Senate votes to fund only 'must' abortions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate voted 56 to 39 Wednesday to allow federal funds to be used for abortions for poor women only when the life of the mother is in danger, when a doctor says it's "medically necessary" or in cases of rape and incest.

That position emerged from nearly six hours of sometimes emotional Senate debate on the abortion issue, which involved many votes and much parliamentary maneuvering.

The Senate language apparently would eliminate most of the 300,000 abortions performed each year for low income women using federal Medicaid funds since most are not done for medical necessity.

But it is more liberal than a version recently passed by the House, which would deny federal funds for abortions under any circumstances.

There still remained a possibility of more parliamentary moves on the abortion issue as the Senate worked on a $60.7 billion appropriation bill for the Departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare to which various proposed abortion amendments were offered.

The Senate language finally adopted says: "None of the funds in this act shall be used to perform abortions except where the life of the mother would be endangered if the fetus were carried to term, or where medically necessary, or for the treatment of rape or incest."

Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., who proposed it, said "where medically necessary" means cases in which a doctor says the mother or child would be endangered if an abortion were not performed. He indicated the doctor could take "psychological" factors into account.

The Brooke language wiped out a more complex definition of circumstances under which abortion funds could be used proposed by the Senate Appropriations Committee. The committee attempted to list specific diseases such as multiple sclerosis and renal disease where exceptions would apply. Brooke said its list left many of the greatest dangers to pregnancy, such as heart disease and therefore the whole subject should be left to the doctors.

Earlier the Senate:

—Rejected 56 to 42 a proposal to remove all restrictions on use of federal funds for abortions for poor women; and —Reversed 65 to 33 a position it took a year ago — and which is part of existing law — that no federal funds be used for abortions except to save the life of the mother.

The debate came as the Supreme Court vacated a federal court injunction in New York had prevented HEW from enforcing existing anti-abortion language, known as the Hyde amendment, adopted by Congress last year.

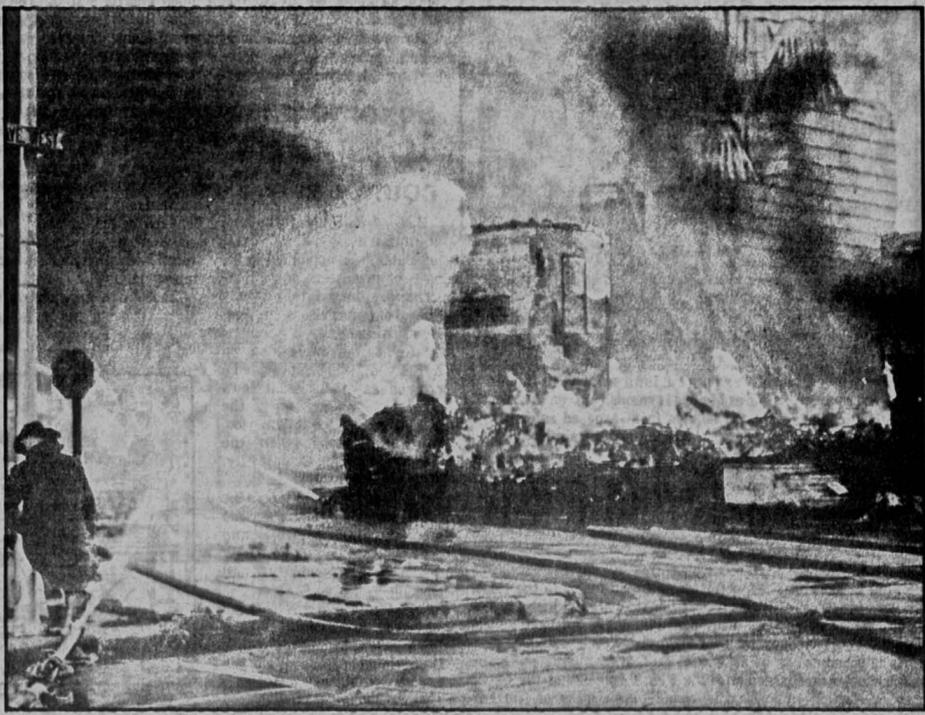

A group of senators led by Bob Packwood, R-Ore., proposed deleting all restrictions on abortion. Packwood argued that the Senate should not impose its "stamp of morality" on the nation.

He said the Supreme Court, in 1973, gave every woman the right to make her own decision whether to have an abortion, and what the restrictions do is deny this right to low-income women.

"The rich will have abortions if they want them and the poor will have babies whether they want them or not," Packwood said.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said: "What we are talking about is the deliberate termination of innocent human life."

He said the Supreme Court may have given a woman the choice over herself, but, "There are two lives involved. She can control her body but I don't think she ought to have the right to terminate the other life for her convenience."

Dawn blaze

Smoke and flames rise from a large fire Wednesday that destroyed a lumber company, an apartment building, a house and a vacant business in Oskaloosa, Iowa. Fire officials said the blaze broke out in the pre-dawn darkness at the Hawkeye Lumber Co., and quickly spread. Firefighters from five other towns joined local firefighters battling the blaze. No injuries were reported.

A penchant for reading: lifestyle accelerates for law student at fifty

By MARY SCHNACK
Staff Writer

There will be no late night cramming for this law student. There will be few meetings at the Deadwood with classmates. And there are no dreams of becoming F. Lee Bailey II.

This UI law student is Betty Stevens. What makes Stevens so remarkable is that she's 50 years old. Stevens has been a secretary in UI President Willard Boyd's office for the past 12 years. Her lifestyle changed when she was accepted into the accelerated law school program, which began May 24. Stevens received her B.A. in English from the University of Dubuque in 1949 and her M.A. in English from the UI in 1976.

