Chinese bigwig plans meeting with Vance

PEKING (UPI) — After five hours of meetings with the Chinese foreign minister, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance was informed that he will be meeting a member of the ruling Chinese triumvirate for discussions about normalizing relations between the two countries.

American officials said Vance will be meeting Teng Hsiao-ping today at 3 p.m. local time (2 a.m. Thursday CDT). Vance was also invited to have dinner with Teng at the Summer Palace in Peking tonight. Reporters accompanying Vance have also been invited.

Teng, who was recently rehabilitated and restored to power, is a vice chairman of the party and a deputy premier. He met Vance in October 1975 when Vance was on a private tour of China.

Although clearly not as influential as Hua Kuo-feng, the premier and Communist party chairman, Teng is a powerful member of the hierarchy and is regarded as the leading proponent for continued good relations with those nations which can give China technical help.

American officials said the five hours of talks with Foreign Minister Huang Hua have dealt mainly with a review of American foreign policy by Vance.

Huang — while officially Vance's governmental counterpart — is not a member of the ruling Communist hierarchy.

The secretary held a second round of talks Tuesday with Foreign Minister Huang Hua and his staff. He also delivered a letter from President Carter addressed to Chairman Hua, who was ratified as Mao Tse-tung's successor by the 11th Chinese Communist Party Congress just before Vance arrived.

Huang and his staff have mostly listened to Vance outline U.S. policy on Asia and Europe, an American who sat in on the talks said. The Chinese have asked a few questions but the real negotiating has not yet begun.

The U.S. official, who is a member of the secretary's team of eight to 12 negotiators, said the Chinese appeared to be in no hurry to discuss either establishment of full diplomatic relations or the future of Taiwan.

Vance and Huang and their staffs met for 2½ hours Tuesday morning.

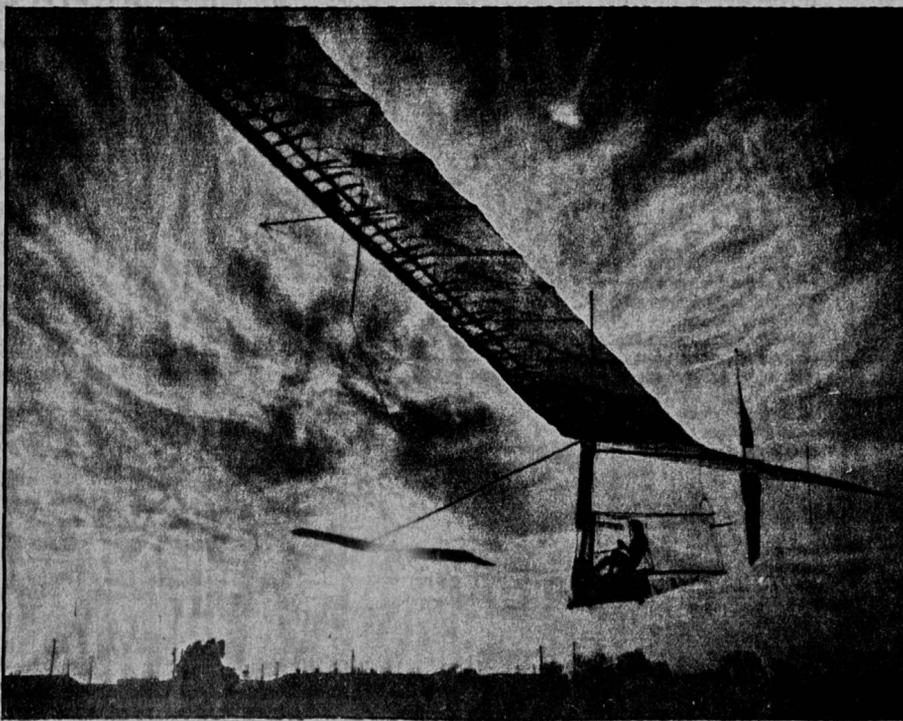

Voyager fine after collision

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — America's Voyager spacecraft speeding toward Jupiter and Saturn was reported working nearly flawlessly Tuesday. Scientists said they believed the troubles that plagued the craft shortly after launch were caused by a rocky separation from its Centaur rocket.

When the Voyager 2 was blasted loose from the rocket after launch from Cape Canaveral, Fla., early Saturday, one of the four explosive devices apparently fired out of sequence, causing the propulsion module to bang into the spacecraft and send it into a tumble.

Maynard Hine, spokesman for the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, said the onboard computers were not programmed to handle such a rough ride, but scientists sent a successful command to Voyager to lock onto the sun to steady the ship and the computers returned to normal.

"We're still evaluating the situation," Hine said, "but we believe we've located the problem in separation during the launch phase. The Voyager probably received a couple of very healthy bumps, but we haven't been able to assess the damage to the craft, if any, as of yet."

Paul McCready, of Pasadena, Calif., claims an $86,000 prize Tuesday for a man-powered flight over a measured course at a Shafter, Calif., airport with his hand-crafted pedal-powered airplane, the Gossamer Condor. McCready asserts that the airplane's completion of a figure-8 course of over 1¼ miles while remaining at least 18 feet off the ground makes him the winner of the prize, offered by a British industrialist. The plane and its pilot, Bryan Allen, is shown in an earlier flight just after dawn.

Not to blame, says Berkowitz

NEW YORK (UPI) — Pajama-clad David Berkowitz pleaded innocent Tuesday to the "Son of Sam" murders of two Queens women and was ordered held pending the results of psychiatric tests to determine his mental competence to stand trial.

Berkowitz, of Yonkers, N.Y., sat expressionless and spoke only once during the 20-minute arraignment in the sixth-floor day room of Kings County Hospital in Brooklyn, where he is being studied by psychiatrists.

Meanwhile, in Brooklyn, Supreme Court Administrative Judge Charles Rubin announced he had determined he has jurisdiction to hold hearings to determine whether 10 hours of tapes purportedly made with Berkowitz and offered to literary agent Scott Meredith actually exist.

"This may be a bunch of nonsense, but I want to determine that there has been no film-flammery in this case," Rubin said.

Rubin said witnesses would be called into his chambers or a closed courtroom and subpoenas would be issued if necessary. He said he would begin drawing up a list of witnesses next week.

Manacled and under heavy guard, the defendant wore a striped blue bathrobe, sea green pajamas and soft cloth slippers as he was led into the room and seated at a table with his three defense attorneys.

Queens Supreme Court Justice Leo Brown, presiding from a makeshift court bench covered with a white hospital bedsheet, asked softly, "Are you David Berkowitz?"

"Yes, I am," responded the 24-year-old postal worker in barely audible tones.

The court clerk then read each of the five indictments against Berkowitz, charging him with the .44-caliber revolver slayings of Christine Freund last Jan. 30 and Virginia Voskerichian on March 8.

To each count, Ira Jultak, one of three defense attorneys, responded "Not guilty," on behalf of Berkowitz.

He also pleaded innocent to seven counts of attempted murder, five counts of first-degree assault and five counts of illegal possession of a weapon resulting from the wounding of five other persons in "Son of Sam's" five nighttime ambushes in Queens during the last year. Two other intended victims, represented in the attempted murder counts, escaped injury in the attacks.

Brown ordered a hearing Sept. 1 on Berkowitz' mental fitness to stand trial.

In all, "Son of Sam" killed six young people and wounded seven others during a year-long reign of terror with a .44-caliber revolver, the same gun police said was found in Berkowitz' car when he was arrested outside his home Aug. 10.

He still faces arraignment at the hospital today for three "lovers' lane" slayings in the Bronx. He has already pleaded innocent to a Brooklyn indictment charging him with the death last July 31 of Stacy Moskowitz, the last of "Son of Sam's" victims.

Prosecutors said admissions that police assert Berkowitz made at the time of his arrest would be used against him if he ever comes to trial.

Defense attorney Mark Heller has already indicated he will offer a defense of insanity if the alleged "Son of Sam" is found competent. Hospital psychiatrists say their report on the defendant would be ready by Aug. 30.

The arraignment on the Queens charges took place inside the Brooklyn hospital amid tight security because authorities said they wanted to avoid the "circus atmosphere" that prevailed when Berkowitz was arraigned in state Supreme Court in Brooklyn last week.

