Angered Tennessee governor asks Carter to take Ray

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Gov. Ray Blanton, obviously angered by accusations that officials may have conspired in James Earl Ray's escape, asked President Carter Monday to take the convicted killer of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. into federal custody.

"I'm offering him to the President of the United States," Blanton said with a smile. "If they want him, they can have him."

Blanton told the President in a letter that "the great national concern with Ray, including the investigation by the House Assassination Committee, should cause you to give this request earnest and serious consideration."

Ray scaled a 12-foot wall at the right rear corner of the Brushy Mountain State Prison's recreation yard with five other convicts near dusk Friday. He was run down by bloodhounds early Monday at a coal mining camp some eight miles northeast of the prison.

The governor said he was disgusted with suggestions that prison officials helped Ray escape by relaxing restrictions and earlier indicated he would still be in jail if not for a federal court order.

"All of us have had our integrity questioned and all of us are a little tired of it," Blanton said. "There were national officials in the news media that did question our integrity and even said we may have been part of the escape."

Ray secured a court order from Judge William E. Miller on Dec. 29, 1973, forcing prison officials to let him mingle with other inmates.

"I can say there's a good possibility that's the reason he got over the wall," Blanton said.

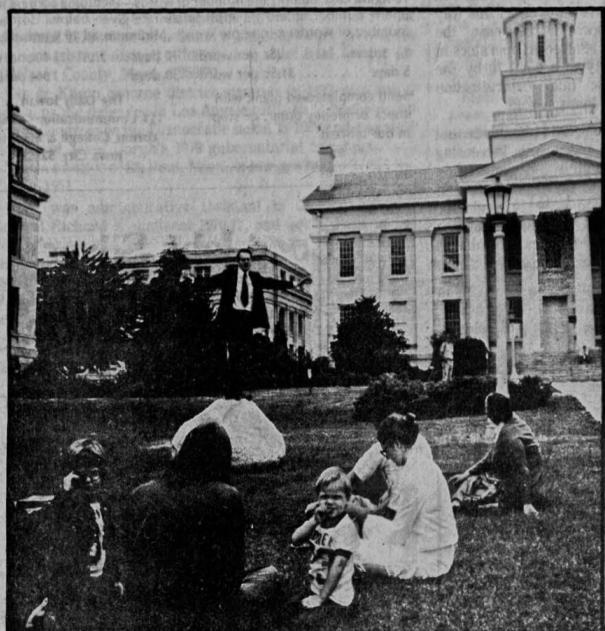

Ray had been kept in solitary confinement, circled by eight-inch thick steel walls reinforced with concrete and left his cell only when he showered, exercised or got sick. He complained that

Ed Smith preaches atop a rock on the Pentacrest each Wednesday noon. It is as pastor of the Bible Missionary Church that he comes here each week with the purpose of getting people to, not necessarily agree with him, but to think about religion.

Perched atop rock, he preaches to passersby

By JAY WALLJASPER
Staff Writer

Sitting comfortably cross-legged at home, his back to a bookshelf crammed with religious texts and oriental volumes, Ed Smith looks nothing like a fanatic. Not even a zealot.

But although he would surely disagree, many of the people who notice him preaching from atop a rock on the Pentacrest each Wednesday noon must think him a bit fanatic.

In his apartment, between services on a Sunday afternoon, he looks more like an old-fashioned college professor with a thin tie, white shirt, closely cropped curly hair and big horned rimmed glasses. In fact, that may have been the career he was headed for in 1969 while a graduate student in Chinese and an anti-war activist at the University of Washington.

But in that year, Smith "met God," which changed his life and eventually brought him to Iowa City. "I felt like God wanted me to come to Iowa City. A man here in town wrote me and asked me to come and form a parish." Smith said he prayed for guidance and God instructed him to pack up for Iowa and build a parish from scratch.

It is in the capacity of pastor of the Bible Missionary Church that brings him to the Pentacrest each week to spread the teachings of the Bible. His sermon topics vary, but he said they all stress "the message of wake up, you're sleeping. Awake to your spiritual condition." Smith added, "It's a sleepy time. People are going on and not thinking about important things. It's lethargic."

Describing his street preaching, he said, "At first it was like jumping in a cold stream, but the uncommon receptiveness of the audience made it easier. During the Spring semester we had a very open response from the crowd and very little heckling. Frankly it surprised me."

Smith noted that many people stop and listen to him out of curiosity, while others come regularly. "I really don't notice the crowd too much. I'm really involved with the message I'm preaching."

The best part of street preaching, Smith mentioned, is afterwards when people come up to discuss religious issues with him. He added that they don't always agree with his literal interpretations of the Bible, but at least they are thinking about religion and God, which is his purpose in climbing atop the rock each week.

Carter reaffirms energy plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Stepping back from last week's anger over Congress' rejection of key energy programs, President Carter said Monday his proposals are "not infallible" but said it was likely his energy ideas would prevail in the end.

Carter's comments at a midafternoon televised news conference stood in sharp contrast to the attack on his behalf by presidential press secretary Jody Powell, who said a subcommittee's vote for immediate and full decontrol of natural gas prices amounted to "a paltry $71 billion ripoff."

Carter also defended the "superb" performance of his U.N. ambassador, Andrew Young, disclosed plans to name a special commission to study the fairness and soundness of pension programs, including Social Security, and said if the Russians interpret his actions to assure universal human rights an intrusion in their affairs, then "so be it."

Reacting to the defeats dealt his energy program in Congress, Carter said he remained concerned over "the inordinate influence" wielded by lobbyists for the oil and automobile industries.

But he said there was a "good likelihood" that Congress "will reverse some of the setbacks that were suffered last week." He also said the loss of any one proposal would not be nationally catastrophic.

"I don't say everything we've proposed has got to be passed as we put it forward," he said.

But he said unless the whole situation is dealt with quickly, chaos could result.

In a series of actions Thursday, Carter's proposals for a standby gasoline tax and for rebates on high-mileage automobiles were rejected by the House Ways and Means Committee and a penalty tax on low-mileage cars was postponed until the 1979 model years.

"The people of this country will be the ones to suffer if our hopes for an energy plan are thwarted," Powell said in an angry response to those setbacks. But Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd advised Carter to "cool it" and let Congress act on the whole program.

The President, responding at his news conference, said he had never criticized Congress as a whole and, signaling a willingness to compromise, said, "I don't say we've got to have the program just as we put it forward."

"We are not infallible," Carter hinted he was still reserving the option of trying to force his program through Congress by rallying the American people.

"It's important that the American people be aroused to the fact that unless they are deeply involved in helping the Congress and me to come up with a substantive, comprehensive, fair and adequate energy policy that the special interest groups will prevail," Carter said.

Carter was ready for questions about Young's comments on "racism." Carter expressed pleasure that Young had established strong relations with the nations of Africa.

But he said he was "disturbed" that the headlines focused on a single comment by Young on racism in Sweden after he completed a 17-day trip to Africa, so difficult it sometimes put Young's life in jeopardy.

Young shares his concern, Carter said. Young also feels the attention over his use of the word "racism" has "clouded the issue," Carter said.

Carter defended his own stand on universal human rights despite the international reaction he has stirred.

He said he was not trying to single out the Soviet Union.

"If it results in self-criticism of our own country, so be it," Carter said. "If the Soviet Union interprets it as an intrusion in their affairs, so be it."

But his statements generally have been "well received through the world."