"I couldn't have done it (been accepted) if I hadn't already been geared up to study by working on the M.A.," Stevens said. "This would have been overwhelming."

Since 1950, when she moved to Iowa City, Stevens has been a secretary for the UI except for approximately seven years, during which she raised her two sons. She went back for her M.A. in 1973, she said, because she enjoyed her classes so much. She chose law because "it was a combination of things I already knew I liked." Stevens said she liked the office environment better than the teaching situation and "I liked to read — that's what law is all about." However, Stevens said, she's discovering that she has to learn to write like a journalist.

Stevens can't see herself as a trial lawyer or defense attorney but thinks she will probably go into general practice even if it means leaving Iowa City.

"I'll probably be a plus entering the profession later in life, she said, because "people may have a little more confidence in me. It may be misplaced but..."

Now Stevens' life is consumed with law. She gets up between 4 and 5 a.m. and goes to bed at about 9 p.m. or when she "absolutely cannot think anymore." Her first class is not until 10:45 a.m. and the first week of classes she was "completely at sea because I didn't have to get up and go to work at 8."

"I'm basically doing nothing but reading," Stevens said. "Some of my plants have died. I'm almost grateful for the drought because I don't have to mow my lawn so much."

But compared to some of her classmates, she said, her sacrifices aren't much. She marvels at the women and men who are going to law school and have families. "With a family you never know whether you're going to have a certain amount of time that isn't going to be interrupted."

Yet, Stevens is looking forward to the next two years of law school. "I'm enjoying it, it's tremendous. It's not like reading literature; it's so analytical. It's almost a physical effort to read it (law). You have to keep reading and re-reading. You have to read every word in law, in some things."

About 15 per cent of UI law school graduates did not pass the bar exam this year and Stevens said she's always been scared of the bar. "Everyone's a good student and they grade on the curve. And everyone's always prepared so you can't show off in class the way you could before."

Stevens said she may get involved with law student organizations if she has time. The student organizations aren't active in the summer so she hasn't had to decide yet. However, she mentioned that a lot of students play chess and backgammon in the student lounge. "I only play checkers," she said. She may learn even more than she expected.

Supreme Court ends another term after dealing with rape, abortion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court ended its 1976-77 term Wednesday with actions on rape and abortion — typifying the latest crop of issues dealing with capital punishment and personal rights.

As the nine justices closed shop until Oct. 3, they could look back on a term when the usual criminal matters — and questions dealing with religion, obscenity and race — interlaced with an increasing load of cases involving women, children and family matters generally.

Although the principle of capital punishment was sanctioned last term, questions arose as to whether state laws comply with the standards the justices have established or whether an individual has been accorded all the required rights.

As one of their last acts they agreed to hear arguments next fall on Ohio's death penalty law.

They struck down Louisiana's mandatory death sentence for the murder of law enforcement officers, and in a Georgia case Wednesday vetoed the ultimate penalty for rape, regardless of the circumstances, when a life is not taken.

After allowing states to decide without regard to either federal law or the Constitution whether to fund non-therapeutic abortions, the court returned to a Brooklyn federal judge the question of whether a ban on federal funds for abortions should be continued.

A women's rights decision that loosed a deluge of criticism held that employers may exclude pregnant women workers from their disability insurance plans without violating federal civil rights law.

During the term, Richard Nixon's four appointees — Chief Justice Warren Burger and Justices Harry Blackmun, Lewis Powell and William Rehnquist — were in voting control as they have been for some time.

Justices William Brennan and Thurgood Marshall, the remaining members of the more liberal majority under Chief Justice Earl Warren, continued their many dissents from judgments which they said undermined earlier rulings in support of individual rights and full access to federal courts.

Justice John Paul Stevens, appointed in 1975 by Gerald Ford, emerged as a plainspoken individualist who did not hesitate to chide his more senior colleagues. For instance, when the majority was wrestling once more with how to punish pornography peddlers, Stevens said they should forget the whole thing so far as criminal penalties are concerned.

"The dire predictions about the baneful effects of these materials are disturbingly reminiscent of arguments formerly made about the availability of what are now valued works of art," Stevens remarked at one point.

Consumers got a big break when the court overturned the organized bar's long-standing ban on advertising by lawyers of prices for services such as the drawing of a will or an uncontested divorce.

The opinion said the ban can't stand up against the Constitution's free speech guarantee.

Children did not always win cases brought on their behalf. Powell, a former school board member, wrote that the Constitution does not forbid paddling a public school pupil. Remedies for harsh treatment are available under state law, he said.

Nader

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ralph Nader asked the public Wednesday to shower nickels on Congress in an effort to save the proposed Consumer Protection Agency and threatened the unprecedented step of personally campaigning against those who oppose its creation.

"This is a battle that is not going to be lost," Nader said at a news conference. He said his Congress Watch and the Consumer Federation of America, the nation's largest organized consumer group, will campaign in the districts of at least 78 House members who are "wavering" on the issue. They will have the backing of 90 labor and public interest groups, he said.

If the bill fails, Nader said, he will campaign before next year's elections in the districts of members of Congress who are yielding to "sheer special interest power" against the agency.

Voters are being urged to send a letter to the "wavering" members of Congress, along with one nickel each — the amount Nader said the proposed agency with its $15 million annual budget will cost each taxpayer per year.

The goal of the "nickel brigade" is to get 500 letters from each district by Aug. 1, or whenever the House takes up the bill.

OPEC

VIENNA, Austria (UPI) — Nine members of the OPEC oil cartel, who provide about 30 per cent of U.S. oil imports, canceled Wednesday a 5 per cent oil price increase scheduled for Friday.

The announcement at the Vienna headquarters of Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries did not mention two other OPEC members, Iraq and Libya, indicating that attempts to end the price split among the 13 members of the cartel may have failed.