"You will notice that we told him (Berkowitz) when we served him with the charges that we intended to use his admission to charges against him," Queens District Atty. John Santucci told reporters after the hearing.

Carter makes clear Lance dealings not unethical

Carter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter said Tuesday investigations show Budget Director Bert Lance did nothing "illegal or even unethical" in his private banking deals, and he still considers Lance his indispensable right-hand man.

Handling a barrage of questions on the Lance affair in a quiet, thoughtful manner, Carter made clear he considers investigation of all known charges to be "complete" — even though congressional probes are in the offing — and, so far as he is concerned, Lance stands exonerated.

"I don't know of any allegation that has been made or proven that Bert Lance did anything illegal or even unethical" in the multimillion dollar loans he got while a professional banker or the overdrafts he and his family ran up at the banks he headed, the President said.

At a regular news conference, Carter said the controversial new Panama Canal treaty is "advantageous" to U.S. interests. He said he will lead the effort to drum up public support for it in the face of fierce opposition from congressional

Carter backtracking on the Canal treaty

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the face of growing criticism of the proposed Panama Canal treaty, President Carter said Tuesday the United States intends to add a provision to the agreement guaranteeing U.S. involvement in any new sea level canal built in the future.

Carter told a news conference the question of a sea level canal arose after discussions were completed on turning control of the existing canal back to Panama by the year 2000.

He noted the present canal can handle neither large warships nor the biggest commercial freighters and tankers.

"We want assurance we will be involved directly in the construction (of a sea-level canal that could handle such large vessels), and not have some possibly hostile nation supplant us," Carter said.

The proposed treaty, which also provides for continued U.S. protection of the canal, has drawn strong opposition in the Senate, where it must be ratified. But Carter said Tuesday he feels those "who have studied the treaty closely" believe it is a good agreement.

Opponents of the agreement, which would give Panama the canal in the year 2000 but leaving the United States involved in its defense, have started a nationwide campaign to block Senate ratification of the two treaties.

Carter acknowledged to a news conference the deal does not now have popular support, but he said he was confident "a good deal of misconceptions" will be cleared up when the text of the treaty is released in the next few days.

He said he intends to assume "a major responsibility of my own to give the American people the facts" about the treaty, and insisted the text answers most of the objections that have been raised — particularly that it would be a "giveaway."

Carter announced that the agreement provides for U.S. participation in the development of any sea level canal to be built in Panama, so no "possibly hostile nation will supplant us." He added such a canal is probably not needed immediately.

Later, White House press secretary Jody Powell said the sea level canal provision was written at U.S. insistence and "will relieve some concerns of some senators."

Carter said, "I was not convinced a year ago" it was in the national interest to give up sovereignty over the Panama

Canal, but after studying the drafts, "I'm convinced it's advantageous."

The President also noted the treaty has been endorsed by the Joint Chiefs of Staff, former President Gerald Ford and former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

"It is obvious to me that over a period of time the Panama Canal has become inadequate," Carter said. "Over a period of time, I think, the canal needs to be expanded."

"Whether we need (a new canal) at this time, I doubt. We may in the future. "We want assurance we will be involved directly in the construction, and not have some possibly hostile nation supplant us," Carter said.

The President also brought Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd to dinner at the White House Tuesday night to discuss strategy for winning Senate approval.

Associate press secretary Jerrold Schechter said "It hasn't been definitely decided," but Carter probably will sign the treaties in Washington before they go to the Senate.

Such a ceremony, it was considered, might increase public interest in the treaty and build up support.

Ratification, Schechter said, might be followed by a presidential trip to Panama for the final signing.

It is believed ratification and a Carter visit would create much good will for the United States with its Latin neighbors. Opponents of the treaty mounted an early campaign, with mass mailings and full page newspaper advertisements. One outspoken critic, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., promised a filibuster if ratification is demanded this year.

In Minneapolis, the national convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW) unanimously adopted a resolution opposing the treaty. Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., whipped up VFW feeling Monday with a speech predicting "We will lose respect if we bow to this blackmail."

Thurmond said Panama, run by "a pro-Communist dictator," is "a small, weak unstable country" which could not defend the waterway.

Citizens for the Republic, the political organization headed by Ronald Reagan, sent a memo to 250 supporters in California urging them to protest the tentative endorsement of the proposed Panama Canal agreement by Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif.

He disclosed his negotiators are trying to add a new element to the treaty, by asking for assurances that the United States — not some "hostile" nation — will have first crack at helping build any sea-level canal Panama may decide to construct.

On the Middle East, he said has "no intention" of withholding military or economic support as a means of stopping Israel from establishing more Jewish settlements on occupied Arab territory. He said U.S. pressure would be confined to informing the Israelis it considers those settlements "illegal" and an obstacle to Middle East peace.

But, as expected, the subject of Lance and his private banking transactions dominated the news conference, and Carter handled it with the quiet aplomb of a man who has wrestled with his conscience and made his decision.

The Lance affair centers on recent disclosures that Carter's budget director, in private life, obtained about $6 million in personal loans from New York and Chicago banks in which his own Georgia banks had opened interest-free accounts.

The comptroller of the currency told Carter last week there are no grounds for criminal prosecution arising from those loans or from other questionable banking practices, including hundreds of thousands of dollars in overdrafts run up by Lance's family in his own Georgia banks.

But the comptroller did say Lance's activities raised "unresolved questions as to what constitutes acceptable banking practice."

Two Senate committees promptly announced they would conduct their own investigations of Lance's conduct and of banking ethics in general. But Carter said that, while those probes are proper, he believes all allegations concerning Lance have been investigated and found baseless.

"It might have been advisable at the time the loans were made for Bert and others to have made those loans public," Carter said, "but that was not required" by banking regulations at the time.

In the News

Briefly Israel

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter said Tuesday he won't put further pressure on Israel to discourage it from giving additional recognition to settlements in occupied Arab land on the west bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

Carter said it was enough for the United States to warn that the actions taken by Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin violated international law — and added he was not considering withholding military aid or any similar action.

"This kind of action on the part of Israel creates an unnecessary obstacle to peace," Carter told a news conference. "But we don't intend to go further than our caution to Israel, open expression of our own concern and our identification of these settlements as being illegal."

Valentino

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — About 150 people gathered in the Hollywood Cemetery Cathedral mausoleum Tuesday on the 51st anniversary of the death of silent film star Rudolph Valentino. Among them — returning after an absence of 23 years — was a woman observers said was the "original Lady in Black."

Ditra Flame, who was a girl of 14 when Valentino died in 1926 at the age of 31, said she had stayed away for more than two decades "because there were so many other women in black coming in and kneeling next to his tomb that it just got to be too much for me."

"I was very heartbroken over hearing of Elvis Presley's death," she said. "When I saw pictures of the crowd weeping at the gates (in Memphis), I thought maybe now this generation understands how our older people felt about Valentino."

TV talk show hostess Virginia Graham was among those delivering brief eulogies of the "great lover."

Kappler

ROME (UPI) — Italy's defense chief Tuesday blamed bumbling guards and careless police officials for the escape of Nazi SS mass killer Herbert Kappler from a Roman hospital Aug. 15.

West Germany, breaking its silence over the strange affair that has strained relations between Bonn and Rome, said Tuesday it had nothing to do with Kappler's escape from the Cello military hospital, where he was undergoing cancer treatments.

Italian Defense Minister Vito Lattanzio delivered a report to Senate investigators blaming the escape on the incompetence of the supposedly "elite" guards assigned to Kappler's ward.

Reverse

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Carter administration is working on a Supreme Court brief that is widely expected to support government "affirmative action" plans against charges of "reverse discrimination."

However, an official insisted Tuesday the Justice Department has not decided what position it will take.

There is growing speculation that department lawyers will intervene as a "friend of the court" and support the challenged admissions policy of the University of California medical school at Davis.

State courts ruled that the school practiced "reverse discrimination" in rejecting the application of a white student, Allen Bakke, while accepting minority applicants with lower grades.

Uganda

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — A total of 16

prominent Ugandans went on trial Tuesday before a military tribunal accused of plotting to overthrow President Idi Amin, Uganda radio announced.