Dilley appointed CAC interim president

By KELLY ROBERTS
Staff Writer

Benita Dilley was first stripped of her position as president of Collegiate Associations Council (CAC) Monday night when her election April 25 was ruled invalid, then appointed interim president until new elections can be held in the fall.

CAC is the main student government body dealing with academic affairs.

Dilley will preside with full power until Sept. 19, at which time the council will determine the procedure for a new election.

"I'm not going to call this meeting to order," Dilley said. "Instead I will tell you some stories, then pass the chair." Dilley then proceeded to inform the council of the events that lead to the resignation of former CAC vice president Geoff King, and eventually to Monday night's action.

King resigned when it was discovered that, in violation of CAC constitutional guidelines, he was not a student at the time of the election.

"I did not consider myself a student, and that's why I turned in my resignation," King said.

King's resignation brought up another constitutional question. Candidates for the CAC's executive posts are required to run as a team. Since King was not a student at the time of the election, he was not eligible to run; therefore, no team was present.

Dilley's announcement of invalidation was followed by discussion within the council, which then proceeded to nullify the election, by a 9-4 vote.

The council was left with three options when the election had been invalidated. One option was to elect the new executive during the summer sessions. However, since most of the councilors during the summer are replacements for the regular council members, this option was rejected.

Another available option was to disband the CAC during the summer session, regrouping in the fall. Because

Pre-election violence jars Spain

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Terrorists exploded bombs in several places in Spain Monday, killing one person and damaging buildings, television towers and railway lines, in a spreading campaign of violence two days before the nation's first free elections in 41 years.

Basque separatist guerrillas hurled two hand grenades into a police garage in Pamplona, but no one was injured.

The bomb victim was a 22-year-old passerby killed by a blast that ripped apart a parked police car in the Basque town of Barracaldo.

At least 10 bombs caused extensive damage and ripped up the main North-South railway — linking Madrid to the Basque country and France — in two places.

The government of Premier Adolfo Suarez ordered the army and police into the second stage of a special election alert, "Operation Ram," aimed at deterring terrorism before Wednesday's voting.

Troops and police were sent to patrol government buildings, communication centers, power stations, reservoirs, key roads and railways.

In Madrid, police said they seized a number of weapons and arrested 15 alleged members of the fascist group Fuerza Nueva, accused of attacking political rivals with bicycle chains and baseball bats.

Paramilitary Civil Guards fired submachine guns near the Basque towns of San Sebastian and Eibar to fight off terrorists trying to attack a television relay tower and a telephone exchange. There were no casualties.

Most of the bombs were believed to have been set off by members of the separatist guerrilla organization "Basque Homeland and Liberty."

The Basque group ETA, right-wing extremists and GRAPO, a band of left-wing urban guerrillas, claimed responsibility for similar attacks last week.

All these groups are opposed to the elections, which will mark Spain's return to democracy after a bloody civil war and almost four decades of dictatorship under the late Francisco Franco.

The bombs exploded early Monday morning in at least six points in the Basque region and in the two biggest east coast cities, Barcelona and Valencia.

They destroyed a huge cross erected as a civil war memorial in San Sebastian and severely damaged television relay towers and a power station near Bilbao, the central law courts in Barcelona and a building housing the juvenile court in Valencia.

The violence came as the election campaign wound up with a 90-minute television special Monday night.

CAC has many ongoing activities during the summer, such as a book exchange, this option was also rejected.

The third option, and the one chosen, was to appoint an interim officer, with the election to be held in the fall when the regular councilors have returned.

After Dilley was appointed the interim president, a motion was made to forego the summer CAC meetings, letting the executives work on business alone. The motion died for lack of a second.

"CAC does a lot during the summer, and the executives working without the council to back up and check on all they are doing would not be good," Dilley said.

Briefly Williams

DES MOINES (UPI) — Polk County Judge James P. Denato Monday consented to the exhumation of the body of a man who is suspected of possible involvement in the 1968 Christmas Eve rape murder of 10-year-old Pamela Powers.

The order was in response to a request by defense attorneys for Robert Anthony Williams, who is scheduled to go to trial next Monday for the second time in the sex slaying of the Urbandale girl.

Williams' original 1969 conviction was overturned in March by the U.S. Supreme Court, which ordered Williams retried.

Denato's order gave defense attorneys the go-ahead to attempt the exhumation of Albert Bowers' body from the Crystal Lake Cemetery in Minneapolis, Minn., subject to Minnesota laws and a possible court order from a Minnesota judge. Bowers, a janitor at the Des Moines YMCA on the day Powers was killed, died in a Minneapolis truck-pedestrian traffic accident in September 1971.

Although barred from commenting on the case directly by a gag order imposed by Denato, defense attorneys implicated Bowers in the murder in court records.

Bolles

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Trial of two men charged with slaying newsman Don Bolles a year ago was delayed Monday until July 11 because of the last-minute discovery of new evidence.

Superior Court Judge Howard Thompson ordered the continuance after some 125 prospective jurors had gathered in the courthouse and waited for more than two hours while Thompson held a closed door discussion with opposing attorneys.

Thompson and the attorneys declined to describe the new evidence, but Thompson said the prosecution had learned of it only Monday morning.

Arizona's rules of criminal procedure require that the defense be given access to all evidence, so Thompson ruled that in light of the new findings "extraordinary circumstances exist and that the delay was indispensable in the interest of justice."

Paul Smith of Boston, attorney for Max Dunlap, and David Derickson of Phoenix, attorney for the other defendant, James Robison, both requested the continuance.

Coins

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Carter administration backs proposals to end the 50-cent piece and mint a smaller dollar coin, but it has made no decision about eliminating the penny, Treasury spokesmen said Monday.

"The 50-cent coin hasn't circulated much since Kennedy replaced Franklin," said a spokesman for the House subcommittee on historic preservation and coinage.

Lockheed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Lockheed Shipbuilding and Construction Co. billed the government for 73 million pounds of steel in excess of what went into 12 Navy vessels, federal officials told Congress Monday.

Goodwin Chase, chairman of the Renegotiation Board, told the Senate Banking Committee he didn't know where the extra steel was used or where it went.

The Renegotiation Board, established 25 years ago, tries to prevent defense contractors from making "windfall" profits. The committee is considering disbanding the board, as some urge, or strengthening it.

Chase said the firm, a subsidiary of Lockheed Aircraft, could have built 20 boats instead of the 12 the government ordered. The ships in question, amphibious transport docks called LPDs, were built between 1968 and 1971, said Chase.

Clark

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Retired Justice Tom Clark, who wrote some of the Supreme Court's leading opinions during his 18 years on the bench, died in his sleep early Monday at the home of his son Ramsey Clark in New York. He was 77.

His death was announced by the Supreme Court in a statement which said of his work after leaving the court that "no one in the past 30 years has contributed more to the improvement of justice than Tom Clark."

The announcement said death came in the early morning hours at the New York apartment of his son, Ramsey, like his father a former U.S. attorney general.

The younger Clark was in Europe at the time.

While on the court, Clark wrote landmark opinions on such matters as school prayers, illegal search and seizure and movie censorship.

Chief Justice Warren Burger, looking grief-stricken, said Clark "just wouldn't slow down" following the onset of heart problems a few months ago.

Barf the wonder dog stumbled into the newsroom and collapsed.

"Boy, that was tough... tracking Ray took all my energy and those damn FBI agents kept leading me in the wrong direction. But I do have the weather... they didn't stop me from finding that. We'll have partly cloudy skies and highs in the 70's and Wednesday it could reach 90," said Barf.