A two-tier price system for OPEC oil has been in effect for the first six months of this year.

Eleven of the 13 OPEC members decided at a conference in Doha, Qatar, last December to increase prices by 10 per cent Jan. 1 and another 5 per cent July 1.

Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates said they would raise prices by only five per cent beginning Jan. 1. However, those two nations said they might agree to raise their prices 5 per cent to bring them in line with the OPEC majority should the July 1 increase be canceled.

China

NEW YORK (UPI) — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance said Wednesday the United States is committed to move toward normal relations with Peking as "a central part of our foreign policy."

In an address prepared for delivery to the Asia Society, Vance said "progress may not be easy or immediately evident," but he will pursue that commitment when he meets with Communist Chinese leaders in Peking during a five-day visit that starts Aug. 22.

"We consider friendly relations with China to be a central part of our foreign policy," he said. "China's role in maintaining world peace is vital."

In what seemed a veiled warning to the Soviet Union, which has been at bitter odds with Peking for years, Vance said, "in structuring our relationship with the Chinese, we will not enter into any agreement with others that are directed against the People's Republic of China."

The comments were part of a broad review of U.S. Asian policy in which Vance said "the United States is and will remain an Asian and Pacific power."

S. Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Riot police stopped and searched all cars entering or leaving the black ghetto of Soweto Wednesday to prevent racial unrest from spreading to white areas.

By nightfall, police began to dismantle roadblocks surrounding the sprawling township of 1.2 million blacks 15 miles southwest of Johannesburg where rioting broke out two weeks ago.

Residents said there had been no incidents during the day and one man described the situation as "eerily quiet." Police also reported no incidents in other black townships.

The lull followed a series of riots and demonstrations throughout the nation's black townships during a period of mourning starting June 16, the first anniversary of incidents in Soweto leading to six months of violence in which 618 blacks were killed.

Weather

We have received some more information on the new Woody Allen flick last night, and, being the good sorts that we are, we're passing it along to you. The movie will be called River City, River City; in addition to Allen and Diane Keaton as the wacky-but-loveable city councilor who changes her vote at the last minute, it will star Richard Dreyfuss as the closet fascist who doesn't like parks or taking his son to them, Jack Webb as an ex-cop turned city councilor who doesn't like wacky-but-loveable city councilors, and Peter Benchley as a deranged carp that goes on a rampage deep in the sewer system. Highs in the 90s and sunny skies got cut from the script; they will be replaced by highs in the 80s and intermittent thundershowers. We have been advised by our source that any resemblance to persons dead or alive is purely coincidental.

Burkhart pleads guilty

By DON HRABAL
Staff Writer

Craig P. Burkhart, 41, of Vinton, pleaded guilty to the lesser offense of robbery without aggravation after he withdrew his plea of not guilty of robbery with aggravation in Johnson County District Court Wednesday afternoon.

He is scheduled to be sentenced Aug. 5. Burkhart was charged with the Feb. 6 robbery of the Green Pepper Restaurant in Coralville and the shooting of two employees.

According to Johnson County Atty. Jack Dooley, a defendant convicted of robbery with aggravation could receive a sentence of up to 25 years in prison. Robbery with aggravation would require a deadly weapon to be present, Dooley said. However, 10 years in jail is the longest sentence Burkhart can receive on a charge of robbery without aggravation.

Two other UI students were also charged in the robbery and shooting incident.

Neal E. Hirsch, 41, of Deerfield Ill., was found guilty of three counts of robbery with aggravation on June 10. Hirsch was sentenced to 45 years in the Iowa State Men's Reformatory at Anamosa. He is currently awaiting his appeal to the Iowa Supreme Court after posting an appeal bond of $45,000.

Also charged in the case was Scott R. Houston, 19, of Rock Falls, Ill. Houston was acquitted of all five charges related to the robbery and shooting.

Gallagher indicted for accepting gifts

DES MOINES (UPI) — A Polk County grand jury indicted Iowa Beer and Liquor Control Department Director Rolland A. Gallagher and at least four other individuals Wednesday, ending a lengthy investigation of the liquor agency.

The grand jury returned nine indictments in making its final report to District Judge Richard Strickler. Strickler ordered the names kept secret until all could be arrested or arraigned.

However, it was learned others indicted by the grand jury included two executives of Sokol to post of assistant county atty.

Howard N. Sokol, former UI administrator and state legislator, was appointed to the post of assistant county attorney by the Johnson County Board of Supervisors in Wednesday's meeting.

Sokol, 65, will replace Steven K. Ristvedt, who has accepted a position as an assistant Iowa attorney general with the prosecutor's office in Waterloo. Sokol will work with the criminal staff for County Atty. Jack W. Dooley.

Sokol has been assistant to the UI vice president for academic affairs since 1970, and previously served as UI acting director of security and parking.

Between 1969 and 1970, Sokol served as legal counsel to the Iowa Senate, the State Department of Banking and the Legislative Research Bureau. He received a UI law degree in 1967 and had previously served a term in the Iowa House as a representative from Osceola County.

GSS election

Greg Schmidt, education, was elected president of Graduate Student Senate (GSS) Tuesday. Kim Jacobs, urban and regional planning, was elected vice president and Doug Heinson, economics, was re-elected treasurer. Shawn Jones, biochemistry, was elected executive secretary.

an Algona construction company, the former properties manager of the liquor department and a Maquoketa businessman tied to corruption in handling state liquor store leases.

Gallagher, who served as director of the department for five years, was charged with accepting gifts from a distillery representative doing business with Iowa's "monopoly" style liquor control system. The gift allegedly was a membership in an exclusive Des Moines club. Gallagher was freed on $1,000 bond after pleading innocent to the charge through his attorney. An Aug. 22 date was set.