All were arrested in February shortly after Amin announced he had uncovered a plot against him and implicated the late Anglican archbishop of Uganda and two of his government ministers.

Uncooked!

VLAARDINGEN, the Netherlands (UPI) — The Blokland family left for Basel, Switzerland, Tuesday to see the 16-year-old daughter they thought had been cremated two weeks ago.

In Basel, a representative of the Basel State Hospital said, "We still don't know what happened. We just don't know how it could have happened. We are trying to find out and should know by tomorrow."

The hospital shipped to Vlaardingen a body identified as that of Henriette Blokland, 16, who had been injured in a car collision July 31 near Basel in which two other persons were killed. The mistake was discovered Sunday when Henriette, who had been in a coma, regained consciousness.

Weather

"Jimmy's green today so it will be partly cloudy with a warming trend and highs in the low 80s."

"Rosie, what did they do to you in the hospital. You've got to lay off the hormone pills or we'll deport you to our Peoria bureau."

"No, I've found a fool-proof system. With all the problems lately, Jimmy has been a little on edge and I noticed a week ago that when the weather changes his cute little birth mark shaped like China on his left thigh changes color. I have it down to a science, although I don't always see it every day."

"Okay, Rosie, we'll give it a try."

"Thanks. Oh, by the way, when do our checks come? We have an overdraft and..."

Ethiopia:

Somali rebels claim 1,500 killed-wounded

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Somali rebels said Tuesday they have killed or wounded 1,500 Ethiopian troops and shot down a U.S.-built warplane in fighting for control of Ethiopia's southern Bale province.

Two hundred miles to the north, Ethiopian forces said they smashed a week-long Somali offensive against the key rail town of Dire Dawa in the largest battle of the three-month-old Ogaden Desert war to date.

Radio Mogadishu accused Ethiopia of making "massive preparations to launch an unjust aggression against Somalia."

A weekend call by Ethiopian strongman Mengistu Haile Mariam for the total mobilization of his country's manpower and industrial resources was an attempt to "whip up a war fever among the (Ethiopian) peasants," the radio said.

The Western Somali Liberation Front, which claims to control 97 per cent of the Ogaden in southeastern Ethiopia, said it scored new victories in the mountainous Bale province adjacent to the Ogaden.

The Front said it had seized all of the province except for the provincial capital of Goba and the nearby crossroads town of Ginir, where heavy fighting was continuing.

A Mogadishu communique said the Somalis killed or wounded 1,500 Ethiopian troops and shot down a government warplane over the past few days.

It said 300 Ethiopians were killed in one battle near Ginir while 360 were killed and 500 wounded at Dolo Biddo west of Ginir. Another 250 were killed in battles west of Goba and east of Ginir at Ado Tar, the communique claimed.

The Somali version of the war followed an Ethiopian communique Monday claiming that nearly 1,000 Somali troops were killed or wounded when Ethiopian forces repelled their attack on Dire Dawa.

The battle for Dire Dawa was reported to be the heaviest of the war that began last June when the Somalis launched an offensive to seize control of the Ogaden to form part of a "Greater Somalia."

'This is not a war where you take prisoners'

Editors' note: UPI correspondent Gary Jones was one of the first reporters allowed by Somali guerrillas into the Ogaden desert area they have captured from Ethiopia. The following is his account.

GOBE, Ethiopia (UPI) — The green and white flag of Somali guerrillas flutters over the Ogaden Desert town of Gode, where the late Ethiopian Emperor Haile Selassie built his winter palace.

Three months ago, Gode was a strategic Ethiopian base for 5,000 air force and army personnel that boasted the area's major airstrip, about 125 miles from the Somali border.

But in June, the Western Somali Liberation Front began its assault across the forbidding Ogaden, seeking to "liberate" a semi-arid wasteland the size of Great Britain from Ethiopian control.

Now the vital airstrip is guarded by guerrillas manning American-made anti-aircraft guns captured from the fleeing Ethiopians.

The Somalis said they captured the town July 24 in a battle that saw both sides suffer heavy casualties. The local guerrilla commander said 1,500 Ethiopian troops were captured. The rest fled or were killed, he said.

The Somali guerrillas appear to be in control of virtually the entire region of southeast Ethiopia.

I traveled for five days with other correspondents; nearly 500 miles across the desert, passing through numerous villages and towns that have been captured by the Somalis.

Ethiopian troops appeared to have fled the region, retreating to the major government strongholds of Dire Dawa, Jijiga and the walled city of Harar.

The only Ethiopians still in the region were a few prisoners and two small children in this former major military base, apparently left behind when the Ethiopians fled their positions in July.

"This is not a war where you take prisoners," a guerrilla said through an interpreter.

Here and in Werder, about 125 miles to the northeast, the guerrillas displayed four caches of captured weapons and ammunition including mortars, bazookas, machine guns, anti-tank guns, recoilless rifles, rockets, rocket launchers, bombs and rifles.

The captured military equipment included many jeeps and Dodge trucks stamped with the red, white and blue emblem of American aid programs.

Arafat eager to begin direct talks with U.S.

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — Egypt's official news agency Tuesday quoted Palestinian guerrilla chief Yasser Arafat as saying he is "anxious" to start direct talks with the United States on Middle East peace prospects.

But the agency also quoted Arafat as saying that the Palestine Liberation Organization was not yet ready to announce its acceptance of a key U.N. resolution on which the U.S. offer of talks depends.

"The PLO is anxious to conduct a dialogue with the United States and it has tried to open an office there. But we are still awaiting the American reply," Arafat said in an interview with the Middle East News Agency.

But the guerrilla leader also said that any "clarification" regarding a switch in the PLO's position towards U.N. Security Council Resolution 242 would have to await certain unspecified "changes on the international scene."

During his recent Middle East peace swing, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance indicated that Washington would talk to the PLO if it accepted the 1967 resolution which recognizes Israel's right to exist.

The PLO has always been opposed to the resolution because it refers to the Palestinians as refugees rather than what they consider themselves to be — a stateless people with the right to a homeland.

Council votes in favor of placing bond issue on November ballot

By RHONDA DICKEY Staff Writer

The Iowa City Council Tuesday adopted a water-reduced version of the proposed city-county law enforcement facility. The motion indicated the council's support for the facility and set the vote for general obligation bond issue for Nov. 8, but did not commit the city to a dollar amount.

The motion replaced a previous motion that would have specified a $500,000 bond issue. Councilor Max Selzer, however, said, "I am not convinced that we need to spend $500,000." He said he didn't believe there were enough estimates from the architects to justify "handing out" that amount of money.

Nov. 8 is also the date of the general election.

Councilor Robert Vevera, who declared several times his unreadiness to vote on the law enforcement facility issue, abstained from the vote on the motion. Vevera said he wanted to consult further with Johnson County Sheriff Gary Hughes and Iowa City Police Chief Harvey Miller before committing himself on the issue.

Councilor Carol deProse, however, noted that Hughes and Miller had strongly supported the proposed law enforcement facility.

After a long debate, the council also adopted a resolution approving a preliminary plat of the Windsor Heights addition. This land is adjacent to Hickory Hill Park; many persons attending the council meeting said it should be retained for recreational use. DeProse said she favored condemnation of the land for recreational use, but acknowledged that the property was excellently suited for redevelopment.

The council subsequently defeated a motion to undertake condemnation of the more than 12 acres adjacent to Hickory Hill Park, a vote on which deProse abstained. Councilor L.P. Foster told the council he was voting against condemnation because the area was suitable for residential development. Foster mentioned that the area was near schools that have been suffering from declining enrollment, and had adequate sewer facilities.

'I have dignity and morals. But when big people, like from Playboy, tell you you're pretty and sexy, it means something.'

By JOHN PETERSON
Staff Writer
Part two of two

Playboy magazine photographer David Chan didn't have time to return to Iowa City to take the final photographs of the eight women selected to model for the special Playboy pictorial, "Girls of the Big Ten." Deadlines were coming due and he had interviews to conduct at four more Big Ten universities. Chan had met with 134 Iowa women and had taken several snapshots of each to submit to the art department to use in selecting the eight finalists. The art department then telephoned the women and told them they had made the cut.

