Textile workers demand lower quotas

By United Press International

An estimated 100,000 clothing and textile workers demonstrated in Washington Tuesday to protest President Carter's refusal to consider an import quota for apparel. The demonstrators called for passage of a bill which would allow the administration to impose quotas on Japanese imports and which would also give the president authority to impose quotas on other nations. The import quotas would be designed to protect American textile workers from foreign competition. The demonstration was the largest of its kind in recent years.

Anti-imports demonstration

More than 1,000 workers in the apparel and textile industries, who are part of the National Conference of Textile Workers, assembled at the steps of the U.S. Senate to protest the administration's refusal to consider import quotas. The workers held signs and chanted slogans demanding that the administration take action to protect American jobs. The demonstration was led by party leaders and members of the Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare.

ARH presidency filled, but KRUI still empty

The committee feels that after talking to the managers, they are willing to cooperate and get KRUI back in operation.

In other executive board elections, Dick Lindaman, a member of the KRUI executive board, was re-elected president. Joe Van дер Woude, ARH, was re-elected for the treasurer post. And Carol March, ARH, was elected treasurer, running unopposed.

In other ARH news the board decided a motion by Lombardi recommending that the student house council operate as an Activities Board, decide to recognize the National Federation of the Blind as a student organization.

Shefman will consider whether to revert to the Activities Board decision at its meeting tonight.

A number of ARH representatives argued that they believed the decision to have the activities board being made, so long as it was legal and any appeal of the decision to the student house council was not. As far as he was concerned, the KRUI committee before any vote was taken, he added.

A Iowa attorney to tour China

By ELNORA SIMPSON

The Iowa City chapter of the U.S.-China People's Friendship Association (USCPFA) has appointed James Connor, 21, a law student at the University of Iowa, to accompany an American legal delegation to China.

"It was pretty lucky being asked going for the trip," Patterson said. "I am doing a lot of reading up and I've been trying to learn a little bit about China."

"I want to see a lot of people and maybe some business going on," he said. "I want to look for a school to do business with, and try to figure out what's going on in the world."

According to Patterson, a number of the organizations which generate the sponsorship, the Midwest Friendship Tours and American advisory group, were interested in what he would see and talk about.

"There are also many questions that need answering about the factories, the people, their economy, their government, etc."

"Socially, there are certain questions which need to be answered about the way of life, the people's education, their living standards, etc."

"I want to meet with the people there and see if there is any interest in trading with the United States."

He said he wants to take a critical look at the situation, to see how the people live and work, and be able to ask some questions. "I'm very anxious to see what life is like around there, and to see how people are coping."

"We have been working on this for a while now," Patterson said. "I've been studying the problem, and I've been thinking about it for a long time."

"I want to see what the problems are, and to see how the issues are being handled."

"I want to see what the situation is, and to see how the people are coping."
I've got plenty of memoirs...

Crime doesn't pay, but apparently the President plans it.

In a town that prides itself on being the "football capital of the world," the Parkers have suddenly become "hot property." The public has bided its time waiting to buy in on the team's spectacular run to the Super Bowl, and fans have come to expect the Parker name to be associated with winning.

As the Parker's coach, the football player, has become a familiar face at the local bar, "The Steamer," his every move is followed by the local press. The Parker's victories have become a benchmark for the team, and the Parker's name is synonymous with success.

In the city, the Parker's have become instant celebrities, and the local media has been quick to capitalize on the Parker's moment in the spotlight. The Parker's have become the talk of the town, with articles and interviews appearing daily in the local paper.

But as the Parker's success continues, the media has been quick to point out the Parker's flaws. The Parker's have been accused of using their fame for profit, and the Parker's have been forced to defend their actions in the press.

Despite the criticism, the Parker's remain resolute in their commitment to their team and their fans. They continue to work hard, and their dedication has earned them the respect of their peers and the loyalty of their fans.

In the end, the Parker's story is one of success and resilience. They have overcome the challenges of their past, and they have emerged stronger than ever. The Parker's are a shining example of what can be achieved when hard work and determination are combined.

TRANSCRIPT OF DC9 PILOT'S CONVERSATIONS RELEASED

ATLANTA, April 9 - Releasing is a case, transcribing a voice, Senator Sam Nunn Jr., McEntire said, "I was sitting in a cabin or a traffic control center when I heard the voice of the pilot of the plane that crashed in the sea off the Florida coast. The voice was the last word the pilot said before the plane went down." The voice was a message from the pilot to the air traffic controllers in the control tower, who had been monitoring the flight. The voice was clear and understandable, and it contained the message "Emergency, Emergency, Mayday, Mayday." The voice was recorded on a tape by the air traffic controllers, who had been monitoring the flight for several minutes. The tape was released by the government, who had been investigating the crash. FDA expected to allow saccharin only as drug

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Food and Drug Administration may allow saccharin to be sold as a drug but will not reverse its decision to ban the artificial sweetener from use as a food additive, agency officials said Wednesday.

In a report released Wednesday, the FDA said it would continue to ban saccharin as a food additive but would allow it to be sold as a medication.

The decision means that saccharin, which is used in diet drinks and other products, could continue to be sold in some form, but not as a food additive.

The FDA's decision was based on the results of a study by the National Toxicology Program, which found that saccharin is not a cancer-causing substance when administered orally.

FDA researchers said they found no evidence that saccharin causes cancer in humans, but they said more research is needed to determine if it is safe to use as a food additive.

The FDA's decision comes after years of debate about the safety of saccharin.

Some health experts have long argued that saccharin is not safe for human consumption, while others have said it is safe when used as a diet sweetener.

The FDA's decision to allow saccharin as a drug is likely to be greeted with relief by some consumers and concern by others.

Some experts have called for a ban on all artificial sweeteners, while others argue that saccharin is a safe alternative to more controversial sweeteners like aspartame and sacralin.

The FDA's decision to allow saccharin as a drug is likely to be closely watched by health and food industry groups.

Food companies that use saccharin may be required to label their products as containing the sweetener, and the FDA may require additional testing to ensure the safety of the product.
Soltice faces race, jazz Revelations

Tennis prospects bloom

Larry Jones

The prospects are flying in. More than 600 entries have been received by the University of Iowa. The number of entries has increased by more than 100 from last year's record of 405. There are entries from 37 states and eight foreign countries. Among the foreign entries are those from England, Canada, Mexico, and Germany. The entries are divided into three groups: men, women, and junior. The men's group has the largest number of entries, followed by the women's group. The junior group has the smallest number of entries. The entries will be used to fill the 16 singles and 15 doubles spots on the tournament. The entries will also be used to select the members of the university team. The team will be selected based on the performance of the players in the tournament. The tournament will be held on the University of Iowa campus in late April. The tournament will be a two-day event. The first day will be a singles event, and the second day will be a doubles event. The tournament will be open to all college students, and the entry fee is $5 per person. The tournament will be a great opportunity for students to compete and gain experience. The tournament will also be a great opportunity to see some of the best tennis players in the country.

It was a personal vindication for Andy Willians, whom the Nets recruited last season to add an experienced left-handed reliever. Willians, who had been in the majors for three years, returned to the majors this year and has been outstanding.

On Tuesday, against the Cubs, Willians pitched a perfect inning to record his 28th save of the season. He has a 1.13 ERA and 17 saves in his last 18 appearances.

Willians' performance has helped stabilize the team, which is in the running for the National League East division title.