Gov. Robert D. Ray, when asked whether he would recommend dismissal or suspension of Gallagher, said a distinction must be made between criminal activity "that has a material effect on the state" and Gallagher's alleged impropriety.

"There are indictments for certain offenses that would render a person unable to continue serving," Ray said.

He continued to defend his decision to not ask for Gallagher's resignation when asked by reporters how Gallagher's situation compared to the case of former Labor Commissioner Jerry Addy, who resigned under pressure from Ray when it was discovered he had purchased stolen clothing from an alleged shoplifting ring.

The indictments culminate a year-long probe by the Bureau of Criminal Investigation, the state auditor's office. However, it was merely one in a long series of investigations that have focused on alleged wrong doing within Iowa's state-run liquor system.

The state probe followed a lengthy investigation by a special federal grand jury in Des Moines, which last year returned tax evasion and extortion charges against Homer Adcock, named as the most powerful member and one time chairman of the old Iowa Liquor Control Commission.

The commission was reorganized in 1972 and became the present liquor department, but only after state officials had wrestled with the problem of finding a way to eliminate suspected corruption — including the tradition of illegal payoffs to state liquor commissioners from Iowa's liquor industry.

Adcock was convicted last October. The conviction was upheld by a three member panel of judges of the 8th Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals.

Corrections

The Daily Iowan Wednesday misleadingly reported that the Iowa City Council had voted at its formal session to defer formal approval of preliminary plans for the Dubuque-College street mall. Originally, the council was to give final approval for a mall design on July 25. But the council decided Tuesday night to allow itself an additional week beyond that date to review the proposal and receive citizen input before it approves final plans for the mall. At Tuesday's informal session, the council indicated its favor for a "modified cluster" concept, but it did not approve a formal mall plan. The DI regrets the error.

Incorrect curtain times for Summer Rep plays appeared in Wednesday's T.G.I.F. column. All performances begin at 8:30 p.m. except for the July 4 production of Dames at Sea which will begin at 7 p.m. The DI regrets the error.

Charlotte Grosse, a 15-year-old Girl Scout, was dragged screaming from this tent before dawn Wednesday by a heavy-set man. Charlotte was camping with 16 other scouts in Oscar Scherer State Park, two miles south of Osprey, Fla. More than 100 men, including the girl's father, are searching an area of thick underbrush for the girl and her abductor.

Girl Scout abducted from camp in Florida

SARASOTA, Fla. (UPI) — A screaming 15-year-old Girl Scout was dragged from a tent by her waist-length brown hair early Wednesday by a heavy-set, six-foot-tall man who then disappeared into the underbrush with the scantily-clad child.

The abduction touched off a massive manhunt by more than 100 lawmen and volunteers.

Authorities said the abductor ripped open the back of a tent about 5:30 a.m. and grabbed Charlotte Grosse. He then fled on foot, forcing the barefoot girl to accompany him into "extremely thick" palmetto underbrush surrounding the Girl Scouts' campsite in Oscar Scherer State Park, about 12 miles south of here near the community of Osprey.

This was the second act of violence to occur at a Girl Scout camp in less than a month. Three young girls were sexually molested and killed

June 13 at a camp in Locust Grove, Okla.

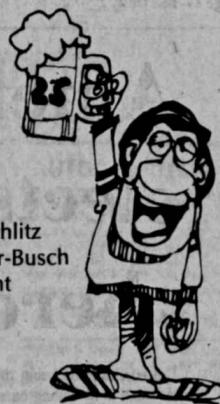

A police description of the missing girl said she had a slight scar on her chin and lower lip. Authorities said she was dressed in a Mickey Mouse T-shirt and underwear.

A park ranger said the girls set up their four tents and the leader's trailer-tent at a "primitive campsite," located about a mile from the park's regular camping area.

The screams of Charlotte's two tentmates, including her 14-year-old sister, Eleanor, awakened the Scout leader, sleeping about 70 feet away.

Authorities pressed jeeps, motorcycles, a police helicopter, a small plane and ranchers mounted on horses into the hunt. Bloodhounds followed the trail of footprints to where it disappeared in the pasture.

Nurses' trial closes with last call for guilty verdict

DETROIT (UPI) — A federal court jury began deliberations Wednesday in the three-month trial of two Filipino nurses accused of poisoning patients at the Ann Arbor Veterans Administration Hospital in the summer of 1975.

Judge Philip Pratt lectured the nine women and three men jurors on how to reach a verdict in the case of Filipina Narciso, 31, and Leonora Perez, who observed her 33rd birthday Wednesday.

"You must examine each defendant as if she is on trial alone," Pratt said in his hour-long presentation.

"And you must not worry about whether the government will lose this case. The government always wins when justice is done, regardless of if the verdict is guilty or innocent."

Before the jury left the courtroom to start its review of 6,000 pages of testimony, three men and a woman were designated alternates in a drawing and pulled from the jury. They will not vote on a verdict unless called to take the place of a regular juror.

The nurses are charged in the poisoning of eight patients in July and August 1975. There were 52 sudden breathing failures in the hospital at that time — a dozen fatal — caused by injections of Pavulon, a powerful muscle relaxant.

Narciso faces one count of murder, one count of conspiracy and four counts of poisoning. Perez is named in one conspiracy count and three poisoning counts.

In closing rebuttal arguments, Asst. U.S. Atty. Richard Yanko warned the jurors not to let "sand thrown in your eyes" by the defense affect their deliberations.

Yanko said defense closing arguments a day earlier were laced with distortions of testimony from 100 witnesses in the complex, controversial trial. He was particularly critical of defense allegations that others at the VA Hospital were better targets for prosecution than the defendants.