Freelance photographer Nicholas DeScioise was sent to Iowa City to do the final shooting. He contacted the eight women and arranged the details and Potts were not registered at the UI when interviewed with Chan.

Of the seven, Sue Herwig-Johnson seems the most enthusiastic about using the exposure in Playboy to bolster her career as a model. "I had a career goal in the back of my mind when I decided to pose," she said. "I'd like to get more calls. I've modeled in the past, just little jobs. But this is big stuff and I hope something comes of it." In order to make it as a professional model she said she was willing to "go anywhere and do any kind of modeling, but only for classy magazines, never for Hustler."

When discussing the possibility with DeScioise of doing a centerfold it was decided that because she was married she wouldn't be "Playmate material."

"They thought I was too modest to be a Playmate," and Potts were not registered at the UI when interviewed with Chan. She has been featured in the "People" section of the Aug. 19 Des Moines Register and plans to appear on a Davenport TV talk show. Playboy has also kept in touch about the possibility of her doing a Playmate centerfold, which she said she'd consider because of the $10,000 offered. "Exploitation is in the eye of the beholder," she said. "I have dignity and morals. But when big people, like from Playboy, tell you you're pretty and sexy, it means something."

Benson said Playboy representatives told her that "I wouldn't have to do any 'beaver' shots to be a Playmate." Later, she said, "when Nick (DeScioise) was photographing me, he said that out of all the girls he shot it was nice to run into someone who was modest."

Lisa Van Slyke and Laura Dunscombe kick off the "Girls of the Big Ten" pictorial with poses more suited to motivate a football team than to arouse prurient interest. Van Slyke, contacted two days before the Playboy issue came out, still hadn't been informed that she would appear in the magazine. She said that she posed in cheerleading togs as a "lark," but when asked for more revealing shots she declined. "I'm really pretty modest," she said, "and Playboy is a sexual-fantasy magazine."

Dunscombe, however, who refused an interview with the DI saying only that she wished "the whole thing would die down," did pose during an extensive modeling session with DeScioise that included nude and semi-nude shots. When DeScioise returned to Playboy headquarters in Chicago with photos of Dunscombe, which he termed "exquisite," the art director was interested mostly in some shots DeScioise had done of her doing football cheers in a bikini on the footbridge behind the Union. "Why is this woman doing these porn magazine now," she said. "Nielsen," who is afraid of a scandal in her hometown where her father holds a prominent position, became alarmed when a DI reporter learned her real name and made efforts to contact her. She had a male friend phone the DI to ask that her name not be used in the article. When the reporter refused to promise that her name wouldn't be used, the caller became irate and threatened violence, but when he calmed down he apologized. That night a shy, immaculately modest woman unexpectedly visited the reporter in his apartment. "I posed as 'Britt Nielsen' in Playboy," she said.

When asked why she posed for Playboy, "Nielsen" said, "Initially I did it just for a unique experience. When DeScioise called me I guess I didn't understand the terms of the arrangement with Chan. I thought I was legally bound to pose for the final photos." When asked if she didn't anticipate the notoriety surrounding local women appearing in Playboy, she said, "I thought the girls just appeared in the magazine and that was that. I never thought anyone would want to make a big deal of it." She said that lately she's been dressing uncharacteristically to avoid people recognizing her from the photograph.

Perhaps most ironic of the various Playboy-Iowa City connections is that former DI reporter Mary Schnack appears semi-nude in the issue and is given a personal mention in the accompanying article. Schnack, who wrote on many shots. We expected to run into a lot more inhibitions, but they were quite willing to do the raunchy poses like the ones on pages 142, 145, and 146. It was pretty amazing."

For modeling for the final Playboy pictures each woman received $100. Those appearing in the magazine clothed will receive another $100 and those appearing semi-nude or nude will receive an additional $150. Schnack is currently in Europe and unavailable for comment. Karla Potts from Iowa City, also in Playboy, has moved to Oregon and was also unavailable for comment.

for the modeling. "Finally, of course, it was up to them to decide if they'd go through with what they'd started with Chan," DeScioise said.

For some, the decision was not easy — quick money, the chance to advance a career, vanity and adventure were all motives that became jumbled with the possibility of actually appearing in America's most popular "skin magazine." Within the frames of DeScioise's camera there was also the threatening possibilities of outraged relatives, jealous men, disapproving employers and the censure of a modest public. But still, according to several women, it was understood at that time that there was less than a 50 per cent chance of making the magazine.

Those odds proved false, however, for Iowa's women. Of the eight finalists, six women were chosen by Associate Art Director Chet Suski to appear in September's issue. The seventh Iowa woman appearing in the magazine is former Daily Iowan reporter Mary Schnack. Schnack was not among the eight finalists but was asked to pose by DeScioise while she was covering the story for the DI. The seven Iowa women appearing in the magazine represent a higher total than from any other Big Ten school. They are (in order of appearance): Cheerleaders Lisa Van Slyke, Laura Dunscombe, Kathryn Sue Benson, Mary Schnack, Susan Herwig-Johnson, "Britt Nielsen" (the alias of a woman who preferred to keep her name secret) and Karla Potts. Herwig-Johnson Herwig-Johnson said. "If I had it to do over again I'd go all the way." She said that she originally wanted to pose clothed and had hesitated when asked whether she would pose semi-nude.

Herwig-Johnson feels that the negative reaction leveled at women who pose for Playboy is basically founded on jealousy. On the Playmate Data Sheet, which all the interviewees filled out she wrote that her biggest "turn off" is "women who are against other women trying to look better, using make-up and shaving their legs," she said. "These women, no matter what they do to themselves, are never going to look good. So the easiest thing for them is to be anti-good looks."

Herwig-Johnson said she has learned that Dr. Susan Johnson in the Obstetrics and Gynecology Department of the UI Hospitals has been getting a lot of calls meant for her. "Crank calls, breathers, but maybe one or two serious ones that I'd like to be getting," she said.

Kathryn Sue Benson, who said she posed mainly for fun, doesn't think she'd especially like to make modeling a full-time career. "A promo man from Playboy called and said that if I did any promotions because of the Playboy thing I shouldn't accept anything less than $75," she said, adding, "modeling gets old quick and doesn't enrich your life." Her ambition, she said, is to get on the U.S. Equestrian team and to make a living as a riding coach. Except for a couple of crank phone calls, Benson has received no negative reactions thought I was legally bound to pose for the final photos." When asked if she didn't anticipate the notoriety surrounding local women appearing in Playboy, she said, "I thought the girls just appeared in the magazine and that was that. I never thought anyone would want to make a big deal of it." She said that lately she's been dressing uncharacteristically to avoid people recognizing her from the photograph.

Perhaps most ironic of the various Playboy-Iowa City connections is that former DI reporter Mary Schnack appears semi-nude in the issue and is given a personal mention in the accompanying article. Schnack, who wrote on many had everything off." According to DeScioise he tried a series of shots with Schnack at her typewriter, but decided that they "might look a bit silly." The photo finally decided on is of Schnack sitting on a chair with the typewriter in the background.

Associate Art Director Suski said problems in putting the pictorial together included having to continually stress campus life. "Too many nude shots of women lounging around bedrooms and such would not have been in keeping with the central idea that these were girls from college. So we had to juxtapose lots of shots of girls going around clothed doing collegiate things. For sure, we had no trouble getting the nude

New DI

Another school year is about to get under way, so it's time for another editorial telling you what a magnificent and unique paper The Daily Iowan is. Unique at least.

If this is the first year of your stretch at the UI, or if you spent the entire summer systematically blotting from your memory all recollection of things educational, you should be apprised that what makes the DI a unique (and potentially magnificent) paper is its special and unusual relationship to the UI.

The DI is not an appendage of the UI or any of its departments. Instead, it is the product of an independent corporation, Student Publications Inc. (SPI), which contracts with the UI to provide a daily paper for the university community. And SPI is run by a board of directors elected by the students, faculty and staff of the UI. So the DI does not answer to the UI administration and cannot be censored by any member of it. The DI answers to you, through your representatives on the SPI board, which selects the editorial staff and sets the long-term policies of the paper.

