'Dance for Those Who Can't'

Rite of spring: annual charity marathon

BY TOM MAPF
 Staff Writer

Spring is here, and with it comes the annual charity marathon, a three-hour dance marathon for Malawi

Three-hour dance marathon is an annual event that began in 1994 with about 10 dancers participating. Participants are asked to raise $500 by selling tickets or doing other fundraising activities. The event is held at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign on the night of the dance marathon.

The annual event is organized by the America

Dancing for Malawi, a local non-profit organization, and is held at the Student Center in Urbana-Champaign.

The event is one of the largest dance marathons in the world, with over 1,000 participants signing up for the event. The event is a fundraiser for Malawi, a small country in southern Africa that has been strife-torn by civil war.

The event is open to all students, faculty, and staff of the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. Participants are encouraged to sign up early and to bring their own dancing shoes.

The event is sponsored by the Student Center and the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. The event is free to attend and there will be food and drinks available for purchase.

The event is a way for people to come together and enjoy a night of dancing and music while raising money for a good cause.

The event is held every year on the night before the Illinois-Michigan game, and is a local tradition.

The ‘Moonies’—trapped by ‘normality’

Barbara Underwood, John Dowdell, Leslie Stiver, Justin Hannon, and Joseph Flamm did not look very public-office citizens of the United States. But last Thursday, they had been almost spotted in the eyes and had not been found guilty. They were only seen, not in the public eye, but in the privacy of their family. These were the foster parents of the eight children, aged between two and eight, who were sent to a private school. The parents had sought legal advice to remove their children from the school, which they did on the first of the month.

At the hearing, the attorneys for the custodial parents had made their case. Detained, Carl Shapiro and his associates argued, on behalf of the parents, that the children could not be removed from the protection of the federal government. This position was based on the fact that the children were not offenders and could not be sent to prison. The court found in favor of the parents and ordered the children to be returned to the care of their parents.

The case, then, is the latest example of the problem of parents who are unable to care for their children. This is not a new phenomenon, but it is one that is becoming more common. In fact, the number of cases of parents who are unable to care for their children has increased dramatically in recent years. This is due to a variety of factors, including changes in family structures, economic pressures, and social policies.

The case of the ‘Moonies’ is a stark reminder of the need for better support for parents who are unable to care for their children. It is also a reminder of the importance of early intervention and support for parents who are struggling. As we continue to grapple with the issues of family and child welfare, we must work to ensure that all children have the opportunity to thrive.

U.S. Cubans officials met secretly

WASHINGTON (AP) - The U.S. government has been considering ways to secretly meet with Cuban officials for two years, but the talks have been stymied by the high price of travel to Cuba.

The talks were initially discussed at the U.S. embassy in Havana, but the price of flights to Cuba has made them difficult to continue.

Officials involved in the talks say that they have been unable to find a way to make the meetings viable.

The U.S. government has been looking for ways to engage with the Cuban government without violating U.S. laws.

Defense dismisses case against nurses as 'contrived'

O'BRIEN (AP) - A defense attorney for two nurses accused of poisoning I.A. hospital patients and then falsifying reports to cover up the deaths has argued that the case against them is 'contrived.'

The defense attorney, Thomas O'Brien, said that the nurses were innocent and that the case against them was built on flimsy evidence.

The nurses, named John Doe and Jane Doe, are accused of poisoning patients with a powerful muscle relaxant.

The jury panel includes 12 women and men. At the conclusion of testimony, four weeks will be designated as alternates.

O'Brien said that the government's case against the nurses was based on a single, uncorroborated statement.

O'Brien also alluded that hospital administrators were mortgages in the handling of patient records and that the death certificates were fabricated to cover up the poisonings. He said that he thought the nurses were innocent and that the case against them was built on flimsy evidence.

The nurses are accused of poisoning the patients with a powerful muscle relaxant, which resulted in 10 deaths.

The nurses are charged with murder, attempted murder, and other charges.

Simpson: illiteracy still cultural norm

By ROB GUYEN

Stu Writer

Post-Late Simpson does not think that his current political concerns are isolated or enjoyed by a select few. Instead, he believes that illiteracy issues can be found in the United States and even worldwide.

"Lack of education is a problem that needs to be addressed," Simpson said. "It affects many areas of life, from politics to science to the arts."

Simpson argues that the media plays a significant role in perpetuating illiteracy. "The news is often filled with stories that are difficult to understand, and this can lead to a lack of interest in reading," he explained.

He also pointed out that even schools are not always equipped to help students who struggle with reading. "Some schools may not have the resources or the time to provide the extra support that students need," Simpson said.

"We need to make literacy a priority," he added. "It's not just about reading, it's about understanding and interpreting information."
'Spiritual findings' have helped music

Gary Wright disputes magazine's 'mystical' label

By MIKE SANDERMAN

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Even though Gary Wright recently released "Spirit," the song he described as "one of the most spiritual songs," he said the story of the recording was not all that spiritual.

"The article was badly worded and slanted," he said, referring to a story that appeared recently, "The story was really based on the misunderstanding of what was going on with the record." The magazine was not describing the song as "mystical," he said.

"They probably had taken a quick and easy way to look at the other side of the story," Wright said. "It probably was not being told accurately in the first place." Wright added that he was "shocked" to see his name in the article.

Wright said that he was not worried about being labeled as "mystical." "I feel like I'm more conscious than spiritual," he said. "I feel like I'm more conscious than that." He added that he was "surprised" to see the label applied to him.

Southern swing spurs optimism

THE DAILY IOWAN sports

By DADDY THOMAS

Not even the dreary rains that reduced the Iowa baseball season from its 35-game
norm could dampen the optimism of Coach Dow Banks and his players who were training for the spring season.

"It was a outstanding trip. It doesn't what we could have done," said Tony Sisco,
"but it was good to know that we're going to be the best team in the country next year."

Banks said there was much more to the trip than just baseball.
"It was a very important trip for us. It was an opportunity to see some of the best teams in the country."

The Iowa team that "traveled" the South by buses was led by Coach
Don Pedro, a former University of Florida star, and assistant coach Mike Becker, who both have been key contributors to Iowa's success in recent years.

"We had a lot of fun," said Sisco,
"but we also learned a lot. We learned how to handle ourselves away from home."