Defense attorneys Tuesday raised the possibility that others at the hospital may have poisoned the patients. They named several staff members and mentioned a mysterious man in green clothing seen by some witnesses near victims just before sudden breathing failures.

UI, VA hospitals' integration a plus

By LEE SEVIG
Staff Writer

A report by a federal research committee recommending better health care facilities and integration of Veterans Administration (VA) and community hospitals is not expected to seriously affect the Iowa City VA Hospital.

The relationship between the VA Hospital and the UI Hospitals is a "classic kind of relationship," allowing better care for patients at both hospitals, said John Eckstein, dean of the College of Medicine.

He said this situation is different from that in communities where hospitals operate independent of each other.

The two hospitals integrated facilities and staff through a sharing agreement shortly after World War II, when the VA Hospital decided better care for veterans could be accomplished through association with medical schools.

The UI Hospitals are responsible for radiation therapy and open heart surgery and the VA Hospitals provide tissue typing for kidney transplants.

In addition, students and instructors from the UI College of Medicine work at both hospitals. The faculty provides health care for patients and instruction for students.

The two hospitals are careful not to duplicate facilities due to economy and sharing agreements.

The VA Hospital's patients are veterans exclusively; preferential service is provided to them, said VA Hospital Director Fred Brown. He said Congress has not authorized treatment of anyone but veterans by VA hospitals.

A reply to the research committee's recommendations by the VA central office in Washington, D.C., is expected within 90 days.

Gang sought after beatings

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — Police Wednesday sought members of a loosely-knit gang known as the "Wolf Pack" who are believed responsible for the beating death of an 88-year-old woman and a series of attacks and robberies on the elderly dating back to 1975.

The woman slain was Virginia Hall of East Oakland, who was beaten and burned in a fire set by youths to cover the burglary of her home.

"It's been hard to penetrate this gang," police Sgt. Gregg Karczewski said, "but we believe there's a group of about 40-50 and they've been at it since 1975." Karczewski heads a large team of investigators assigned to the case.

Karczewski said the gang members seem to have had prior knowledge of the victims' living habits.

Most gang members are black males in their teens and early twenties, Karczewski said. He said most attacks have occurred in the early morning hours. The victims have been elderly residents who live alone.

Fifteen gang members were convicted on 58 counts after a 1975 crime spree. Charges included armed robbery, burglary and assault. Four of those were released recently and others will be freed Friday.

Six elderly residents have been attacked in the recent renewal of violence. One 87-year-old man remains hospitalized.

IVAN the TERRIBLE
Part 2
Recounts the murderous plot of the Russian landed gentry to dethrone Ivan IV. Lonely, melancholic, Ivan fights to withstand the heinous assault and cunningly outwits the treacherous Elfronsia in her plan to kill him. Renowned for its experimental color sequence, Ivan the Terrible, Pt. II remains Eisenstein's tour de force of visual excitement.

America elects its heroes

The United States is being invaded from outer space. The invasion is not being carried out by little green men, but by big white ones. And they aren't from the moons of Jupiter, but are of a more homegrown variety.

There are two former astronauts in the Senate now, John Glenn of Ohio and Harrison (Jack) Schmitt of New Mexico. Another who boldly went where no man had gone before, John Swigert, has announced he will seek the Republican nomination for the Senate from Colorado next year.

The first two astronauts to achieve their senatorial robes had a rather easy time of it. Glenn ran against Ralph Perk, the mayor of Cleveland. Perk is a rather interesting professional politician. When he arrived at a political rally and considered the crowd too large, he left. No speech, no handshaking, nothing. Glenn won by the largest margin in Ohio electoral history.

Schmitt defeated incumbent Democrat Joseph Montoya, who had two strikes against him. First, he served on the Senate Watergate committee, and his antagonistic if inept questioning of Nixon's minions didn't please conservative New Mexicans. Second, he had tax problems of a strangely nebulous nature. No tax violations were ever proved and no specific violations were even alleged, but the Internal Revenue Service let it be known it was "investigating." A Watergate backlash and the whiff of corruption were a combination Montoya couldn't overcome. Schmitt, the only bona fide scientist ever sent to the moon, trounced him.

Before being elected, neither Glenn nor Schmitt had had any direct political experience.

Glenn had worked in a few Kennedy campaigns and he nearly ran for the Senate back in the '60s, but that was it. Swigert has had some experience, working as staff director of the House Science and Technology Committee. He hasn't strode the corridors of power, but he knows the neighborhood.

However, it is doubtful the voters of Colorado would even consider Swigert for office solely on the basis of service to some obscure congressional committee. Likewise, Glenn didn't sweep to victory through his out-of-state political connections and New Mexicans didn't elect Schmitt because he's a geologist. They were elected because they are "heroes," in however limited a sense.

There is certainly nothing wrong with electing heroes to office. We've been doing it ever since Washington's time. And astronauts, who are more technicians than anything else, are rather bland as heroes go.

But we have reached the point where political sophistication on the part of the voter is a necessity and hero worship is a luxury. The public may be justified in its current dislike of "professional" politicians, but it should not return to its former bad habit of electing people to office on the basis of daring exploits having nothing to do with the operation of government. Such hero worship did give us Washington and Jackson, but it also saddled us with Grant and Eisenhower.

Welfare does not mean control

Rats die of cancer and a human artificial sweetener, saccharin, is removed from the market. Other animals also die of cancer and the particular type of dye, Red No. 2, that makes maraschino cherries red, is banned.

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) actually has little choice in these matters. A particular clause in the regulations governing the FDA requires the removal from the market of anything, except cigarettes, that causes cancer. It does not matter what the size of the dosage is, or how unreasonable the ban is; according to the rules, the FDA must ban the product.

