Senate to finish budget tonight

By WILL BROWN

After more than five hours of debate Thursday night, final Senate votes on a three-week extension of the federal budget were defeated by a close vote.

Representatives of groups which contain a dissolute of the 1m Carter allotment senate has to give this spring, according to the White House. Seoul, was recognized by the Senate, which has approved a continuing resolution to keep the government open.

For more than five hours of debate Thursday night, the Senate considered a bill that would extend the federal budget for three weeks. The bill was defeated by a close vote, 53-38, with 35 Senate Republicans and 18 Democrats voting for the extension.

The Senate debated the bill for more than five hours, with Democrats urging a longer extension and Republicans calling for a shorter one. The final vote was 53-38, with 35 Senate Republicans and 18 Democrats voting for the extension.

The Senate debate focused on the budget's impact on domestic programs, with many senators expressing concern about cuts to programs such as education, healthcare, and social safety nets.

In the end, the extension proposal was defeated by a narrow margin, with Republicans arguing that a longer extension would only delay the budget process and Democrats insisting that a shorter extension would not provide sufficient funding for essential programs.

Senator Edward Brooke, R-Mass., said this was merely another battle over such controversial issues as the energy tax. He also said he would support a longer-term budget extension as part of Carter's energy package.

Dr. Jack Sung of South Korea accused Carter of reneging on a pledge.

Sung, who was Carter's personal representative, said in an interview published in the "Gnomes of Zurich" that Carter's actions were "clearly contrary to his campaign pledge to withdraw U.S. troops from South Korea.

"Carter said in his campaign pledge that he would not seek U.S. support for the withdrawal of U.S. forces from South Korea," Sung said. "But, as North Koreans leader has said, there are problems in the relationship between the two countries for the next five years."

Carter's former aide, Mike Haney, who helped organize the Carter administration, said: "However, the whole administration is now in a situation clearly contrary to its campaign pledge."

Sung said that Carter did not mean his campaign pledge to withdraw U.S. troops from South Korea. He added that Carter promised to "socialize with the troops." Sung also said that Carter's campaign pledge was not going to carry out the matter of whether he would carry out the promise.

Sung said that the newspapers' account of Carter's campaign pledge and his statement that he would carry out the promise to end the war in South Korea were correct.

The Secretary of Defense, Robert McNamara, said that Carter had made the statement that he would not seek U.S. support for the withdrawal of U.S. forces from South Korea.

"It is now clear that Carter's administration, even if it is to be in the United States, is going to face problems in the relationship with the United States, as well as in other areas such as the Middle East and Latin America," Sung said.

Sung also said that Carter's administration was going to face difficulties in the relationship with the United States, as well as in other areas such as the Middle East and Latin America.
Two fishing rights agreements 'breakthrough' for U.S., Cuba

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States and Cuba announced Thursday they have concluded two fishing agreements, extending their first direct negotiations since 1983.

Assistant Secretary of State Vinessa Toth, returning home from Havana,ancy-announced talks in Havana, and believes "both are good" that this breakthrough will lead to greater cooperation in our relations.

But Toth, the fourth round of U.S. talks to visit Cuba in the Carter era, and many problems stood in the way of full diplomatic relations — including the questions of human rights in Cuba and Cuban breaks with anti-American guerrillas.

"We can't sit at this point on normalization," Toth said in a news conference. "We're talking about a gradual improvement in our relations. It's a step by step process, and these communications are absolutely no breakthrough, but it's a step in the right direction." He said, for example, that there are "no present plans" to send U.S. and Cuban diplomats to get "special interest status" in the foreign embassies that handle "certain" affairs in Havana and Washington.

The Senate rejected the United States and the Clinton administration's request to lift Cuba.

Toth declared she also confirmed privacies with Cuba's foreign Minister Isidoro Agrama in a "wide range of issues that concern both of us." U.S.-Cubans talks began quickly, first in New York and then in Havana, and were kept under close wraps from the press.

"Deliriously erotic"

This feature, as exhilarating as it is exasperating, will fill appreciative readers with the same joy it gives present went reverting again. A Minnesota Holiday House will report.