"But for right now, I'm going to bed. Never again will I try to make a few easy bucks... my nose is killing me."

Carter still firm on human rights

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter, in a strong public defense of his human rights campaign, said Monday he had "no second thoughts" about the policy and if the Soviets interpret it as intrusion into their affairs, "So be it."

At his news conference Carter was asked about the personal attacks on him appearing in the government-controlled Soviet press.

He described the Soviet attacks as a "misplaced theme" and said the negotiations between the United States and the Soviet Union on disarmament questions are proceeding well despite the attacks.

He said it appeared that "I'm kind of a scapegoat" but, "I have no second thoughts or hesitation." He said his policy was not directed against the Soviet Union and it did not consist of interference in the internal affairs of the Soviet Union.

"We are taking the position that human beings ought to be well-treated," he said. "It's the right thing to do."

"If it results in self-criticism of our own country, so be it. If the Soviet Union interprets it as an intrusion in their affairs, so be it."

He said the general reaction to the campaign was that each country wanted to get its "own house in order" and he said "the scrutiny is constructive."

Asked about the specific case of Soviet computer programmer Anatoli Shcharansky, a Jewish dissident charged with treason, Carter said he had inquired "very deeply" to see if the man had any relationship with the State Department or CIA. "The answer is no," Carter said. "He had no relationship to our knowledge."

Carter said he had no plans to meet with Shcharansky's wife, who is in the United States, but he had moved on his own to determine whether the U.S. intelligence community had any dealings with the arrested man.

Soviets 'to object' to rights criticism

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union's chief delegate to this week's Belgrade meeting on European security said in an interview Monday the Soviets will "firmly object" to any attempts by the West to judge other nations on human rights.

Soviet Ambassador Yury Vorontsov, who will represent the U.S.S.R. at the Belgrade meeting opening Wednesday, said the meeting is intended to deal with "purely organizational matters" leading up to a full-dress meeting this autumn.

"To agree to the way in which reactionary forces in the U.S.A. and in some West European countries are pushing the Belgrade meeting would mean to make a step backward from the already achieved level of cooperation."

"Some countries of the West are attempting to turn the Belgrade forum into a meeting for some countries to judge others and examine how these or other states implement individual points or subpoints taken out of context of the Helsinki accords," Vorontsov said.

Although he did not single out human rights specifically, Vorontsov's remarks left no doubt that he was referring to increased Soviet fears that Belgrade will turn into a bitter wrangle over failures of the Soviet-bloc countries to live up to the Helsinki final act's guarantees of basic individual rights.

"The Soviet Union will firmly object to the Belgrade meeting being used for undermining the goals which the participants in the European conference had set themselves in Helsinki," Vorontsov said.

Diplomats wary of polemics

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (UPI) — Western diplomats said Monday they do not intend to turn the first stage of the Belgrade conference on European security into a showdown with the Soviet Union on human rights, but some conflict appears inevitable.

The 35-nation meeting, which begins Wednesday, will review the successes and failures of the 1975 Helsinki accords.

"We will be looking for practical results rather than polemics, at least in the preparatory session," an American diplomat said. "But the first stage will be mainly about what goes on the agenda — and there may be plenty of disagreement over that."

Western diplomats in both Moscow and Belgrade said they expect the Soviets to push for a ground rule forbidding any criticism of individual countries, and that would almost certainly be opposed by the West.

"There will be conflicts, but they will be diplomatic conflicts, and all behind closed doors," a Swedish envoy predicted. "If there are any fireworks, they probably won't come until the full conference meets in the Fall."

American diplomats played down the effect of the Soviets' bitter attack on President Carter last week for his human rights campaign. A Russian commentary warned that if Belgrade turns into name calling, the Soviet Union will hit back with charges against West European countries.

Most delegations, including a seven-member U.S. team led by veteran Ambassador Albert W. Sherer Jr., had arrived by Monday, while workmen were still painting the 35 flagpoles and moving furniture at the giant new Sava conference center.

CWA protests centralization

By JEFF CHRISTIAN
Staff Writer

Northwestern Bell and the Communication Workers of America's local union are preparing to confront each other over Bell's plans to centralize all of its operator services for Iowa in Des Moines.

A union official here said the union's plan right now consists of an effort to make the public aware of Bell's plans. More drastic actions are not yet planned.

Eugene Porter, president of local 7116 CWA, said in an interview Monday, the major effects of Bell's plan will be that Iowa City will lose an estimated $900,000 a year in income and that many of the operators will lose their jobs. He also said he thought the switch to a centralized operator system will not improve customer service, but only depersonalize what is a personalized service in Iowa City and other small Iowa towns, where operators know many of the people.

The centralization will begin on Sept. 3, when all directory assistance operators will be located in Des Moines. The rest of the transition will occur sometime in the next four

The local union of Communication Workers of America are planning to confront Northwestern Bell as a result of Bell's plans to centralize its operator services in Des Moines. This centralization will cause a $900,000 decline in income for Iowa City as well as leaving many operators without jobs.

Bell's Iowa City manager Mike Johnson said the move will improve directory assistance services because a larger staff in Des Moines will be able to handle rush hours better. Iowa City currently has 12 directory assistance operators; Bell's Des Moines staff has more than a hundred.

He did not deny that Iowa City will lose income, but said Bell is doing everything it can to retrain and relocate the affected employees.

The problem is that most of the operators' incomes represent secondary incomes for their families. When their jobs move to Des Moines, Porter said, they will not be able to follow them. Bell, Johnson said, is doing everything it can to help these people.

"There will be some hardships for some people," Johnson said. "We're attempting to minimize those kinds of things, but we can't tell if we'll be 100 per cent successful."

All of the 12 Iowa City directory assistance operators have been trained to handle long distance calls and will be staying in Iowa City, at least until the final centralization in a few years. Bell also is not replacing full-time operators when they retire or quit, but is hiring temporary help that understands their positions will end in a few years. In this way Bell hopes to decrease the number of affected operators in Iowa City to around 70 by the time the final centralization occurs, Johnson said.

Johnson said he does not imagine phone bills increasing or service degenerating because of Bell's plan. He said the change is being made for "basically financial reasons," and that Bell hopes to be able to not have to raise service rates.

Meanwhile Porter said this is the communication workers' bargaining year and, for the first time, the union is stressing job security in its negotiations with Bell.

Ray transfer undecided

10 months in such isolation gave him what he called "stir bugs."

"Enforced idleness is a very real form of punishment," the judge agreed.

Ray subsequently was housed in a medium-security section with the general prison population at Brushy, a fortress-like facility bounded by cliffs of the Cumberland Mountains and Highway 60.

Blanton said the search for Ray has cost some $178,000 in state funds "and that doesn't even include court or pre-trial costs."

In Washington, Prisons Director Norman Carlson said the request would be taken under consideration.

"We have no idea where we would put him," Carlson said. But he noted there are about 200 state convicts in federal prisons, most of them "management problems."

King was killed by a sniper's bullet on the balcony of the Lorraine Motel in Memphis April 4, 1968. Two months later Ray was arrested at Heathrow Airport in London.

Ray opened his trial March 10, 1969, by pleading guilty and was immediately sentenced to 99 years. Three days afterward he began protesting he was the unwitting tool of a conspiracy — a claim rejected by appeals courts and refused consideration by the Supreme Court.

Ray and six other convicts went over the wall at Brushy Mountain late Friday and only one of them — Douglas Shelton — was still at large. Bloodhounds lost his trail Monday.

