the county's finances are in good shape.

Mezvinsky, the newest candidate, has a long history of public service and has been a strong advocate for the county's education system.

The race is expected to be close, with all three candidates working hard to win the support of the county's residents.

Easlin challenges Hargrave for state rep.

By R. K. BRADWELL

Republican Dave Easlin is challenging incumbent Democrat Bill Hargrave for the 73rd District state House seat. Easlin is a retired educator and former state senator.

Hargrave, who is running for re-election, is a former state representative and has been a strong advocate for education and economic development.

Easlin is a strong advocate for reducing property taxes and improving the state's education system.

Mezvinsky fires up vs. Leach attacks

By R. P. JENNINGS

Mezvinsky, the incumbent in the 7th congressional district, is facing a strong challenge from Republican Steve Leach.

Mezvinsky, who is running for re-election, is a former member of the United States House of Representatives and has been a strong advocate for the district's economy.

Leach, a former state senator, is a strong advocate for reducing government spending and improving the district's infrastructure.

The race is expected to be close, with both candidates working hard to win the support of the district's residents.

disagreements in the campaign for the White House, and Carter's winng of the election was largely attributed to his strong performance in the debates. Although Nixon had hoped to regain the White House, his defeat was a significant setback for the Republican Party.

The new president, Jimmy Carter, faced a number of challenges in his early years in office. He inherited a Cold War-era world, with tensions between the United States and the Soviet Union and the ongoing conflict in Vietnam. Carter sought to shift the focus of U.S. foreign policy towards detente and arms control, and he faced the challenge of dealing with the energy crisis of the 1970s.

Carter's administration proposed a number of energy-related policies, including the Energy Independence Act, which aimed to reduce the nation's dependence on foreign oil. However, the Legislature of Connecticut, Ford, approved most of the tax- energy conservation programs proposed by Carter in his first year in office.

For example, the administration proposed to implement a comprehensive test ban treaty to end underground testing of nuclear weapons. Carter's proposals were met with resistance in Congress, but he was able to secure passage of some key components, such as the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) agreements.

The Ford administration had sought to reduce the nation's dependence on foreign oil by promoting energy conservation. Carter, on the other hand, pursued a more aggressive approach to energy independence, which involved a combination of increased domestic production, energy conservation, and alternative energy sources.

The next president would need to address these issues and develop a comprehensive energy policy for the United States.