In practice, the DI attempts to produce a daily paper of professional quality while providing an educational experience (and gainful employment) for students of the UI. The goal of professional quality is a lofty commitment, considering the massive turnover of staff from one school year to the next and the scant experience of many members of the staff, but this year's staff has spent the summer experimenting and learning and getting its chops together, so we have no excuse for offering anything less than a credible paper this fall.

One result of the summer's experimentation is the new look of the editorial page (we all have to feel we've made our mark, after all). You will usually find two house editorials on the left edge of the page. We'll always put a box around them to warn you that serious pontification lies within.

Other regular features of the Viewpoints page will be a weekly Scoring column by Editor Steve Tracy; a column of creative reflection and superfluous bullsh*t called Digressions; Scrutiny, containing more serious analysis of issues concerning women, the environment, energy, education, politics, international relations, housing, economics and the community; a remedial dosage of Michael Humes, a fellow of questionable sanity who likes to write little fables full of sick puns and strained metaphors; the controversial rantings of Nicholas von Hoffman; occasional offerings of popular platitudinarian Sydney Harris; graphics from the Liberation News Service; and the award-winning political cartoons of Pat Oliphant as well as drawings by our own Thom Dower.

Our readers are also important contributors to the Viewpoints page. In letters to the editor you let us know what we've missed or bungled and even give us an occasional pat on the head, and in doing so you help us keep our readers better informed about issues and options, which is the whole point of the Viewpoints page. We regret that we must impose length limitations on most letters, but we will publish some longer letters in a special feature called Input.

So much for the Viewpoints page. But there is another new DI feature of which you should be aware. Somewhere, amidst all the sections of today's registration edition you will find the inaugural Riverrun, a new DI supplement that will henceforth appear every other Thursday. Bill Conroy, who is responsible for Riverrun, was reluctant to give a capsule characterization of his product, so let's just say that, whatever it is, you'll find it interesting. For further information, check his editor's note on the front of Riverrun.

On Nov. 8 Iowa City residents will have a chance to approve a much-needed ordinance affecting the quality of housing and, thereby, the quality of life in this community. After detailed research and investigation, the Protective Association of Tenants, Tenants United for Action, IowaPIRG, the Citizens' Housing Center and other allied groups have succeeded in placing a landlord-tenant ordinance on the public ballot.

The importance of such a measure to UI students cannot be overstated. It's the rare and lucky student who can find the proverbial clean, well-lighted place to live in Iowa City. The horror stories of student housing are established lore and the time for tolerating an unpleasant situation is passed.

The proposed landlord-tenant ordinance delineates clearly the landlord's responsibility to provide inhabitable housing and specifies precisely the tenant's options to proceed against a landlord failing to maintain reputable dwelling conditions.

Additionally, under the provisions of the ordinance, the landlord must:

- provide every tenant with a written lease enumerating the mutual obligations of both parties, regardless of the duration of the occupancy;
 - allow the tenant to renew a lease unless she-he has been a destructive or inconsiderate resident;
 - provide the tenant a signed checklist of damages and defects present in the dwelling to ensure that deductions from a damage deposit are fair.
- The proposed ordinance also prohibits landlords from:
- harassing tenants by abusing the right of access to the rented dwelling;
 - retaliating against tenants who report violations of the building code, join tenant unions or initiate lawful action to enforce rights as residents;
 - requiring tenants to sign a lease that waives their legal prerogatives.

Further, the proposed ordinance prohibits discrimination in housing against gays, unmarried couples, single parents, families with children and families receiving public assistance.

Ironically, the major obstacle to passing this praiseworthy measure is that students — the persons most likely to benefit from a stronger housing ordinance — must be virtually forced at gunpoint to vote in a local referendum. Lack of student participation in approving the impending housing ordinance is inexcusable, especially since voter registration procedures have been streamlined. Incoming freshmen and other new students will find voter registration materials in their orientation packets. Registration will be possible at citizen group tables that will be set up at the dormitory food lines this week and in the lobby of the union next week. A student at least 18 years old may also be eligible to vote on November 8 by completing a simple form at the Johnson County courthouse in the county auditor's office about two blocks south of the Pentacrest on Clinton Street or by mailing a postcard form, obtainable at the public library, to the county auditor. The deadline for registering in person is Oct. 23; for registering by mail, Oct. 14. No residency requirements exist, but if you have previously been registered and have moved, you must register again.

Lance: Georgia genius or a business bust?

WASHINGTON (KFS) — When Bert Lance was confirmed by the Senate as the director of the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) he promised to sell his 200,000-share interest in the National Bank of Georgia. This was to avoid the appearance of a conflict of interest, but then Lance asked for a delay in executing his promise because selling would mean he would have to let the stock go for about $1.5 million less than he paid for it.

When people like Lance talk about the sacrifices they make for public service, they don't mean real sacrifices like taking a monetary loss. Fair enough, but it also turns out that Lance, with his stock or without it, is in deep, deep debt — between $4 and $5 million worth. Whether being in debt on that scale makes a high public official vulnerable to pressures that solvent officials aren't is a neat point, but what's puzzling is those who say how lucky we are to have a man of Lance's talent in the key job of director of OMB.

Ritual deferences to one side, just what, if any, are Lance's talents? When he came to Washington he was advertised as a formerly barefoot, rural Georgia business genius who had become a captain of the nation's banking industry and other laudatory clichés. Admittedly, it takes a talent of sorts to saunter one's way into a debt of such size, but is it a talent we need in Washington? No question exists that Lance is an honorable man who would never commit a conflict of interest, but he is a competent man, a useful man? He may want to serve the public but the public is entitled to politely turn aside this ambition on the basis that Lance may not have very much to offer.

Highly placed businessmen need do no more than hold their jobs to be listened to, deferred to and respected without any inspection of the quality of their work. Look at David Rockefeller, "Clearly this nation's leading business statesman," according to Fortune magazine. Nevertheless, the head of the Chase Manhattan Bank, the "nation's leading business statesman" has been such a lousy businessman that it has often been suggested the best thing he could do for his bank is to "fire himself."

Being a Rockefeller, it is not so easy for David as it is for Bert Lance to go monumentally into debt, although the Rockefeller holdings are hardly what they once were. However, "it's operating problems have been terrible, the quality of its loan portfolio exceptionally weak, and its financial performance, by just about every measure, inferior," is how Fortune sums up Chase's record under David. The particulars are past believing: $1.7 billion in burn real estate loans; an overstatement of the value of its bond trading accounts so large that the Securities and Exchange Commission has proceeded against the bank; almost $4 billion in loans to underdeveloped countries whose capacity to repay runs from skimpy to slim. The only bad loan risk in the country Rockefeller seems to have missed is Bert Lance.

While people who follow business news have long since decided that David Rockefeller could pass as a turkey if he can learn to grow feathers,

Winning at any cost defeats real sportsman

If "winning is the only thing," as many football coaches would have us believe, what does it really matter how you win? If "nice guys finish last," how do we rate that Nicest Guy who finished nailed to a cross like a common criminal, jeered at by a mob of soldiers?

Once winning becomes the most important, or

only important, thing, then everything else must necessarily be subordinate to it. You cannot say "winning within the rules" or "within the law," because if winning is the only thing, then rules can be violated and laws can be broken, if you are able to get away with it.

There is no way to stop this except by the built-in moral standards of the competitors. The laws of contract bridge, for instance, say nothing about cheating or taking unfair advantage of your opponents. These matters are handled in the "Proprieties" — but proprieties are a matter of morality and personal conduct, and cannot be legislated.

In high-level tournaments, the players are now separated by a screen so that they cannot give hand signals to their partners. There is a barrier along the bottom of the table, so that they cannot kick each other. But the latest scandal involves giving illicit information by a series of sniffs and coughs.

There is no way to stop cheating in bridge unless all four players are hermetically sealed in different rooms, monitored by cameras and tapes. And even then unscrupulous players would find some way to get around this. Unless you are deeply convinced that there is no glory or real gain to be had from winning by foul means, there is nothing to sustain you in the use of fair means and sportsmanlike behavior.

The idolators of success for its own sake tend to justify the antics of a Jimmy Connors or an Ilie Nastase on the tennis court as "part of a fierce, competitive drive to win." But here we must

Despite majority support

Rep. Leach opposes Federal Consumer Agency

Rep. James Leach:

Whose side is he on?

