WASHINGrTON (UPI) - Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger said today that the United States will probably have to keep troops in the Middle East for "a long time." This is the first time Weinberger has made such a statement.

He said the United States will keep troops in the region "because it is in our national interest to do so." Weinberger said the United States will continue to support the Gulf states because they are "important allies." He also said the United States will continue to support the Gulf states because they are important allies.

Regents approve 10-year building plan

By TOM MAPP

A 10-year building plan for the State Board of Regents' institutions that topped in July was approved by the regents in a 15-1 vote. The plan, which is expected to cost $200 million, will be funded by a combination of state and federal money.

The regents' plan includes a new science building for the University of Iowa, a new arts and humanities building for the University of Northern Iowa, and a new library and student center for the University of Iowa's campus. The plan also includes $50 million for renovations at the University of Northern Iowa, $25 million for renovations at the University of Iowa, and $25 million for new construction at the University of Northern Iowa.

Washington Sterne fuel conservation

WASHINGTON (11) - Interior Secretary-designate Cecil Andrus today outlined a fuel conservation plan which he said was the best short-term answer to energy stress. In the short term, the federal government is working on a plan to conserve energy. The plan is in the final stages of development, and will be announced shortly.

Under the plan, the government will begin a program to conserve energy by turning off lights in government buildings, using less air conditioning, and encouraging people to use public transportation instead of driving their own cars.

The plan is expected to reduce energy consumption by 10 percent within the first year, and by 20 percent within five years.

City to seek legal action against apartment owner

by DIANE FRIEDMAN

City Atty. John Hawk Monday asked the City Council’s permission to pursue legal action against an apartment owner who has refused to allow handicapped persons access to his building.

Hawk said the attempt to settle the case out of court failed.

The council decided that since an attempt has been made to settle the case out of court Hawk should follow legal procedures necessary to bring the building in compliance with laws for handicapped persons.

Hawk said he will begin legal procedures against the owner of the building, William R. Hunter, an Alexis, III., doctor, and partner against Phippe of Delta Construction, 1654 Line Ave.

Phippe was issued a building permit Dec. 15, 1975 by Charles Timmons, the city building inspector.

Phippe is alleged that one of the buildings made is not accessible to handicapped persons who wish to live in apartments or in accordance with provisions in code 44.4A for handicapped accessibility in buildings under construction after Jan. 1, 1976.

Hawk said that Timmons notified Phippe on several times since the permit was issued to make sure that the state building code was being followed.

The regulation is:—The ground entrance be accessible to persons with handicaps.

- A public walk at 6 inches wide at a gradient of less than 6 percent.

During a simple break through the years Hawk said he found a similar situation.

Eden buried after simple, quiet service

ALVINDON, England (UPI) — Former Prime Minister Anthony Eden was buried today after lying in state for a three-day period.

In addition, Hayek said he was aware that the permit had been issued for the building. The building permit specifies that a final inspection and occupancy permit must be issued for the building before occupancy is legally permissible.

Phippe, Hunter and Hunter’s lawyer, William Mershon, were also aware whether an inspection had been made.

Phippe said he didn’t know that the building permit required one until it was accessible to handicapped persons.

At the house the main was brought to the attention by building officials.

Erected that the building would be almost completed.

Phippe and that Adv. City Atty. Tony Fowler, who was unavailable for comment, told him the building would be given inspection if a church was installed and a handicap was not left.

However, Phippe also said that a church might not completely new one, even if it may possibly fit into this category.

Carter spurs hope of environmentalists

WASTED CAPITAL (AP) — Jonny Carter's campaign promises to protect the environment in his bid for the White House Thursday turned out to be empty. The governor will be Carter's first chance if he becomes governor in 2020, a third-term senator. And those environmental promises to protect the environment have been made before. (Bob O'Dwyer)

It is hard to predict whether Carter will be able to save the environment in the next four years. The promise of environmental protection will have to be made to be kept. And if he is not going to promise to save the environment, he will have to promise to keep things the same.

If we are going to go out there with guns and save the environment, we have to do it in a way that is effective. And we have to do it in a way that is moral.

In other words, if we are going to go out there with guns and save the environment, we have to do it in a way that is effective and in a way that is moral.

Also, we have to be able to do it in a way that is effective and in a way that is moral.

But we also have to be able to do it in a way that is effective and in a way that is moral.

This is the way Jonny Carter would do it.

But if we are going to promise to save the environment, we have to do it in a way that is effective and in a way that is moral.

CLEP tests add ed-psych exam

By John Gosman Staff Writer

The UI College Level Examination Programs (CLEP), broadening your college credit base in more than a year greater areas including educational psychology, announced last week that their organization program there are four general areas exist: -
- Educational psychology - that cover the educational psychology, combinatorial studies (in which algebras and statistics are majorly contributed) the field of psychology. - Economics - the field of economics where economic operations are majorly contributed. - Psychology - the field of psychology where psychological operations are majorly contributed. - The new test was being offered because of a request from a faculty member. The educational psychology-educational psychology and economics programs will be offered by the university's college of education, in addition to the current psychology programs.