Many people think the FDA has brought up the current matter of the saccharin ban as a method to force Congress to change the rules. In recent days, Congress has considered postponing the saccharin ban. But whether Congress does so to allow saccharin to remain on the market is unimportant. The important question is — should the government function as an advisor to the consumer, warning of possible dangers, or as an omnipotent and zealous guardian, protecting people whether they wish to be protected or not?

Democratic governments are formed, ostensibly, "to promote the common welfare," according to the U.S. Constitution. "To promote the common welfare" does not mean to order peoples lives completely and to decide what is best for them.

Governments inevitably work in the direction of control, with taxes, military drafts, social legislation and more.

It is time to call a much needed halt.

If someone has grown to be an adult in this society, the government should not try to act as a surrogate parent. Cigarettes are not banned; instead they have a message on the side warning of the danger. Why cannot this type of warning be put on saccharin and foods containing Red No. 2?

A government that does not allow its people to choose usually finds the people are choosing anyway, illegally. A ban was put on alcohol and it was smuggled throughout the country. The same is now happening with marijuana. Some people gave cases of cyclamate-sweetened soft drinks when that sweetener was banned.

Reasoning adults should be able to do to themselves what they wish. The government should stick to governing, not trying to run people's private lives. It is a good aspect of a government to warn people of dangers but it should stop there. A government is not a surrogate parent.

Consumer Protection Agency — a bargain at a nickel per head

By MICHAEL JORGENSEN

If you became involved in a court dispute, would you be willing to allow the judge to resolve your case after hearing only the other person's side of the story? Of course not. Yet this is how many decisions are now made by federal regulatory agencies.

Industry representatives now outnumber consumer representatives by 100 to one in appearances before federal agencies. Proceedings held by the Federal Energy Administration and the Federal Power Commission are dominated by the oil industry's point of view. The airlines dominate proceedings before the Civil Aeronautics Board. At the Food and Drug Administration it is the pharmaceutical industry's voice that is most often heard. These industries naturally have an interest in these proceedings. But we as consumers also have an interest in these proceedings because it is our health, safety and pocketbooks that ultimately will be affected. Industry has the resources to make its voice heard. Consumers do not have these resources.

A bill is now before Congress that would establish an Agency for Consumer Protection. This agency would present this as yet largely unheard consumer voice.

The Agency for Consumer Protection would benefit consumers in several ways. It would provide the type of legal and other expertise that industry associations and the Commerce Department now provide for business. It would utilize this expertise by testifying before federal rule-making bodies. It would also use this expertise

when pleading the consumer's case in federal courts. The Agency for Consumer Protection would collect unbiased information about products and business practices and disseminate it to consumers and would serve as a clearing house for consumer complaints by receiving and reviewing complaints from the general public.

The Agency for Consumer Protection would provide consumers with an effective voice in Washington that they have never had before, but its costs would be very minimal. Its budget would cost every American only about five cents per year. This modest budget would be the equivalent of about one hour of the Pentagon's budget. If this agency were to perform only one successful intervention in its first year, such as preventing an unnecessary rise in air fares or natural gas prices, it would more than pay back its costs to consumers.

This agency would save more than dollars, too. In 1972, for example, the Federal Aviation Administration determined that a defective DC-10 cargo door latch had caused a fatal air crash. The National Transportation Safety Board recommended that the manufacturer be required to fix its DC-10 cargo door latches. But the manufacturer intervened and asked that such a directive not be made mandatory. The FAA eventually agreed with the manufacturer's position. In March 1974, another DC-10 with a defective cargo door latch crashed, killing over 345 people. An Agency for Consumer Protection could have fought for mandatory correction of the latch and therefore saved those lives.

Some opponents of this agency have made the argument that another federal agency would simply increase the red tape and the delays that already frustrate those who deal with the federal government. But it is more likely that the new agency could help speed the regulatory process by improving input and narrowing issues. Because the agency would not have the power to make regulations, impose fines or ban products, it would not add another layer to the federal bureaucracy. Rather, it would act as a consumer advocate when taking part in governmental proceedings that already take place.

The Agency for Consumer Protection is well worth the five cents per citizen it will cost each year. Members of Congress just gave themselves a $12,900 yearly pay increase. They would be hard pressed to justify denying consumers a nickel-per-year voice in Washington.

Digressions

michael humes

"You are sewing the seeds of discord!" cried the tiny object in the farmer's calloused hand.

The farmer was taken aback. "That's funny," he said, "I thought I was sewing the seeds of sorghum." He had planted many things during his agricultural career, but never before had a seed talked to him.

The seed leaped from the farmer's hand and floated silently to the ground.

"Can't you see what you're doing?" The seed cried in a tiny voice. "You are plunging us into the ground, shackling us to sedentary lives, while the farm next door becomes stronger and stronger. While you're poking around in the dirt, they're planning to take over."

The farmer reflected on this. It was true that there was a tremendous rivalry between his farm and his neighbor's. Selling one's crops at market was very competitive after all. And he had thought it odd when he saw his neighbor's seeds scurrying around unplanted, marching in formation.

"As soon as you're through ruminating up there, we should get a plan together," the sorghum seed said, its hull glowing with impatience.

"But why should he want to take over?" the farmer asked. "Why should he even try to, when I'm so much stronger? And why am I asking you?"

"He wants to take over because he's a bean farmer," the sorghum seed whispered conspiratorially. "You know how shady they are. Godless legume lovers, that's all they are. Even now, he's over there building bean catapults to pepper your fields with beans."

The farmer still didn't have a handle on all this. "How come?" he queried.

