Gov't proposes salting away oil

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Hailing the threat of an oil embargo, the Carter administration has proposed spending $1 billion to buy oil in the Middle East, as an insurance policy, according to sources in the administration. The proposal is expected to be announced later this week, in a bid to allay fears about oil supplies. The proposal is part of a broader strategy to diversify the nation's energy sources and reduce reliance on foreign oil.

Law to add computer to force

By DAVID WITTHE Shoot all you want.

The trend of the "long arm of the law" will continue at least through next month, when the Johnson County Sheriff's Office and the Iowa City Police Department will begin using a new computer to aid enforcement.

The department's new computer system begins this week in an attempt to make their crime records more centralized and easily accessible.

"We have an abundance of evidence that could be used to construct a case, but it is hard to make sense of it," said jail Superintendent Jim Bullock.

Bullock said the department's new computer system will be a "great improvement" in the department's ability to analyze crime patterns.

"We have been using a computer system for a long time, but this is the first system we have had that is dedicated to crime analysis," he said.

The system will allow the department to track crime trends, analyze data, and identify patterns that may help solve crimes.

Snow tire prices jacked up 12%

by Larry Irwin

Winter is here. All the snow and ice on the roads has sent tire dealers into high gear. Tire prices are up and tire dealers are working overtime to keep their inventories in top shape.

Tire dealers blame the rise in tire prices on increased costs due to the rising price of crude oil. "Higher oil prices mean higher prices for us," said one tire dealer. "We have to pass along the increased costs to our customers." In addition, tire dealers said that the rising price of crude oil has caused a shortage of tires on the market. "We just can't get enough tires to meet the demand," said another tire dealer.

Despite the higher prices, tire dealers are optimistic about the future. "We expect tire prices to continue to rise as long as the price of crude oil stays high," said one tire dealer. "But we're prepared to handle the increased demand." Tire dealers are also optimistic about the economy. "We expect the economy to continue to grow and tire prices to continue to rise," said one tire dealer. "We're confident that we can meet the demand and keep our inventories充足."

Price rise needed to oil priority shift

Representatives of the major states of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) are currently meeting in Vienna, Austria, to consider quotas and price levels that, they hope, will force Western countries to reduce their oil consumption. But, as the meeting begins, there are indications that the countries may not be able to agree on a plan that would significantly reduce the price of oil. The oil crisis has created a severe economic problem for Western countries, which now depend on oil for their energy needs. In order to reduce their oil consumption, Western countries have been encouraged to invest in alternative energy sources. The meeting in Vienna is a crucial step in determining how to address this issue.

The meeting in Vienna has been complicated by the fact that the countries of OPEC have different interests. Some countries, such as Saudi Arabia, are willing to agree to a price increase, while others, such as Iran, are not. The meeting is expected to continue for several days, and it is unclear whether a consensus will be reached.

In the meantime, Western countries are being urged to reduce their oil consumption. The United States, for example, has been asked to reduce its oil consumption by 20%. This is a difficult task, as the United States is heavily dependent on oil for its energy needs. However, Western countries are being urged to take action, as the oil crisis is creating a serious economic problem.

In conclusion, the meeting in Vienna is a crucial step in determining how to address the oil crisis. It is unclear whether a consensus will be reached, but it is clear that Western countries need to reduce their oil consumption in order to address this issue.

Korbut finds happiness, ‘gift,’ wedding gown

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Russian gymnast Olga Korbut has married and she smiled when she lectured her megacity of fans about happiness.

"I feel I lost my happiness, not because it was expensive but because it was lost," Korbut said through an interpreter.

"Gift to my soul and it would be found."

The 31-year-old champion of the 1972 Olympics bought the dress in St. Louis recently and had it following an appearance in Independence last Thursday.

An interpreter found the interpretation the woman in tennis shoes and a fur coat and a beaded necklace.