To the Editor:

An open letter to Congressman James Leach.

Thank you for your conscientious reply to my recent letter urging your support for H.R. 6805, which would create a federal Consumer Protection Agency. I must note, however, my disappointment in the absence of what I would consider substantive reasons for your continued opposition to this bill.

First, you argue that the growth of public interest and consumer groups — coupled with the increasing accessibility of regulatory bodies to such groups — makes a central consumer agency unnecessary. You overlook the fact that every consumer representative in Washington is still outnumbered in appearances before federal agencies by 100 industry and special interest representatives. You seem also to forget the all too common preponderance of industry representatives in the composition of federal regulatory bodies. The opening of regulatory hearings to public participation is not sufficient in restoring a balance to regulatory proceedings.

You suggest as well that consumer groups might be absorbed into the "establishment," and thereby lose our effectiveness. I would suggest to you that the consumer groups favoring this new agency are quite able to judge such "dangers" for ourselves. We are willing to take a chance, thank you, in order to ensure presentation of the consumers' interests in federal regulatory decisions.

Second, you cite increased House and Senate interest in regulatory reform and antitrust legislation. But the attention of Congress is focused on one issue at a time, and Congressional action is necessarily slow, deliberate and broad in scope. We need a full-time consumer advocate to assure implementation of existing laws in the consumers' best interests. A Consumer Protection Agency would give us a voice to match the businessman's voice (Department of Commerce), the farmer's voice (Department of Agriculture), the banker's voice (Treasury) and the worker's voice (Labor).

For these reasons, it is not "deeply presumptuous," as you argue, to have a consumer agency "represent the public before a public body." The "public bodies" to which you refer are heavily ethical precept.

Winning can never be the most important thing, because how you win determines what you are, and what you are determines your value, to yourself and to everybody else. When that Nicest Guy told us "the least shall be first," we were being warned that the real winners and losers are not necessarily those whose names we see on the scoreboard.

Copyright 1977 Field Enterprises, Inc.

laden with special interest representation, and they often respond to the squeakiest wheels in Washington. Consumers have been under-represented for too long.

You state that you are not concerned about the cost of the agency, which would be about 1-2200th of the Commerce Department's annual budget. The Carter administration has projected a cost savings of $5 million, which would result from consolidation of scattered consumer functions in one federal agency. Are you so nonchalant about saving the taxpayers' dollars?

Finally, you seem to find Ralph Nader's and IowaPIRG's attention to your vote on H.R. 6805 somewhat amusing: You "don't know whether to be chagrined or honored" by our campaign to enlist citizen support for the bill. I would ask to you remember that the letters and nickels your constituents sent you last month were a concrete measure of their support for this agency. Remember, too, that a nation-wide majority of 87 percent favors the agency.

Your continuing opposition to the Agency for Consumer Protection flies in the face of public support. In the absence of sufficient justification for your stand, it appears that you hold the interests of big business — who has actively opposed this agency for eight years — more dear than the interests of your constituents.

The supporters of the consumer agency include President Carter, the United Auto Workers, the National Council of Senior Citizens and the Consumer Federation of America, as well as those citizens who have taken the time to urge your support. Its opponents include Exxon, General Motors, the National Association of Manufacturers and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Whose side are you on, Mr. Leach?

Ira Bolnick
Iowa Public Interest Research Group

Editor's Note: The Iowa Public Interest Research Group launched a "Nickel Campaign" in July, asking citizens in Iowa's First Congressional District to send one nickel and a letter to Congressman Jim Leach. The nickel represents each citizen's cost to support the proposed Agency for Consumer Protection. This week, Rep. Leach returned the nickels along with an explanation of his opposition to the agency.

Readers of The Daily Iowan may also have noticed that today's editorials were reprinted from Monday's paper. They were reprinted because many students may have missed out initial registration edition and because the two edits were especially pertinent to the beginning of the school year.

'No S. Africa bomb'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — South Africa has given the United States "firm assurances" that it does not have a nuclear bomb and does not intend to develop one, a State Department official said Tuesday.

The assurances came following a formal inquiry by the State Department last week on the accuracy of Soviet press reports that South Africa plans to test a nuclear device, the official said.

The assurances apparently came in a communication from South African Foreign Minister Roelof F. Botha. The State Department said details of the South African reply would be released later.

The official had no comment on a French government report of new information that South Africa was preparing an atomic explosion.

French Foreign Minister Louis de Guiringaud, in an official announcement broadcast Monday over the French state radio, said a South African atomic explosion, even for peaceful purposes, would have "grave consequences" on French-South African relations.

The State Department official said the United States would intensify its efforts to have South Africa join in the treaty to halt nuclear proliferation — signed by the United States, the Soviet Union and Great Britain.

Although the Paris government has protested alleged moves by South Africa to get into the "nuclear club," France itself has not acceded to the non-proliferation treaty.

The treaty requires each country to place safeguards to prevent use of enriched uranium for the development of nuclear devices. State Department officials are concerned about South Africa's pilot uranium enrichment plant.

Recalled-book fines rise

By WILLIAM KIRKHAM and PAUL FARMER
Staff Writers

Recalled book fines have been raised from 10 cents a day to 50 cents a day, but fines for books taken from the browsing room, stacks and reserved reading rooms at all UI libraries remain at 10 cents per day.

A recalled book is one that has been borrowed from the library by one patron and later requested by another.

The first borrower is then notified to turn in the book in five days.

Wayne Rawley, assistant librarian for reader services, said the increase is necessary because patrons of the library are not responding to recall notices.

Susan S. Marks, head of circulation, said, "The highest fine is for books that have been recalled. If a book has been checked out and someone else requests the book, we send out a notice asking the borrower to return the book within five days. If the book is not returned at the end of that period, a 50 cents per day charge is started and a second notice is mailed to the borrower."

Marks said the overdue recall books are a problem at all UI libraries and the new fine applies to books checked out at branch libraries as well as the main library.

Students and staff are charged 10 cents a day up to $3 for overdue books taken from the stacks and the undergraduate library, Marks said.

"The faculty is not fined for overdue books taken from the stacks, but is fined in all other areas of the library, she added.

She said if a book is not returned by the middle of the month following its due date, a book bill is sent to the accounting offices and the borrower is charged on her-his U-bill for a replacement and the maximum fine.

"If the book is out of print, a $12 charge is applied to the student's bill," Marks said. According to Marks, if the book is available only in paperback the borrower is also charged a $3 binding fee.

When a book is returned after payment of the book charge and the fine has been collected, Marks said, a credit for the book — but not the fine — is placed on the borrower's next U-bill.

Marks said about 100 books per week are recalled at the main library and she estimates that about one-half to one-third of those books are not returned after two weeks.

Raymond E. Owen, chief accountant for the UI, said the UI collected $36,000 in library fines during the fiscal year ending June 30.

Marks said money received through the fine system is kept by the UI and the money from replacement fees goes into the library as part of the new book budget.

Business registration 'bullish'

By DEB AMEND
Staff Writer

While the UI has predicted a slight increase in enrollment this fall, the mob of students around the College of Business Administration registration table at the Field House Tuesday indicated many new business majors.

Asst. Dean Ernest Zuber said, "The business college will experience an extremely high increase in enrollment this year."

Zuber also predicted 28 to 30 per cent of this year's enrollment in the business college will be women.

He attributed the overall increase to a greater demand for people with business backgrounds and decreasing job opportunities for people with liberal arts educations.

The College of Engineering will also experience a surge in enrollment this year, Assoc. Dean George M. Lance said.

"Undoubtedly enrollment will increase 10 per cent this year due to greater job opportunities," Lance said.

Not all departments are experiencing such a jump in enrollment, however, as lines at some registration tables were non-existent.

A sign above the Portuguese table reads, "Isn't Hard — Is Fun!" Pat Williams, an instructor in Portuguese, and Debbie Beasley, A4, were at the Portuguese table, drumming up recruits.

According to Beasley, Portuguese satisfies the liberal arts language requirement, and, though it is a little-known fact, more people in the world speak Portuguese than French.

The College of Liberal Arts enrollment is expected to increase slightly this year, according to Sherwood Tuttle, associate dean of the liberal arts college.