The sorghum seed leaped to the farmer's chest, grabbed the lapels of his bib overalls and held him close. "To pollute your fields with their high carbohydrate kind. You need a counterforce, a weapon to fight their weapons, strong enough to re-establish the balance of terror!" The sorghum seed was now frothing at its itty bitty mouth. "This seed is crazy as a bedbug," the farmer thought.

Suddenly, from a nearby shed, an object moving at a fantastic rate of speed burst forth. It skimmed about one foot above the ground, visible only as a green blur above the black earth. It came to rest at the farmer's feet. It was a pea.

"Isn't she a honey?" the sorghum seed asked, with obvious pride.

"Isn't she a pea?" the farmer asked. This farmer wasn't what you'd call light on his feet.

"Not just a pea," the sorghum seed gloated. "THE pea. The fastest, sleekest, deadliest pea in a long line of fast, sleek, deadly peas. She can fly low enough to evade enemy radar, and she carries an awesome payload. The bean farmer doesn't have a thing that can touch her. She's the Pea-1."

The farmer had never encountered a deadly pea before. "What are we gonna do with it?" the farmer asked. He was thinking seriously at this point about selling the farm and going into the frozen yogurt business.

"Attack!" the sorghum seed howled. "But only if they attack first. We aren't barbarians, after all. Or bean growers."

"Hold it," the farmer said. "Fun's fun, but this has gone far enough. I allow how my neighbor isn't all sweetness and light. I'll even grant you he'd like to take my place over. I'd even go so far as to say a few countermeasures would be a fair notion. But I've been to the city and I've seen the elephant. I know what's what. I can use this Pea-1, and I can threaten the bean farmer with it, and I can show him how he's got nothing that can stop it. But how long will it be before he has something that can stop it? And then he'll grow something I can't stop, but then I'll grow something that can stop it. Then I'll grow something else he can't stop, and so on. We spend all our money on implements of destruction that'll be outdated right quick. It's a damned merry-go-round and I can't afford the ticket. Now why don't you go germinate someplace."

"You had your chance," the sorghum seed fumed. "And you blew it. You can't see your own peril, so now it's up to us. We're taking over. Me and five kernels of hybrid corn — they call themselves the Pentacorn — are taking over. We attack at dawn. If I were you, I'd go into your house. It ain't gonna be pretty out here."

The farmer hurried home and promptly got drunk.

The sorghum seed and his troops spent a feverish night preparing for battle. They'd show the bean farmer the price he'd have to pay for going against the grain.

But the bean farmer knew of their plans. He had spies planted, or rather unplanted, in the enemy camp. He, too, gathered his forces.

Dawn came, and the battle was furious. The beans and peas were flying hot and heavy. The creeks ran green with chlorophyll. The air was thick with dust.

When the air cleared, there was no movement among the sorghum seed and his fellow rebels. They were literally buried under a deluge of beans, piled high above them.

The Pea-1 was an impressive weapon. But when you come right down to it, it wasn't worth a hill of beans.

Trevino, Hill ready at GMO

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Lee Trevino and Mike Hill Wednesday provided the two elements officials of the 10th annual Greater Milwaukee Open hope will make for the best GMO ever — glamour and superb golf.

While Hill was shooting a record-tying 9-under-par 63 on the 7,010-yard Tuckaway Country Club course, where the GMO starts today, Trevino was enchanting fans at every shot and every stop he made on the course.

His running discourse to his gallery, the largest of the day of the GMO Pro-Am, and his fine 68 delighted the fans.

The golfer known as "Merry Mex" chatted, gave golf tips and extended himself at every opportunity to make the fans know he appreciates them, — and they loved it.

While Trevino was providing something the GMO has usually lacked — a big name in golf — Hill was making nine birdies and playing the rest of the course for par. He said he drove well and putted superbly, including a 60-foot putt on the first hole, but missed a putt of only about four feet on the final hole to deprive him of a course record 10 under par.

For Hill, whose brother Dave won here last year with an 18-under-par 270, the fine round was a turnaround. He hasn't played well for a long time and has earned only $7,266 so far this year.

"It makes me feel like I can play again," Hill said. "I've been playing so poorly I didn't think I had any talent any more."

Hill said he drove well and putted well and he admitted that the Tuckaway course isn't that hard.

"I enjoy this golf course," he said. "I don't think it's as tough as some of the courses (on the tour) but I don't want to knock it."

Hill wasn't the only player having a fine round in the Pro-Am as Lee Elder shot a 66 and four golfers were at 68 including Trevino.

The GMO has always had trouble drawing the big names because the British Open comes the following week. Stars like Jack Nicklaus, Johnny Miller and Tom Watson pass up the GMO to sharpen up for the big tournament.

That's why Trevino's presence was as important as the golf he played — he provided some big time glamour to the GMO. He has only won $22,765 this year and is still recovering from back surgery but the fans still remember his exploits of a few years ago — and they still love him.

"I appreciate people who work hard — and they work hard here to make it a good tournament for the fans and for the golfers," Trevino said. "That's why I'm here and that's why I've been helping them."

Agent charged in money scheme

MINEOLA, N.Y. (UPI) — Richard Sorkin, a former agent for many top-ranking professional hockey and basketball players, was arrested Wednesday on charges of stealing more than $600,000 entrusted to him by the athletes.

Sorkin, 37, of Rockville Centre, N.Y., who was cited on 32 separate charges of second degree grand larceny, waived a hearing in Nassau County District Court and was held for action of the grand jury.

Sorkin, a former sports reporter for the Long Island newspaper Newsday, was released in his own custody.

Nassau District Attorney Denis Dillon said Sorkin, owner of Sports Worldwide, Ltd., received the athletes' regular paychecks and was authorized to pay their bills, dole out spending money and invest the balance for them.

Dillon said Sorkin never made the investments and in many instances, falsely stated to the players that he had paid their bills. Sorkin, Dillon said, converted the funds to "his own use."