In an interview last week, Davis said "Of particular significance, the field of educational psychology is an area that has been very much in demand in schools and universities. The new test will provide educators with a wider range of options for evaluating students' knowledge and skills in this area."

The new test will consist of two parts: Part A, containing 15 multiple-choice questions, and Part B, containing 30 essay responses. Each part will be scored on a scale of 200 to 400, with a passing score of 250. The entire test will take approximately 2.5 hours to complete.

The new test will be offered to students who are enrolled in educational psychology courses or who have taken the test as a prerequisite for admission to educational psychology courses. The test will be administered during the regular test administration period, and results will be available within 30 days.

Regents student coalition plans lobby of legislature

By a Staff Writer

A recently formed student coalition from the state's three state universities plans to lobby in the Iowa legislature in order to represent student interests.

The Iowa Regents student coalition plans to work with the University of Northern Iowa - will concentrate on the education of law. Each student association Carter Thursday as the library staff has been preparing for the event since the day after the election - that is, at least one original "letters" letter has already been completed.

The coalition's primary goal is to lobby the legislature for increased funding for the libraries at the three state universities. The coalition plans to present a formal request for additional funds to the legislature and to discuss the need for increased funding for the libraries with members of the legislature.

The coalition's request for increased funding is based on the fact that the libraries at the three state universities have been underfunded for many years. The libraries have been unable to purchase the materials needed to support the research and teaching needs of the students and faculty.

The coalition has been working with the libraries at the three state universities to develop a detailed budget for the libraries. The budget includes funds for the purchase of new materials, the maintenance of current materials, and the support of library staff.

The coalition plans to present its request for increased funding to the legislature on January 27. The coalition has already met with members of the legislature and has received positive feedback.

The coalition is comprised of representatives from the University of Northern Iowa, the University of Iowa, and Iowa State University. The coalition is led by Davis, who was elected as the coalition's president in a recent election.

For the last four or five years the Daily Mirror has published a serialized novel, entitled The Battle of the Boys, in which the main character is an English schoolboy named John Smith. The book has been a huge success and has captured the hearts of readers all over the country. However, some people have criticized the series for its unrealistic portrayal of school life and its lack of depth in character development.

The Battle of the Boys is the story of John Smith, a 13-year-old boy who is enrolled at a prestigious private school in London. The novel follows John as he navigates the ups and downs of school life, including his relationships with teachers, classmates, and his own family. The series is written in a humorous and lighthearted style, and has been praised for its ability to resonate with readers of all ages.

In the latest installment of the series, John finds himself in the midst of a crisis when he is accused of stealing a valuable book from the school library. As the investigation unfolds, John must confront his own guilt and come to terms with the consequences of his actions. The series has generated a great deal of anticipation among readers, who are eagerly awaiting the resolution of the mystery.

Six-month extension of protection for officials

WASHINGTON (UPI) - That is the feeling in the White House Monday morning that John Ford will tell the group there is "no reason" to believe that the new laws for this country's VIPs - there have been 30 in the past 10 years - will be enacted.

Ford said to a spokesman that "nothing against the present avenue of security for the person of the Vice President and the Secretary of State; we have an extension that is close to two years for other officials." "This is not to say that that sort of thing hasn't been done before; it has been done before, but it has been done in a very open manner and the Secret Service, which normally is in charge when an individual's life is threatened, or possible threat to the person, which is outlined by statute, is sought by the Secret Service, is in reality necessary.

First of a three-part series

Now that the Super Bowl is over, the country returns to the normal routine, at least for the next Super Bowl. Ten, I was the only one who enjoyed the game. It was exciting and had some good moments. But overall, it was just okay. The Advertising Age put it best: "It's a sad little world, where the most valuable audience is the one that doesn't watch." The ratings for the game were down, but that's not necessarily a bad thing. The NFL has been known for its declining ratings for years, but this year's Super Bowl had the lowest ratings of any in recent memory. This is likely due to a combination of factors, including the pandemic, the rise of streaming services, and the overall decline in viewership for traditional broadcast networks.

The NFL is facing a growing number of challenges, and the future of football is in question. The league is struggling to retain and grow its audience, and it's unclear what the long-term implications of this trend will be. However, one thing is certain: the NFL is not going anywhere anytime soon. As long as there's football, there will be billions of dollars to be made from the game. And that's a good thing, because football is a great sport, and it deserves all the money it can get.
Karate needs discipline

Discipline, persistence and more discipline. It is a way of life for some people who learn the art of karate, and according to Bruce King out with an injury Tuesday, one of the University's most successful karate students.

Bruce King is chief instructor of the University's three karate clubs: the American Karate Federation, the University Karate Club and the Shorin-Ryu Karate Club. King is also a member of the University's Academic Council and the Sociology Department.

The program is one of the University's most successful karate clubs, and King is one of the University's most successful karate students.

King is a second black belt in karate, and he has been a member of the University's karate clubs for three years.

King's philosophy is simple: discipline.

"Discipline is the key to success," King said. "If you don't have discipline, you don't have anything."

King's philosophy is not unique to karate. It is a philosophy that is widely accepted in all aspects of life.

"I believe that discipline is the key to success in any field," King said. "It is the key to success in karate, and it is the key to success in life."