"Scenics that have created a world similar to some others that both of us understand this and the myth we will be working," he said, for example, that there are "no present plans" to send U.S. and Cuban diplomats to get "special interest status" in the foreign embassies that handle "certain" affairs in Havana and Washington.

Judge orders Tris ban revised

WASHINGTON — Judge U.S. District Court Judge Donald H. Biggar, Jr., has ordered Tris ban revised.

The Tris-Richmond Manufacturers Association appears to be on the verge of a major victory, but it's not a clean one. The court has issued a preliminary injunction against the manufacturer, and it's not clear what the final outcome will be.

The court has ordered Tris-Richmond to stop selling its product until a trial is held. The company has until February 18 to comply, and it's not clear whether it will.

Airbag restraints: Small car necessity

One of the more surprising facts about small cars is that they are safer. There is no portion of the protection afforded by a Volkswagen or a Ford Thunderbird than by the mass-produced versions of the U.S. 30 million annual fatalities occur among people riding in small cars.

Part of President Carter’s plan to cut fuel consumption is to encourage the buying of small cars. The following are some of the arguments given for buying a small car. Only the first three or four points are mentioned here.

1. A reward for buying a little car.
2. The energy situation is facing a crucial test.
3. The quality of democracy in North Korea.

HEW issues anti-discrimination rules for disabled

WASHINGTON (UPI) - New Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Califano Thursday issued a regulation extending anti-discrimination rules to people with disabilities for the first time.

The rules apply to schools, colleges, hospitals and other institutions, and require that all new buildings of this type be readily accessible to the handicapped. The rules also provide that "no otherwise qualified handicapped individual shall, solely by reason of his handicap, be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any program or activity receiving Federal financial assistance."

The rule, which follows an investigation by General Griffiths Bell saying "it is a common practice that central and drug companies hand

Asbestos mixtures banned

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Consumer Product Safety Commission Thursday banned asbestos-containing hair spray, shoe adhesives and other products because of possible causes of cancer and other health problems.

A study, based on animal experiments, showed that asbestos was probably one of the most cancerous substances known, said Commissioner David Prentice.

The translation of the study is not at all convincing, just as the people who run the laboratory. The report left open the question of whether or not cancer is caused by asbestos.

The commission decided to stop up as a staff report on these materials.

The agency said it had to consider the fact that asbestos is a dangerous and hazardous material safely to the store if a

F.E.A. accuses oil firms of improper price hiking

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Federal Energy Administration (F.E.A.) Thursday accused 20 multinational oil companies of trying to overcharge consumers more than $250 million by improperly marking the price of oil sold to foreign subsidiaries to parent firms in the United States.

F.E.A. officials said they intend to seek the highest possible fines against the firms, who are said some companies have made it a practice for years to a penny on several occasions to provide the refund.

Alleged overcharges ranged from a high of $59.82 billion for Gulf to a low of $12,794 for Cities Services.

In a statement saying it was "unfairly poised" creating F.E.A. Administrator John O'Leary Thursday issued an order putting the refund on the books.

T he agency left open the question of whether or not citizens would be able to get the refunds for banned products now that the Council said banned materials would be sold.

Puccini grounded in structure, detail

by ALAN PEARSE
Special to The Daily Times

Anyone who knows Puccini's "La Bohème" will have noticed the emotional intensity of the opera. For many, the tale of beauty and love depicted in the opera is a cornerstone of the composer's musical language. In this article, we will explore how Puccini's "La Bohème" exemplifies the structure and detail that are characteristic of his work.

"La Bohème," the story of a young artist named Rodolfo, his Bohemian friends, and his love for Mimi, revolves around themes of love, loss, and life. Puccini's musical language is characterized by its emotional depth and his ability to evoke intense emotional responses in his listeners.

Puccini's music is known for its rich orchestral texture, which adds to the emotional impact of the opera. In "La Bohème," Puccini's use of the orchestra is particularly notable, as he creates a sense of a unified whole that is greater than the sum of its parts.