Ray and two companions — Shelton and cellmate Earl Hill Jr. — had been free about 50 hours when bloodhounds caught their trail Sunday night near a strip mine eight miles northeast of the prison.

They ran in different directions. The dogs quickly ferreted Hill out of a thicket and then fresh bloodhounds — 14-month-old sisters named Sandy and Little Red — were put on Ray's trail.

For three hours they raced westward at full bay, along and across the ankle-deep New River, up and down mountains, at times so close to their quarry the handlers could hear him crashing through the underbrush ahead.

Finally, at 2 a.m., Sandy dragged her handler, guard Sammy Joe Chapman, up to a pile of leaves.

"James, are you all right?" Chapman asked. "I'm okay," the sweat-soaked Ray replied.

Seven hours later the sixth fugitive, Donald Ray Caylor, was arrested in Oak Ridge. He was the only man to make it out of the mountains.

"You might get over the wall," said Warden Lane, "but then you still have another huge wall to get over" — the mountain wilderness that rings the prison. Ray managed to cover only 10 miles after his escape Friday, although he had exercised vigorously to build himself up for the attempt.

Blanton said that from reading a book about Ray and watching an old television interview, he learned that Ray liked to go down railroad tracks or follow a stream. He said he suggested to officials they follow that lead. "Sure enough, Ray was trying to find the one and only railroad and stream in the area."

Gov. Ray remains silent about choices for regents

Iowa Gov. Robert Ray has not yet publicly announced his choices for the three positions on the state Board of Regents slated to open July 1.

The six-year terms of regents

Indian art acclaimed a success

The recent stop in Iowa City by the touring exhibit, "Indian Images," was one of the most successful of that tour, said Ashley Walker, coordinator of the Iowa City-Johnson County Arts Council.

The mobile van, parked at the downtown Blackhawk mini-park from last Thursday through Sunday, was a showing of contemporary Indian art.

The exhibit drew over 3,000 viewers, more than any other stop that did not have a coinciding fair.

Walker said the exhibit collected more than $273 in contributions from patrons of the exhibit, a total exceeding any amount collected in one place. The money will be used to defray costs of bringing the exhibit to Iowa City.

The show was the result of a collaborative effort by several Iowa City organizations. In addition to the Iowa City-Johnson County Arts Council, other sponsors were the City of Iowa City, the Downtown Merchants Association, the UI Art Museum and Special Support Services.

Walker said she had not heard one negative comment about the exhibit, adding, "It couldn't have been more successful."

The exhibit will be on display this weekend in Burlington for Steamboat Days and will travel to Red Oak before leaving Iowa.

Steve Zumbach, John Baldrige and Margaret Collison expire in July.

Dave Oman, press secretary for Ray, said Monday that the narrowing down of names and contacting of potential candidates was still in process.

Although Oman refused to divulge whether Ray has decided on any of the three nominees, the regents whose terms expire believe there may be three new faces on the nine-member board.

Zumbach told The Daily Iowan that he has withdrawn his name from consideration for reappointment because he is joining a Des Moines law firm. Both regents Baldrige and Collison said they believe Ray will not renominate them in order to bring some new personnel to the board.

Regents are appointed for six-year terms with three members' terms expiring every other year. Two years ago Ray renominated and the Senate confirmed the three regents whose terms expired then.

Ray has generally appointed board members in the spring prior to the July expiration date, but he failed to nominate anyone during the past legislative session.

Instead, the governor will use a mechanism in the Iowa Code to fill vacancies on the board during the legislative interim. The three new regents would then be subject to Senate confirmation in January when the legislature convenes.

5 candidates for FBI director given to President

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Five persons, including William Lucas, one of the nation's highest elected black law enforcement officials, were recommended Monday to President Carter for the job as next director of the FBI.

Carter said they were "superbly qualified" and "chances are" he will name one of them to succeed Clarence Kelley. He asked Attorney General Griffin Bell to make "deeper background checks," and said both he and Bell will interview them.

The five are:
— Lucas, 49, Wayne County (Detroit) sheriff and former FBI agent.

— John J. Irwin Jr., 47, Massachusetts superior court justice.

— John K. Van de Kamp, 41, Los Angeles County district attorney.

— Neil J. Welch, 50, career FBI agent and special agent-in-charge at Philadelphia since 1975.

— Harlington A. Wood Jr., 57, of Springfield, Ill., U.S. circuit judge.

They were named by a committee appointed by Carter Feb. 17 to recommend a successor to Kelley, who has said he will retire at the end of the year.

Irving Shapiro, DuPont chairman and committee head, told Carter in the Oval Office the panel considered 235 persons and selected 60 persons for interviews. He said 12 declined and the panel interviewed the other 48.

Lucas got a law degree at Fordham while a Harlem policeman and was recruited by Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy as a special assistant. He became one of the few black FBI agents in 1964.

Irwin was chief of the Massachusetts Crime Bureau for six years until 1976 when he became a superior court justice. He was an assistant district attorney and chief trial lawyer for Middlesex County, Mass., 1959-70.

Van de Kamp became district attorney in 1975 and was a federal public defender in Los Angeles 1971-75. A bachelor, he ran for Congress on the Democratic ticket in 1969 and was staff director of Jesse Unruh's 1970 gubernatorial campaign.

Welch, a native of St. Paul, Minn., a law graduate, joined the FBI in 1951.

Wood was administrative assistant to Deputy Attorney General Richard Kleindienst 1970-72, and acting head of the Justice Department's civil division 1972-73. He personally handled the department's negotiations of the Indian occupation of Alcatraz and Wounded Knee, S.D. He was U.S. district judge for Southern Illinois 1973-76 and then was nominated circuit judge.

Challengers attack UMW president

United Press International

Incumbent Arnold Miller, who ousted W.A. "Tony" Boyle as United Mine Workers president in 1972, was portrayed as stubborn, egotistical and elusive by his opponents Monday in the final hours of a bitter, three-way race for the union's top office.

When the union's 277,000 members cast their ballots today, Miller, 54, will be forced to answer for the turmoil and dissension that has characterized the union under his leadership.

The union, a key component in President Carter's new energy policy, has been weakened by numerous wildcat strikes over the past two years and industry experts fear it may not survive to enjoy the coal boom of the 1980s.

Miller, seeking his second term, has been challenged by union Secretary-Treasurer Harry Patrick and Lee Roy Patterson, who serves on the union executive board and represents Boyle's old supporters.

All three candidates made a strenuous, last-minute campaign effort Monday. Miller held rallies in West Virginia, Patrick stumped through eastern Ohio and West Virginia's northern panhandle and Patterson went home to Kentucky.

Patrick, 47, who was a Miller ally until earlier this year, said in a speech in Clarington, Ohio, that Miller had alienated many union employees and campaign workers.

"He's the most egotistical person I have ever tried to deal with," Patrick said. "He won't take advice. Everybody's deserted him. You can't deal with the man."

Patterson, 42, meanwhile portrayed Miller as "the ghost candidate," because he has done little campaigning and refused to face his opponents several debates.

Miller nonetheless was confident of victory, predicting he would get 100,000 of an estimated 150,000 votes cast in the election. He even scheduled a victory news conference Wednesday.

Patrick has been forced throughout the campaign to answer for the union's financial operating deficit, and Patterson suffered a popular setback when he accepted an estimated $4,000 contribution from United Steelworkers officials.

Patterson threatens to challenge the outcome if he loses.