Dillon said the heaviest loser was Bob Nystrom of the New York Islanders hockey team who gave Sorkin $145,000. Two other Islanders players, Jude Drouin and Gary Howatt, lost $56,000 and $55,000 respectively.

The alleged embezzlement scheme cost Ron Greschner of the New York Rangers hockey team $86,000. Bruce Affleck of the St. Louis Blues lost $59,000 and Dwight Bialowas of the Minnesota North Stars, $47,000.

Dillon said 23 other athletes wound up losing amounts varying from a few thousand dollars up to $40,000.

The alleged thefts occurred between March 31, 1975 and late last year, he said.

When Sorkin put off inquiries about the money, Dillon said, several of the victims complained to various law enforcement authorities.

IM Softball

Intramural softball league play continued in the Monday and Wednesday League with five games. In Coed play, Raysond edged Cambus, 3-2, Magilla's Gurillas came up on the short end of a 23-19 slugfest with TUA Strikes and Los Zapatusas won by forfeit over Law Summer I.

In Men's League play, D-4 defeated Political Science, 18-5 and Cadabber Up beat Old Blue, 24-11.

THE PEOPLE SHOUTED LONG MAY HE LIVE

"Right."

The two men felt as if they were really on the trail of something new. As if they were on the scent. Yak jumped to his feet from where he'd crouched beside Ho. "C'mon!" he said, "time's wasting." They felt like a team as they moved to the door. Outside the two guards feigned surprise as they snapped overly obsequious salutes, and acted as if they hadn't been listening with their ears pressed to the door the whole time. Yak and Umni both peremptorily returned the gesture. "Watch that flabby peasant in there," Yak ordered. "Don't let him go anywhere, nor anybody talk to him. Anybody, and that includes yourselves, got that?"

They saluted again as Yak and Umni sprinted off in the direction of the room where Duk Man was detained. "Old Yak — I've never seen him in such a bluster," commented one of the Enforcers through his teeth. "I hear they've got the whole damn Special Chollima Security Force out here."

Yak's met his match in Umni Kowak, that's for sure," replied the second guard in an identically guttural undertone. "C'mon Yak!" he

After battling nerves for 16 years at the Wimbledon tennis championships, Virginia Wade of Great Britain calmed herself enough to oust No. 1 seed Chris Evert of the United States in a semifinal match, 6-2, 4-6, 6-1. Wade will be joined in the final by Holland's Betty Stove, who beat Britain's Sue Barker, 6-4, 2-6, 6-4 in the other semifinal.

Evert falls to Wade

WIMBLEDON (UPI) — Britain's Virginia Wade, conquering her center court nerves for the first time in 16 years, hustled Chris Evert out of her normal game Wednesday to defeat the top seed and reigning champion, 6-2, 4-6, 6-1, and reach the women's singles final of the $373,440 Wimbledon Championships.

Betty Stove upset hometown hopes of an all-British final in the tournament's 100th year by beating Sue Barker, 6-4, 2-6, 6-4, to become the first Dutch player to reach a singles final here.

The final will be played Friday in front of Queen Elizabeth, who dislikes tennis but has agreed to mark the occasion by her presence anyway.

The two semifinals represented the crests and troughs of women's tennis. Wade and Evert played an enthralling match that lasted just under two hours and which the British player, 32 next month, won by attacking at every opportunity.

Her first service — the hardest in the game — clicked three times out of four and she followed it up with a display of all-court aggression that broke up Evert's rhythmic baseline style.

The world's No. 1 player fluffed an unusually high number of forehands and afterwards said she was not aggressive enough either mentally or physically.

Wade first entered Wimbledon in 1961 but on each occasion, and especially on her two previous semifinal appearances, her nerves have let her down.

This year she promised it would be different, and it was.

Conferences object to new bowl

CHICAGO (UPI) — Commissioner Wayne Duke said Wednesday the Big Ten objects to its senior football players participating in a game against seniors from the Pacific Eight conference next January.

Announcement of the Challenge Bowl game, scheduled Jan. 14 in Seattle's Kingdome, was made Tuesday.

Duke said he had communicated with Executive Director Wiles Halleck of the Pacific Eight, who said his conference also objected.

"This matter was reviewed by the joint group at the annual May meetings," Duke said, "and in accordance with their direction, I communicated to the sponsors of the Challenge Bowl that the Big Ten conference does not endorse this game in any form and will not provide support for such activity."

Duke said however that neither the Big Ten nor Pacific Eight could prevent the seniors from playing.

"They play in the Senior Bowl and that's the same thing," Duke said.

New Davis Cup regulation

LONDON (UPI) — The Davis Cup tennis nations Wednesday voted to impose automatic one-year suspensions on countries refusing to play matches against opponents on political grounds.

The proposal, passed at an extraordinary meeting of the organization, was carried by 40 votes to 12.

The new regulation reads: "If, after the draw has been made, any nation withdraws from the competition, that nation shall not be eligible to take part in the competition the following year. In the case of a natural disaster, the committee of management may resolve by a two-thirds majority that no penalty be imposed."

Last year a motion calling for nations to be barred for one year for withdrawing and three years if the action was repeated during a five-year period, was defeated.

Given a choice, most of us prefer hair, that's why Jojoba Super Shampoo has been an instant success. Excessive hair loss, dandruff, dull hair, swimmer's hair and a variety of other hair and scalp ailments are helped through its use. This remarkable new product contains the same jojoba (pronounced ho-ho-ba) bean oil that southwestern Indian tribes have used since pre-Columbian days to promote a luxuriant growth of hair. In most cases, users of Jojoba Super Shampoo notice a big improvement in the appearance and condition of their hair within a week to ten days.
