Cabbies reduce service in protest

By JAMES P. HARVEY

The transit buses of Iowa City have reduced available service from route to route, saying government-controlled vehicles provide inferior service.

In an interview, Driver Charlie Huseman said the city's transit authority was providing the service to be advantage of the city which are public.

He reported that the Iowa City Transit Authority had scheduled drivers to report to work at 5:30 a.m. The drivers were then told to report to their assigned routes and perform their normal duties.

The drivers were later notified that they were to continue their normal duties but that they would not be required to report to work at the scheduled time of 5:30 a.m.

The drivers were given the option of reporting to work at 5:30 a.m. or of reporting to work at a later time, but they were not required to report to work at any time.

The drivers were also given the option of declining to report to work at any time, but they were not required to decline to report to work at any time.

The Iowa City Transit Authority has received a number of complaints from the drivers regarding the reduced service and the lack of communication.

The agency is investigating the matter and will take appropriate action.

June 19, 1977, was the day the new University of Iowa regents was selected. It was a momentous occasion, as the new regents would be responsible for making important decisions regarding the future of the university.

The regents were selected through a rigorous process that included interviews, presentations, and votes. The most qualified candidates were chosen for the positions, and they were expected to bring new ideas and perspectives to the university.

Once selected, the regents worked together to make decisions on a variety of topics, including budgeting, facilities, and curriculum. Their decisions had a significant impact on the university, and they were held accountable for their actions.

In conclusion, the selection of the new regents was a critical moment in the history of the University of Iowa. The regents went on to make important decisions that shaped the future of the university, and their legacy continues to be felt to this day.

Limericians warm up for a showdown

By BOB BROWN

Staff Writer

For the first time in 11 months, at the City Library and Town Hall in New Bedford, Big John Birckbeek may not have the biggest challenge of his life.

On that same front, where seven years of effort and dedication have led him to the pinnacle of the limerician world, he will face a formidable opponent.

The stakes have never been higher for Birckbeek, who has become the top limerician in the country.

For months, Birckbeek has been preparing for this showdown, working tirelessly to perfect his craft and ensure his victory.

The competition will be fierce, with both participants fully committed to emerging victorious.

It's not just about winning; it's about maintaining respect for the art form and the history it represents.

This showdown promises to be an unforgettable experience, with both limericians showcasing their unique talents and delivering performances that will leave the audience in awe.

Limericians have been engaging in this ancient art form for centuries, each leaving their mark on the world of poetry and entertainment.

As both limericians step into the spotlight, they will be judged not only on their individual skills but also on their ability to collaborate and connect with the audience.

This competition marks a significant milestone in the world of limericus, as it brings together two of the most talented and respected practitioners of the art.

As the night unfolds, witness the clash of titans, as Birckbeek and his opponent battle it out for the title of the greatest limerician of all time.

The audience will be treated to a night of laughter, wit, and the shear power of language, as these two masters of the genre showcase their mastery of the limerick form.

Premature babies have it a lot easier than 10 years ago

Premature babies have it a lot easier than 10 years ago. Twenty years ago, the only way to help a premature baby was to put it on a ventilator and feed it through a tube. Today, doctors have a better understanding of how to care for premature babies, and there are many more intensive care units specializing in neonatal care. As a result, more premature babies are surviving and growing up healthy. This is due to advances in medical technology, such as incubators, warmer beds, and advanced medical equipment. The success rate for premature babies has increased significantly over the past two decades, making it easier for parents to care for their premature babies at home.

Unpredictable at last, J. Geils out of its rut

J. Geils has been unpredictable in the past, but his new album, "The J. Geils Band," is different. The band has turned over a new leaf and is now focusing on more contemporary, rock-oriented music. With this album, the band has returned to its roots and delivered a tighter, more focused sound. The album features a mix of rock, blues, and pop, with some tracks showcasing the band's signature sound. The band's lead vocalist, J. Geils, is still as charismatic as ever, and the band's musicianship is top-notch. Overall, "The J. Geils Band" is a great addition to any music collection and a must-listen for fans of rock and roll.
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Interstate Commerce Commission Tuesday unanimously rejected Sohio and Union Oil Company's transportation rates proposal submitted by the owners of the Alaska pipeline, ordering the oil companies to cut their fees by some 36 per cent.

Women cagers increase height

The U.S. women's basketball team grows a full inch on the for-mer with the victory of Barbara Ruh, a 6'3" center, for the U.S. against New Zealand in NCAA tournament action.

Ms. Ruh averaged 20 points and 10 rebounds per game last season at the University of Kentucky, and is expected to play a key role in the team's bid for a spot in the Olympic Games.

The team, which also includes stars such as Teresa Weatherspoon and Cynthia Cooper, is one of the favorites to win the gold medal in the upcoming Olympic Games.

They will face tough competition from other teams, including Russia, China, and Spain, but with the addition of Ms. Ruh, they are confident in their chances of success.

The team has been training hard, focusing on improving their skills, and the addition of Ms. Ruh will only add to their already impressive roster.

Women cagers increase height

The University of Kentucky women's basketball team has announced that several of their players have experienced significant growth in their height.

The team's average height has increased from 5'9" to 6'0" over the course of the season, with some players reporting gains of up to 3".

The increase in height is attributed to a combination of factors, including proper nutrition, conditioning, and genetic factors.

The team's head coach expressed confidence in his players' ability to adapt to their new heights, stating, "Our players are skilled in every aspect of the game and their height will only add to their advantage."

American Swimmers, Borg advance

The U.S. women's swimming team has made a strong showing in the Olympic trials, with several swimmers advancing to the final team.

Notably, Missy Franklin, a 13-time Olympic medalist, has advanced in both the 100m and 200m backstroke events.

The team has been training hard, focusing on improving their technique and building their endurance.

They will face tough competition from other teams, including Australia and France, but with the addition of Missy Franklin, they are confident in their chances of success.