Britons told not to interfere in Ugandan execution case

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Uganda warned Britons Monday not to interfere in the case of a British-born businessman who faces execution by firing squad for charges of espionage.

The Nairobi newspaper the Nation said the businessman, Bob Scanlon, may already have been killed, and his body burned — a charge quickly denied by the Ugandan government. The newspaper based its story on an anonymous telephone call from Kampala.

Radio Uganda announced last week that Scanlon, a middle-aged father of three, had been arrested on charges of spying, and if found guilty by a military tribunal would be executed by the end of this week.

The radio said he was being held in a remote part of the East African country.

Diplomatic sources said the espionage charges may stem from an earlier Radio Uganda report that security forces discovered a "communications system" smuggled into the country.

Scanlon previously had dealt in selling sophisticated radio equipment.

A longtime resident of Uganda, he was one of several Britons who in 1975 carried burly Ugandan dictator Idi Amin into an official reception on a sedan chair.

Breaking a three-day silence on the Scanlon affair, Uganda Vice President Mustafa Adrisi warned Britons against trying to meddle in the case, warning, "If found guilty (Scanlon) will be shot and there will be no case about it."

Adrisi told a public rally, "I am directing the British again that no one should telephone me and spoil my sleep about one who is arrested for breaking the laws.

"I have seen that if there is any slight thing in Uganda, Europeans (Britons) telephone from all over the world, as if they are the ones controlling Uganda. This must stop.

"All people here are under the government and regulations of this country. No one must play with Uganda."

The Nation's banner story said Scanlon was shot last week in a suburb of Kampala, and his body "dumped and burned."

Special interests mutilate energy plan

Last week President Carter's energy proposal took its first stand against what is sure to be a number of hard attacks from congressional committees. The energy proposal was beaten, watered down and generally dragged through the mud. After the House Ways and Means Committee was finished with it, it was nothing more than a shell with little effective power.

Following traditional party politics the Republicans cut at the proposal because it was a Democratic party project, but they offered very few constructive alternatives to what Carter had proposed. The Democrats bowed to heavy lobbying pressures and sliced away sections of the proposed tax on fuel guzzling cars.

When the bill emerged from the committees it had lost its proposal to boost gasoline taxes a nickel each year fuel consumption failed to meet conservation goals, was delayed in implementing the tax on fuel guzzling cars for a year, and had that tax weakened for 1979 and late year models. Finally, the rebate Carter had proposed for buyers of gas economy cars was killed.

The proposal was a fair one in the beginning, before the committee hearings began. With a few exceptions every special interest group found at least a few points they could agree with. The proposal as it originally stood called on all facets of the American populace, both private and public, to make some sort of sacrifice. At the same time the bill provided special interest groups an incentive to conserve. The bill both gave to and received from almost all Americans.

Unfair advantages for certain groups began to creep into the proposal as soon as the lobbyists began to converge on the members of Congress. What started as an energy program that called upon everyone equally soon took the shape of a big business stepping stone.

An excellent example of this came from the House Ways and Means Committee. Instead of keeping Carter's proposal for a new lid on natural gas prices, the committee decided to substitute a proposal to phase out controls on new onshore gas prices and gradually phase out controls on new offshore gas prices.

It is interesting to note that the proposal to decontrol gas prices, a move that even gas companies have admitted would allow them windfall profits, was submitted by Rep. Robert Krueger, D-Texas. Texas has a special interest in gas price control and with onshore gas supplies depleting in Texas, Krueger's constituents must be especially worried about having control over the new sources offshore.

Perhaps one of the more crucial proposals that was slashed was the gradual increasing tax to correlate with any rise in gas consumption. The proposal was one that would have given everyone a chance to make a concerted effort to slow consumption. Unlike the rising costs of electricity, which go up regardless of conservation, this proposal would have given everyone a small piece of positive reinforcement at the end of each year.

If the U.S. government and people continue to drag their feet in formulating a meaningful energy proposal and if they continue to look for the easiest way out, then it may become too late and everyone will have to live with electrical consumption restrictions, gas rationing and an increased dependence on foreign countries for our fuels. The point at which the oil runs out is not far down the road; it is long past the time when we can allow our representatives in Washington to bow to special interest groups for the benefit of a few. A strict and efficient national energy policy must come out of Washington in the near future or the country will be in severe industrial, economic and social trouble.

ROTC ad draws reader criticism

To the Editor:

We found the recent advertisement for the UI ROTC program (DI, June 6) to be in extremely bad taste. The large ad employed a "wanted poster" format, boasting a $2,000 cash "reward" for qualified student applicants.

We object specifically to the following:

—the ROTC program was not mentioned by name in the ad. ROTC should be out front in its recruiting;

—we consider this a questionable use of government money, considering the size of the ad;

—it appealed only to prospective male recruits, ignoring the fact that women qualify for ROTC;

—considering the history of the Vietnam War, and the role of ROTC in that war, the pun "Wanted: Alive Not Dead" is particularly offensive.

We encourage the DI to exercise higher standards in accepting advertisements for their pages.

Councilor praises

Dilley leadership

To the Editor:

Was Benita Dilley really admitting her election to the CAC presidency to be invalid after she had recently stated that it wasn't? I doubt it. It seems far more likely to me that she was disillusioned and disappointed at the rumors being circulated among the councilors that she and King had both known that he was no longer registered.

And by whom were those rumors (and they are nothing more) circulated? Several of the councilors were contacted by none other than the gentleman who was quoted in Monday's edition as saying he would "seriously consider" taking the position himself. This same individual tried very hard to find a running mate for April's election, but "surprisingly" couldn't find one. Dilley at least found an individual, who she believed to be a registered student, who was willing to run with her...

Although it may be somewhat extraneous to the actual situation, it also seems a bit strange that the only three persons quoted in Monday's article were Greg Schmidt, Bob Kohl and (Murray) Johannsen — Schmidt and Kohl, who ran unsuccessfully against Dilley in last year's election and Johannsen, the aforementioned "seriously considering" individual.

There are those of us who have the utmost faith and confidence in the two real leaders in CAC and the two best executives that the entirety of student government has ever had, Benita Dilley and Geoff King. Unfortunately, we were not contacted for a statement. Our statement will be embodied, however, in our votes for the

Subliminal imbeds no laughing matter

To the Editor:
Re: Steve Tracy's column, "Anything Your (subliminal) Mind Desires, DI, June 6."

As the original observers of Budweiser's subliminal imbeds, we have noted occasional attempts in the DI to come to terms with the issue of subliminal advertising. Whereas in the past these attempts have been marked by skepticism mixed with uneasy hilarity the latest is, relatively speaking, factually substantive. However, as for its suggestion that the issue began as a rumor, "started by the local Budweiser distributors, wanting the reader to take a closer look at their advertising dollars," we are quite baffled as to its tone and meaning. We have no connections with Budweiser, a fact that could have been easily verified, and the alternate possibility of humor in the imputation is further evidence of the DI's essential shallowness.

Furthermore, the repeated observations of DI staff persons, in this and preceding articles, about the pleasures of detecting the imbeds is disturbingly, unspeakably banal, because it reveals an unaccountable pleasure in observing one's own victimization. Is the quivering consciousness, like the prison camp inmate, to align itself with institutional assailants, selling cheap its freedom and integrity for gratuitous reward — mere candybars and chewing gum for "blind mouths?"

The persistently playful tone of the article is socially injurious, because it militates against authentic response to the problem. Its feeble irony inadvertently admits an absence of any commitment to remedy. What allows Tracy to follow his judgment, "You are actually at the mercy of the advertisers," with the fatuous "But it can be fun..."