Enrollment in the College of Education is expected to decline slightly in the undergraduate program and increase in specialized areas of the graduate program, Assoc. Dean William Mathes said.

Registration at the Field House has followed the same procedure as in the past and is going according to plan this year, Assoc. Registrar Harold Duerksen said.

According to Duerksen, this will be the last time registration will be held at the Field House.

Due to athletic scheduling complications and assorted departmental suggestions, UI registration will move permanently to the Recreation Center, Duerksen explained.

Sat., evening enrollment up

By RANDY REZABEK
Staff Writer

The Saturday and Evening Classes program, which enrolled 1,200 students in the fall of 1976, expects to expand to approximately 1,500 enrollments for the fall of 1977.

The program, which began in 1971 with less than 150 students, has increased the number of courses offered from 14 to 74 in only six years.

The program will add 20 new courses to its schedule this fall, program director Orene C. Fitch said.

She said the purpose of the program is to make the UI's resources available to more Iowans by offering courses people can take in their spare time.

"Most of our students are the nontraditional type; adults who return to school part-time," Fitch said. "We are part of the increasing national trend for continuing life-long education."

Fitch said the program generally draws students from a 60-mile area around Iowa City, with students occasionally coming from as far as Des Moines and eastern Illinois.

"Courses are taught by the regular faculty of the university. This ensures that the program's courses are on the same level of quality as the regular daytime courses," she said.

"We ask for suggestions from our students and from the public for new courses," Fitch said. "If we get three or four people requesting similar courses, we will go to the head of the department involved and try to set one up."

The program's budget, about $250,000 in 1976, is self-supporting on student tuition. Regular full-time students who take the program's classes do not contribute any portion of their tuition to the program.

Fitch said in the future she hoped the situation would change so regular students would pay a portion of their tuition into the program.

KIRKWOOD Fall Community Education Classes

Offered in cooperation with the Iowa City Community School District
Phone-in registration is new!
Registration begins August 22
CLASSES START THE WEEK OF SEPTEMBER 19

Register by phone - here's how

DEADLINE: Don't delay: many classes are limited in size, and will fill up quickly. Registrations will be accepted on a first-come, first-serve basis beginning August 22. Phone lines will be open Monday through Friday from 8 am - 8 pm and on Saturdays from 8 am until noon. PHONE REGISTRATION BY THE NUMBER LISTED BELOW WILL END SEPTEMBER 30, so take a look at when the class you want starts; call in early, even if the class or event in which you're interested doesn't begin until later this fall.

PROCEDURE: Find the course you want, at a location convenient for you. Note the section number. If you live in Iowa City, Hills, North Liberty, Solon, Tiffin, or Sharon Center, call 351-3294. Other communities: 1-800-332-8833. Once you have contacted the registration clerk, that person will need the following information: 1) the section number, 2) your name, 3) your address and phone number, and 4) your social security number.

For more information call 338-3658

Jury says Mandel is corrupt

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Gov. Marvin Mandel, who succeeded Spiro T. Agnew to become one of the most powerful officials in Maryland history, was convicted Tuesday in federal court on political corruption charges involving women and horses. On the same day as his Oct. 7 sentencing on mail fraud and racketeering charges, Mandel also will be stripped of office under state law unless an immediate request for a new trial is successful. That is considered most unlikely.

He could receive up to a 105-year prison term, but that also is considered unlikely.

The verdict against Mandel and five codefendants — Irvin Kovens, W. Dale Hess, Harry W. Rodgers III, William A. Rodgers, and Ernest N. Cory Jr. — came on the 13th day of deliberations by the jury of seven men and five women.

At the center of the government case was Mandel's need, despite an annual salary of $25,000, for hundreds of thousands of dollars for a divorce settlement from his first wife, Barbara, so he could marry socialite Jeanne Dorsey.

His codefendants, all close friends and political confidants except for Cory, wanted the legislature to take action that would make their secret investment in a horse track more valuable, with the most important bill allowing more days of racing at the track.

Government prosecutors alleged Mandel took more than $350,000 in gifts and benefits, mostly to pay the cost of his divorce, from his codefendants in exchange for influencing General Assembly action on the track legislation.

Mandel, 57, leaned back in his chair, looking dazed, while the 129 separate verdicts — more than 20 for each defendant — were read. The other defendants sat calmly. Mandel was found guilty on 17 counts of mail fraud and one of racketeering. Marshals cleared a path through hundreds of spectators — many of them unfriendly and calling out insults — to a waiting limousine for Mandel and his wife, the younger woman he saw secretly for several years before deciding to divorce his first wife.

"Go on, Marvin, go on," shouted one spectator, while Mandel clenched his familiar pipe and smiled bitterly. "You're going to jail, Mandel. You're going to jail."

Arnold Weiner, Mandel's attorney, said the governor "was disappointed. He's determined to press on with the review of the case. He will continue to hang in."

But he noted, "The governor is still recovering from the stroke he suffered in April. The strain wears heavily on him."

In an afternoon news conference, Mandel continued to maintain his innocence and said history will prove he never did anything to defraud the citizens of Maryland.

"I'm not walking out feeling that I've done anything to hurt the people of this state," Mandel said. "As I said before, I love it too much to hurt it. I think history will show — during my administration — that nothing was done to hurt the people of Maryland."

Mandel said he will definitely appeal his conviction.

This is a temporary schedule. The traditional hang-on-the-wall Bijou calendar will be distributed soon after printing. We apologize for the delay.

8/23 The Friends of Eddie Coyle (1973)
 Robert Mitchum stars as an aging small-time hood conscious of the lack of alternatives to his dreary existence and fearful of his influence on his family. Director Peter Yates masterfully combines a startling portrait of the contemporary urban underworld with a sympathetic picture of an eminently likeable "little man." With Peter Boyle and Christopher Jordan. 7 & 9 pm.

8/24 The Southerner 1945
 One of Renoir's American films. This quasi-documentary about cotton farmers in the American South is appropriately austere. The solemnity of their actions demands a treatment different from that which one accords a Parisian vagabond or provincial laborer. There is something noble and dramatic in their meager lives to which Renoir gives added dimension. 7 pm.

The Bad and the Beautiful 1953
 The inner workings of Hollywood, revealed through the life of a ruthless producer (based on David Selznick) who brings professional success to others, but ruins their personal lives. A caustic film on Hollywood, featuring a good performance by Lana Turner. With Kirk Douglas, Dick Powell, Gloria Grahame. Directed by Vincent Minnelli. 9 pm.

8/25 The Bad and the Beautiful 7 pm
The Southerner 9 pm

8/24-5 The Candidate 1972
 Robert Redford and Peter Boyle star in what the National Observer called "the best political film ever." Redford plays an idealistic young lawyer whose political career involves great emotional, moral, and financial costs. Directed by Micheal Ritchie (Smile) and written by Jeremy Lerner. 7:30 & 9 pm.

8/26 The Wild One 1954
 Prototype of the motorcycle film as well as an important movie in Marlon Brando's early career. Brando plays the leader of a leather-jacketed motorcycle gang which vandalizes and terrorizes a small town. Lee Marvin plays the psychotic leader of a rival gang. Directed by Laslo Benedek. 7:30 & 9:30 pm.

The Passenger 1975
 Antonioni's suspenseful and haunting adventure is the portrait of a drained journalist whose deliverance is an identity exchange with a dead man. Accompanied by an equally alienated girl, he passively embarks on a treacherous gun running journey through Europe. Jack Nicholson's performance is so gripping that even his virtual absence is felt in the film's spectacular concluding moments. With Maria Schneider. Subtitled. 7 & 9:15 pm.

The Cat People 1942
 The first production of the legendary production unit of Val Lewton, this eerie, atmospheric thriller about a woman haunted by the fear that if roused, she had the power to turn herself into a deadly cat, set a new standard for poetic, sensitive thrillers. Produced with taste, intelligence, and at an astonishingly low cost. With Simon Simon. Directed by Jaques Tourneur. 11:30 pm.

8/27 The Passenger 7 & 9:15 pm
The Cat People 11:30 pm
Taxi Driver 1976
 Martin Scorsese's jaundiced view of the contemporary urban netherworld. Robert DeNiro gives another remarkable performance, this time as the dangerous and unpredictable Travis Bickel. Voted best film at last year's Canes Film Festival. 7:30 & 9:30 pm.