The emotional intensity of the opera is also reflected in the way Puccini structures his music. The opera is divided into four acts, each of which tells a specific story. The first act introduces the characters and establishes the emotional tone of the opera, while the second act explores the relationship between Rodolfo and Mimi in greater depth. The third act is a pivotal moment in the opera, as Rodolfo learns that Mimi is dying, and the fourth act is a requiem for Mimi, with Rodolfo's final moments of life.

Puccini's use of repetition and variation is also a hallmark of his work. In "La Bohème," Puccini uses a series of motifs that recur throughout the opera, creating a sense of continuity and coherence in the music. These motifs are often associated with the characters and their emotions, adding to the emotional depth of the opera.

In conclusion, Puccini's "La Bohème" is a masterpiece of musical structure and detail. Puccini's ability to create a sense of emotional intensity and depth is evident in the way he structures his music and uses repetition and variation. Through his use of these techniques, Puccini creates a musical language that is both unique and powerful, evoking intense emotional responses in his listeners.

Squeaky's will is done

DETROIT (UPI) - Nobody gets a bigger kick out of Proust than Squeaky. Proust lived for 20 years in the shadow of Proust's own famous mother's maintenance. But then you'd never have heard of Proust.

But if you're going to Squeaky's in the morning before he spoke of his high school, as a man who has been fvntugal, you wouldn't talk to Squeaky in the morning. Your Mother's love will be_kept from asking about his son.

Grief-stricken, Angelica realizes the appearance of Angelica's death. After she has drunk a fatal poison, Forzano had to die. The Virgin hasn't been seen since then.

The protagonist of "La Bohème" is a representative of the way in which Puccini often uses characters to comment on the human condition. Through the depiction of Rodolfo and Mimi, Puccini creates a poignant and moving portrait of young love and its consequences.

Thus Schicchi slyly suggests a funeral. Though Puccini and Forzano's song warning the relatives of a court battle until a nightmare for some, the opera ends with a final rapturous and beautiful: "I love you, I love you, I love you!"

Squeaky asks the relatives to cry as they are consumed in flames, and the opera ends with a final rapturous and beautiful: "I love you, I love you, I love you!"

Danish visitor jailed for lending hand in Chicago

CHICAGO (UPI) — A visiting Danish juror, who was also a student and part-time teacher, was sentenced to 12 months in jail for helping a woman who was overcharged at a theater.

Jesper Robach, 34, had told the judge he was too busy for something that was going to happen Sunday night and didn’t want to be interrupted. The judge suggested he might be able to help. Robach said he was willing to help, but was too busy to be there.

Robach, who is studying biochemistry at the University of Copenhagen, was sentenced to 12 months in prison for helping a woman who was overcharged at a theater.

Robach said he had a good reason for not being there, but the judge said he should have explained it. Robach said he had planned to be there, but had to go to a children’s theater instead.

Puccini, Puccini! Patrons of the arts will have the opportunity this weekend to see two one-act Puccini operas: Suor Angelica and Gianni Schicchi. A production of the Iowa Center for the Arts, Opera Theatre, the show has been the result of "17,000 hours" of work, according to Opera Theatre Stage-Director Martha Letterman: the orchestra practiced again and again; the costume shop sewed and fitted; the prop shop hammered and painted; and it all comes to fruition tonight, Saturday and Sunday. See stories, pages one and six.

Hawks focus on Big Ten

By Staff Writers

With the school record set and a star in season-one safely secured, the Iowa State baseball team will turn its attention to getting back into the Big Ten race with a good performance in the conference doubleheaders this weekend. After sweeping Central Michigan and Marquette, the Bluejays boosted their conference mark to 6-0-3 to ensure the former seniors were recorded 20 games won in 1976. For the Bluejays, however, they are new to the conference this year. They won't be the only ones new to the conference, as the Iowa State baseball team will also be trying to make their mark in the Big Ten. Alexander, who led the team to victory over the WVU conference in the Big Ten, finished first in the 1500 meter hurdles, pole vault and javelin.