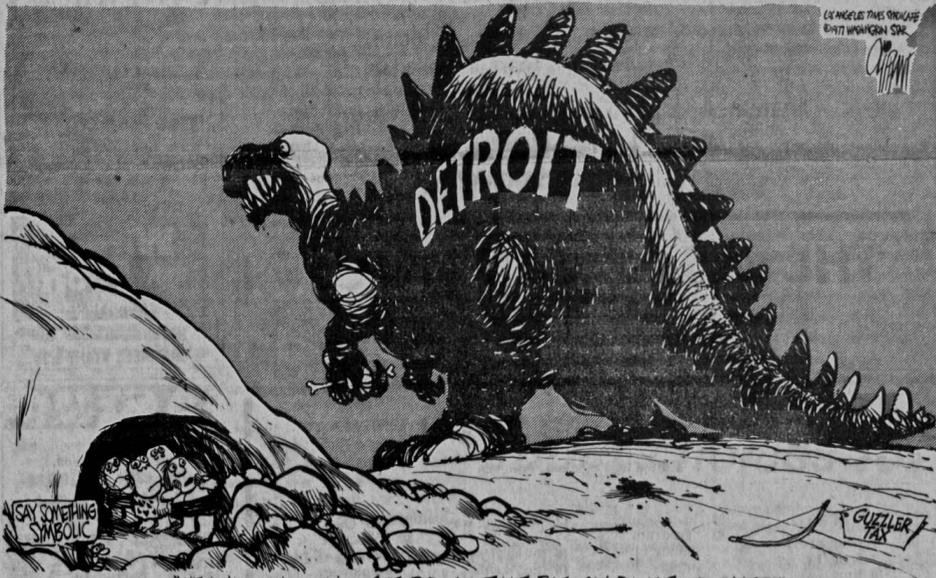

Why has the DI failed in its journalistic responsibility to reprint the portion of the ad in question, thereby educating many readers who may have been baffled or skeptical about the subsequent discussion? This would be standard journalistic practice. Does the DI fear that a loss of advertising revenues may be the price of an ethically vigilant advertising policy?

In the manifest absence of a commitment on the part of the DI to confront and ameliorate the problem, it becomes more urgent that all campus and community groups express their concern. We call upon the student government and its members, IowaPIRG, RSB, community women's groups and religious organizations, even, perhaps, the business department, to recognize tv interests and make them known.

David and Nancy Spector-Brottman
1121 E. Burlington

Some clarification is in order. The Daily Iowan does not maintain a playful attitude about subliminal advertising; rather, it is the fixation of persons who insist on finding subconscious persuasion that we find amusing. It is toward that fixation that we direct humor. Also, the DI did reprint the ad in question in the May 5th edition.

Urges killer's revelations

James Earl Ray, the convicted assassin of the 1960s civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr., has been recaptured in a Tennessee forest near the prison from which he escaped. Found in that forest may be the only answers to the lingering questions surrounding King's assassination.

Ray pleaded guilty March 10, 1969 and was sentenced to 99 years in prison for King's murder. Ray recanted his plea immediately after sentencing and spent seven years appealing to the Supreme Court. Ray lost his appeal and has been trying to get authorities to listen to his claims of having been part of a conspiracy.

There are stories that Ray had a confederate named Raoul, a French Canadian who allegedly jumped into a Ford Mustang near the boarding house across the street from King's hotel after the shooting. This version of the story has the man named Raoul abandoning the car after eight blocks and a man later identified as Ray driving the car alone to Atlanta.

Ray has claimed that he was persuaded by his lawyer, Percy Foreman, to make a deal and plead guilty. Generally, prosecutors don't make deals unless the defendants tell all and agree to testify against others. But Ray said nothing and pleaded guilty in front of Judge Preston Battle. The day after his sentencing Ray wrote Battle that his attorney had been motivated only by money to take his case, indicating Ray's dissatisfaction with his attorney and that he may have been influenced to enter the plea.

Ray later claimed that on the eve of his trial, Foreman promised to undercut Ray's position with the jury if he insisted on a trial. Ray said Foreman promised to tell the jury he felt his client was guilty. This further indicates that Ray felt compelled to plead as he did and that his attorney wanted to finish the case quickly.

Because of Ray's guilty plea he has never been tried before a jury. Possible testimonies have never been tested under cross examination. By pleading guilty Ray denied the public a thorough investigation of the assassination of a controversial public figure — a public figure who had gained through his work many enemies.

If polls can be believed, 69 per cent of the American public still thinks Ray was not alone in killing King. This opinion is fueled by unanswered questions that obscure the facts of the assassination.

For example, Ray's heavy spending before and after the murder has never been explained. Where did the money come from? Ray was caught under an alias in England. How did he obtain the identification that he used to travel so widely?

Other issues complicate Ray's case: No finger prints were found in the room he supposedly rented from a landlady who cannot positively identify him as her tenant; no finger prints were discovered on or in the car that Ray allegedly drove to Atlanta; no ballistics tests were taken of the supposed murder weapon; no eyewitnesses claim they saw Ray shoot King.

Additionally, eight days after a congressional committee announced it would investigate the murder, a fire burned the Memphis police files, destroying any possible evidence the police might have had on record. It is these unanswered questions and many others that have never been brought under close public scrutiny.

Nearly ten years have passed since Ray pleaded guilty, and for all purposes closed the case of who shot King. Should something happen to Ray while in prison, the American public may lose its only chance to discover what really happened at the Lorraine Motel in Memphis, April 4, 1968.

Should Ray die without full disclosure of the information connecting him to King's assassination, another alleged assassin will have been prevented from telling his story.

Ray is now 49-years-old and will be living in the harsh environment of prison. Critics of a 1973 court ruling that allowed Ray to mingle with the general prison population want him placed in 24-hour solitary imprisonment, further tucking him away from the public's sight.

Because of the irregular handling of Rays' case by his lawyer and because of the unanswered questions that make unclear Rays' actual innocence or guilt, Ray should not be hidden in a government prison without first revealing what he knows about the assassination of King.

Prudence better than deficit ban

WASHINGTON (KFS) — The Equal Rights Amendment isn't the only change in the Constitution trying to wriggle its way through the ratification process. There is another one. This amendment would make it unconstitutional for Congress to run a budget deficit.

This no-deficit spending amendment, the original idea for which is credited to Maryland Democratic State Senator James Clark, has now been approved by the legislatures of 19 states. They're in the South and West for the most part, but the

nicholas von hoffman

National Taxpayers Union, which is vigorously pushing this amendment, says that states like Pennsylvania and Indiana have also signed up.

Since the amendment hasn't passed the federal legislature — hearings haven't even been held on it — the only way the states can get it passed, unless Congress changes its mind, is to call a Constitutional Convention. To do that requires a demand for one by two-thirds (34) of the states and that may be forthcoming. The anti-deficit spending winds are blowing so that we may have our first Con-Con since George Washington's. In fact, if a few more states pass the resolution asking for one, the mere excitement of invoking this never-before-used section of our Constitution probably will stampede the others into supporting the idea.

Only good can come from a Constitutional Convention called to consider a no-deficit spending amendment. The debates, arguments and controversies, much of which is sure to be televised, should stimulate millions of us to learn things about fiscal and monetary policy and hone our ignorant passions into informed convictions.

There are several proposed workings for this amendment, but all of them recognize that deficit spending must be permitted in time of war and provision made for lifting the prohibition during times of national emergency. With defense and foreign policies in the hands of such inveterate bellicists as Sen. Scoop Jackson, you can be sure that when it comes to a choice between forgoing a new weapon, actually taxing the populace for the cost, or going into deficit we will continue to pile up deficits.

As a practical matter it would be next to impossible to write an amendment of this sort that politicians of only middling ingenuity couldn't get around. In fact, even now the publicized deficit — i.e., the official gap between what's taken in taxes and what's spent — isn't the only deficit piled up by the federal government, but only the most visible one. Unseen billions of debt are contracted by the government in a less-publicized category called the off-budget deficit.

Moreover, in New York State, whose constitution has provisions designed to make deficits very difficult, Nelson Rockefeller, during his four terms as governor, showed that a determined man, with bankruptcy and ruin on his mind, can defeat the letter and spirit of any law. Through strange leasing arrangements, weird special purpose commissions and the issuance of voodoo instruments of debt, the Rock got around all the legal impediments placed in the way of maniacal politicians bent on destroying the full faith and credit of the hard-working people of the state of New York. In addition, the involuted and convoluted schemes necessary to make a deficit look like something else were so successful, there is doubt in some quarters that anybody knows how much the real debt is.

So the danger exists that an amendment like this won't prevent deficit spending but merely destroy the bookkeeping to such an extent that it will make chaos out of our public finances.

More to the point might be an amendment that requires the government to cover any deficits it may contract by borrowing instead of printing money. Deficits themselves are not per se inflationary. They are an occasion for inflation if the government decides to put more and more money in circulation to cover them.

If the government can't print money to cover its debts, it must borrow. From whom? From us, and if we'd rather spend our money on something else, then the government must kick up the interest rates on its borrowing until they are so attractive we'll forego the new Chevy for the savings bond paying 13 per cent each year.

Preventing the government from printing money to pay for deficits won't solve our problems. It will make our choices easier to see. However, it will get us away from kidding ourselves into thinking we can have both the new Chevy and the government expenditures. It can't make smart choices for us but it can force us to make choices within our means.

The no-deficit amendment is near being a fiscal version of the Volstead Act, the prohibition amendment. This one, like its predecessor, would be a noble experiment, but in the last analysis it seeks to enact a rule of law as a substitute for the prudence and wisdom statesmen lack.

Holland tense on eve of burials

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (UPI) — Tension gripped Holland's South Moluccan communities Monday on the eve of funerals for six terrorists slain by troops who stormed a hijacked train and freed 49 hostages held for almost three weeks.

The six, including a 22-year-old woman dental assistant and 24-year-old Max Papilaya, the provincial tax office worker who led the nine-member band, will be buried Tuesday in Assen, only miles from the scene of the 19-day siege.

Their coffins were placed in the South Moluccan Evangelic Church in Assen, where religious services were scheduled Monday night and Tuesday morning.

Two of the surviving train terrorists and four South Moluccan gunmen captured when other troops assaulted Bovensmilde elementary school will appear before a public prosecutor Wednesday to be formally charged with kidnaping and perhaps murder.

Many freed hostages described their captors as "reasonable" persons who apparently did not intend to harm them.

THE PEOPLE SHOUTED LONG MAY HE LIVE

Part 101
"No?" Yak asked. "I can and I will, all it'd take is one word to those guards outside..." he threatened, pointing at the door.
"I'll come with you." Umni said, crestfallen.
"All right, I'll let you do that. But your delegation has to remain under guard - for its own safety - and you had better behave."

The two stared at each other for a moment, trying each other on for size. Then Umni Kowtow rose, bowed formally and meekly trailed Yak out of the room.

As Mik flashed past the doorways of the executive offices cum detention centers he received brisk salutes from the guards in front of each. But suddenly he came upon a door where the two guards were too busy. The workers inside, a portion of those unruly, underdisciplined souls who had participated in the original 30-ton line party, distraught at having not been released in time to go to their suppers and families, had opened the door and made a rush to get past the two unplussed guards outside.

"Get back in there, get back!" There was a shouting match going on, with not enough ground gained by either side for fists to attain momentum enough to make punching worthwhile. One of the guards noticed Mik sailing past.

"Hey, Mik! Help!" he called to him.

Mik flew into the affray, literally climbing over the two guards in his eagerness to pummel the offending workers. At last here was a situation where both the allegiances to be observed and actions to be taken were clearly defined. The various resentments Mik had been feeling ever since his day went bad now congealed into one glowing hatred against the workers storming the door. He hung on the shoulder of one of the guards with one hand for a moment and punched an exposed forehead in front of him, but slipped down again and rolled onto the floor.

He heard footsteps behind him and turned to see the young Chollima Enforcer Phred running along. "Here, Phred!" he yelled, "give me a hand..."

The workers made a tremendous surge while Mik was so occupied and overcame the two guards. Wildly they began spilling into the hallway. Mik, caught off guard, thought he was about to be trampled. "Help!" he yelled, slithering across the floor, "help!"
But he hadn't counted on Phred, who leapt over him, feet and fists punching like pistons. Mik rolled over and watched the young fury go to work. The workers dissolved in front of him like meringue topping in a high wind.

New York Mets pitcher Tom Seaver quietly contemplates his future after the Mets announced that a deal is being made with the Cincinnati Reds to satisfy Seaver's wish to be traded.

Seaver going...going...

ATLANTA (UPI) — Tom Seaver is going... going... but whether or not he is gone — to the Cincinnati Reds — in the next 48 hours depends upon him.

The New York Mets' 32-year-old pitching ace already has agreed to a deal which would send him to the Reds. He did that over the weekend after Mets' Board Chairman M. Donald Grant informed him a trade with the Reds was in the works.

The Mets did not tell Seaver which Cincinnati players were involved. But, Rawley Eastwick, the Reds' righthanded reliever who was "Fireman of the Year" last season in the National League, is known to be one of the players the Reds have offered.

Eastwick had an 11-5 won-lost record, 26 saves and a 2.08 earned run average last season while helping the Reds win the world championship. So far this year he's 2-2 with seven saves and a 2.93 ERA. Eastwick has not signed with the Reds this year and has said he would play out his option if his salary demands were not met.

Utility infielder Doug Flynn also has been talked about and the Mets may also receive one of the Reds' farmhands, possibly first baseman outfielder Dave Revering, now with Indianapolis of the American Association.

It was reported earlier Monday that Seaver would be traded to Cincinnati unless the star right hander, a three time Cy Young Award winner, stops the trade by agreeing to stay with the Mets at his present $225,000 a year salary. The trade deadline is Wednesday midnight.

However, a Mets' spokesman said here Monday that the Seaver-to-Cincinnati trade "is still only in the talking stage."

"We are still talking to other clubs, too," said Mets' Public Relations Director Arthur Richman. "Nothing is finalized yet. Nothing definite. We may have something to report later, but nothing at the moment."

Seaver, who gave up only five hits Sunday while beating Houston, 3-1, for his seventh victory in 10 decisions, arrived here Sunday evening with the Mets, who opened a three game series against the Atlanta Braves Monday night.

"There's more in this thing than dollars," he said. "I only know I cannot be happy playing for M. Donald Grant. I can't go into the whole history of this thing, but I just can't be happy playing for him. "Could I be happy playing in Cincinnati? Well, things haven't gotten that far yet. Whether or not I'm traded depends on the Mets. I've made my decision. It's up to the Mets."

As for the report that any deal hinges on Seaver's decision, the pitcher said, "that's just rhetoric. It's really up to the Mets."

After Sunday's game in Houston, he told reporters, "Please leave me alone. I don't feel well."

Grant confirmed Sunday that a deal was being discussed but emphasized that the Mets would rather not trade Seaver.

Finley still looking to shake up A's

OAKLAND (UPI) — With only a couple of days left before the major league trading deadline, look for Charlie Finley to shake up his Oakland A's.

Finley was in town during the weekend for a first-hand look at his club and before he left he said he was working "on half a dozen deals."

"Maybe none of them will come off," he said, "but we are going to be trying to do something. I'm convinced we have a chance to win the division and I'm concentrating on getting us players who could help."

That would mean Finley thinks there are some players on the current roster who are not helping.

"You said that," he replied when it was suggested to him, "but I think you are on the right track. I know from personal experience that it takes 25 men to win and if you have a few players around who are not contributing, then it's time to send them somewhere."

Connors, Evert top Wimbledon list

WIMBLEDON (UPI) — Jimmy Connors, who has not played a competitive match for five weeks, was made top seed Monday for the Wimbledon Championships which start celebrating their centennial June 20.

most of this year's major tournaments to play team tennis, was seeded No. 2 and will meet Connors — if all goes according to the All-England Club's plan — in the men's final July 2.

Chris Evert, the other defending singles champion, was installed as the women's top seed to meet Martina Navratilova in the women's final which she has won twice in the past three years.

British bookmakers installed Connors as the 2-1 favorite and were even more convinced that Evert would retain her crown, quoting 4-5 odds on her achieving the feat.

"I haven't played competitively since the WCT finals in Dallas," said Connors, who will be bidding to add the Wimbledon title to his WCT triumph for the first two legs of the modern grand slam.

"But I've been keeping in good shape and I have played well over the last year. So has Borg and I guess it was really between us two."

There are no surprises in the men's seeds. Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, winner of the French Open, is No. 3 and Roscoe Tanner, whose thunderbolt serving dismissed Connors in the quarter-finals here last year, is No. 4. Brian Gottfried, who has won 54 of his last 65 matches to top the current Grand Prix standings, is No. 5 and Ilie Nastase No. 6.

Nastase, though, wasn't interested in learning his seeding. "I am not interested unless I am No. 1 or 2," he said.

Paul Ramirez of Mexico was seeded seventh, followed by Americans Vitas Gerulaitis and Dick Stockton, Adriano Panatta of Italy, Stan Smith of the U.S., Wojtek Fibak of Poland, Phil Dent of Australia, Mark Cox of Britain, Bob Lutz of the U.S., and Harold Solomon of the U.S.

Virginia Wade of Britain was installed the no. 3 seed among the women, and she was followed by compatriot Sue Barker, Billie Jean King and Rosie Casals of the U.S.

'Rozelle Rule' tops football talks

NEW YORK (UPI) — The touchy subject of compensation for clubs who had players exercise their options and sign with other teams will be the major topic of discussion Tuesday when National Football League owners open their annual spring meetings here.

The threat of player lawsuits prompted the NFL to declare a two-year moratorium on option compensation in 1974 and 1975. Several clubs had stars play out their options and sign with other teams and they received no compensation when the "Rozelle Rule," which allowed Commissioner Pete Rozelle to determine compensation, was suspended.

Players such as Larry Csonka, Jim Kiick and Paul Warfield of Miami and John Riggins of the New York Jets abandoned their clubs after playing out the required option year at a reduced salary and signed to play elsewhere. None of the clubs received anything for losing their players.

Among the other topics for discussion will be sites for the January, 1979, Super Bowl and Pro Bowl and rules proposals on the legality of the head slap used by defensive linemen.

Seven cities, including all five which have served as hosts in the past, are bidding for Super Bowl XIII, which will be played on Jan. 21, 1979. The cities bidding are Dallas (Cotton Bowl), Houston (Rice Stadium), Los Angeles (Coliseum), Miami (Orange Bowl), New Orleans (Superdome), Pasadena, Calif., (Rose Bowl) and Seattle (Kingdome).

The next Super Bowl will be played in the Superdome in New Orleans on Jan. 15 beginning at 6 p.m. EST, the latest start ever.

Bartow moves to Alabama

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Gene Bartow, head basketball coach of the UCLA Bruins for two seasons, has been hired to build a basketball program at the University of Alabama in Birmingham, UAB President Dr. S. Richardson Hill Jr. announced Monday.

Hill said "Gene will serve as Athletic Director and head coach of the UAB basketball team we hope to field during the 1978-79 season." The school currently has no athletic program.

Bartow has completed two seasons at UCLA, compiling a record of 28 wins and four losses in 1975-76 and 24 wins and five losses in 1976-77. His UCLA team won the Pacific Eight title both years.

Hill said Bartow "is one of the great coaches and leaders of young people in the country today, and we have confidence he will continue his outstanding leadership at UAB."

Hill said Bartow was not in Birmingham. The announcement had been scheduled for a news conference Tuesday morning but an embargo on it was broken late Monday.

Hawkeye Soccer loses 3-1

The Hawkeye Soccer Club opened its summer season on the short end of a 3-1 score against Waterloo last Sunday. Player-coach Peter Gross scored the only goal for the Hawkeyes, and added that the team played poorly because of the long layoff between seasons. New players are invited to tryout at practices which are held Wednesday and Friday from 5 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. at the Recreation Center soccer field.

USC golfer retains title

HAMILTON, N.Y. (UPI) — Despite a struggle on the front side that saw bogies follow birdies on the third through eighth holes, defending NCAA golf champion Scott Simpson of Southern California posted a one over par 73 and a 289 total to edge third round leader Les Mikles of Arizona State by one stroke at Seven Oaks Course.

The University of Houston posted a four round total of 1197 to outdistance defending champion Oklahoma State for the team title.

Gophers top Baylor, 4-3

OMAHA, NEB. (UPI) — Mike Bruss hit a run-scoring double in the 11th inning Monday to give Minnesota a 4-3 victory over Baylor in a College World Series game.

Minnesota, which has lost one game in the double elimination series, will meet the loser of Monday night's Southern Illinois-Arizona State game.

What we can do to change the course of medical history.

The quality of health care is much higher than ever, but the cost is, too. Since 1940, the cost of hospital and doctor care for a routine appendectomy has risen from an Iowa average of $185 to $1,208. If the inflation trend continues, it could easily double in the next few years.

You don't want that either as a patient, premium payer, or payer of social security taxes. Neither do we. So we've done something about it that lets you do something about it.

Ways to use medical services like we've never used them before.

Working with hospitals and doctors has developed a number of programs that can help slow down the rising costs of medical care and still maintain the quality of care.

One program allows patients to be discharged from the hospital sooner to recuperate at home at far less cost.

Another program allows some surgical patients to have laboratory and X-ray tests as outpatients instead of in general service accommodations that cost more money. A third allows certain surgery to be done on an outpatient basis in the hospital or doctor's office to save costly hospital days.

We are also working with doctors' review committees to help make sure you are not getting more care than you need, or less.

And, we're working with planning agencies to help make sure only needed services are available because unnecessary services cost money.

What you can do to help.

We, the hospitals, and the doctors are working hard to make these programs widespread in Iowa. The more you ask for and use these cost-cutting programs, the more available they will become. Remember, the less it costs for your care, the less you'll have to pay in premiums and taxes when you're well.

We're doing our part. If you'll do yours, together we can meet the challenge. We Care.