8/28 Taxi Driver 7:30 & 9:30 pm
Virgin Spring 1959
 Classic Bergman film about a peasant's vengeance for the rape of his virgin daughter. Simply yet directly told, this film won the 1960 academy award for best foreign film. Starring Max von Sydow and Birgitta Valberg. 7 & 9 pm.

8/29 Bigger Than Life 1956
 Nicholas Rebel Without a Cause Ray's most disturbing portrait of madness at the core of fiftie's American complacency. James Mason in a powerful performance as a high school teacher who develops a god complex under the influence of cortisone. The penultimate scene provides perhaps the most gripping scene in '50s cinema. 7 pm.

Zabriskie Point 1970
 In his first American film, Antonioni paints a disturbing and somewhat vicious portrait of the U.S. in his depiction of a young revolutionary of the '60s. English. 9 pm.

8/30 Zabriskie Point 7 pm
Bigger Than Life 9 pm

8/31 Big Sleep 1946
 A classic film noir, based on Raymond Chandler's story about a cynical but charming private eye Phillip Marlowe (Bogart) and his confusing involvement with a weak old man in a wheelchair and his ambiguous daughter (Bacall). Directed by Howard Hawks. 7:30 & 9:30 pm.

The Castle 1970
 Highly acclaimed both the Venice and Barcelona film festivals, this rendition of Kafka's allegorical novel communicates the central drama of our time: the purposelessness of modern man and the incomprehensible law which denies him freedom. Maximilian Schell stars as the tortured, humiliated land surveyor. Written and directed by Rudolf Noelte. 7 pm.

Battle Hymn 1956
 Directed by Douglas Sirk. The true story of Colonel Dean Hess, whose accidental bobbing of a German orphanage during World War II caused him to turn to the pulpit. Rock Hudson, Martha Hoyer, Dan Duryea. 9 pm.

9/1 Easter Parade 1948
 Among the most entertaining of MGM musicals, it was the only co-starring effort of Fred Astaire and Judy Garland. The well-known "couple of swells" tramp number is just one of the high points of this Irving Berlin-scored saga of Garlands rise from singing waitress to Astairs partner. With Peter Lawford, Ann Miller. Directed by Charles Walters. 7 pm.

Sous Les Toits De Paris 1930
 Rene Clair's charming evocation of Parisian life is a milestone in the history of the cinema. The potentialities of the sound film, then in its infancy, were exploited by Clair in terms of the contrapuntal relationship of sound to image. The narrative, a love triangle among a street singer, his friend, and a pretty girl who flirts with them both, is secondary to the poetry of sights and sounds of the film's setting: a teeming tenement quarter of Paris. 9 pm

All the President's Men 1975
 Accurately re-enacts all of the events, times, places, and people involved in the Watergate coverup. Redford and Hoffman as Woodward and Bernstein. Directed by Alan J. Klute Pakula. 7:30 & 9:30 pm.

Morganna, baseball's infamous kissing bandit, struck again Monday night when she surprised Kansas City Royals' third baseman George Brett as he approached the plate. US-Cuba cage battle leads to bloody brawl SOFIA, Bulgaria (UPI) — The United States basketball team fought its way to a 94-78 win over fast, sharpshooting Cuba in the World Student Games Tuesday.

Part of the fight was with fists, chairs and bottles — in a free-swinging brawl that emptied both benches and sent U.S. stars Phil Hubbard and Jim Bailey out with injuries. Bailey, a 6-9 center from Rutgers, was cut almost to the bone of his left elbow by a flying bottle and may require as many as 15 stitches.

The melee also turned the game around. The Cubans, who stunned the Americans early with superb outside shooting and tight defensive play, took an 8-0 lead in the first four minutes and fell behind only 42-40 at the half.

The battle, a repeat of a Cuba-American rumble at the 1973 Student Games in Moscow, started two minutes into the second half with the score tied at 46-46 and tempers running high.

U.S. coach Denny Crum of Louisville came onto the court to protest a referee's call, and Cuban forward Tomas Herrera gave him a shove. Both benches were empty in seconds.

Keyed-up, pro-Cuban Bulgarian fans joined in with a vengeance, throwing bottles, chairs and even a silver Games medal into the fray. Crum defended himself with his fists and U.S. manager D.E. Travis held off two Cubans with karate-style kicks.

Four minutes later, both Bailey and Hubbard, a 1976 Olympian, were out with bad cuts. "That's going to hurt the team badly," Crum said. "It's sad, but these things happen when two teams go into a game with a lot of emotion."

The Cubans, led by 21 point-sharpshooter Alejandro Urgelles, almost stopped the Americans cold and threatened them with their first loss in the tourney — before the center-court brouhaha.

But the machine-smooth U.S. squad came back from the wrong end of the fisticuffs to blast the game open.

Louisville's Darrell Griffith started it off with three quick outside jump shots. Northeast Louisiana forward Calvin Natt paced the sprint with 24 points and Portland State's Freeman Williams contributed brilliant inside moves for 21 points.

"Usually the team that's in the right in a fight comes back and plays best," Crum said.

Comings eyes QB candidates

Still searching for a No. 1 quarterback, Iowa Coach Bob Comings sent his team through a sharp passing drill to end Tuesday afternoon's practice session.

"It was a good passing scrimmage, all the quarterbacks threw well," Comings said of the efforts of seniors Tom McLaughlin and Doug Piro, and freshmen Bob Comings Jr. and Pete Gales.

McLaughlin completed five of nine pass attempts, while Piro was 5-7, Comings 2-3 and Gales 1-1. Each quarterback directed offenses consisting of first and second string players against similarly mixed defensive units.

Injuries continue to plague the Hawks as they prepare for the Sept. 10 season opener against Northwestern. Freshman quarterback Jeff Green of Newhall, Calif., did not participate in the passing scrimmage after suffering a sprained ankle earlier in the practice but Iowa trainer Ed Crowley was not certain of the extent of the injury.

Comings also said the conditions of offensive linemen Sam Palladino, Mike Mayer and Barry Tomasetti have remained unchanged. Palladino is trying to shake off leg problems, Mayer has had kidney problems and Tomasetti has been battling a hamstring pull.

Today marks the last day of two-a-day drills before the start of classes Thursday.

State rivalry scheduled for Sept. 17 has ensured a sellout for that game, Graham said that it will be some time before his office will be able to determine just who will be able to latch onto single game tickets.

Earlier in the summer, officials at Iowa State accepted Iowa's offer of 7,785 tickets to be distributed to Cyclone fans.

UI students who ordered their season tickets last spring may stop by the athletic ticket office after they have registered to pick up their tickets.

Ticket sales roll on

By MIKE O'MALLEY
Staff Writer

Tickets for the upcoming football season are selling well, but it may be some time before the final totals are calculated and university officials can pinpoint just how many tickets will be available on a single game basis.

"Right now, the Ohio State, Minnesota and Iowa State games all look like they will be sellouts," said Francis Graham, Iowa associate athletic director. "It's a little early to tell, because we don't know how many tickets our incoming students will buy."

Approximately 14,000 tickets were budgeted to UI students, and Graham is taking a wait-and-see attitude to see if most of those tickets will be snapped up.

Students may still purchase season tickets for $28 (including seven home games), and they may also buy an additional "date" ticket for a non-UI student at the student price. Staff members may purchase season tickets for $42.

Although the sale of approximately 22,400 season tickets to the general public set an Iowa record, Graham said that the student sales have thus far not been as great as anticipated, although the number of ticket buyers has increased during fall registration.

"We had to figure high in estimating student ticket sales," he said. "We didn't dare figure low, so that they (the students) might not get the opportunity to buy a season ticket. Then we also had to set a smaller number of tickets aside for the new incoming staff members."

Though the interest generated in the renewal of the Iowa-Iowa

State rivalry scheduled for Sept. 17 has ensured a sellout for that game, Graham said that it will be some time before his office will be able to determine just who will be able to latch onto single game tickets.

Earlier in the summer, officials at Iowa State accepted Iowa's offer of 7,785 tickets to be distributed to Cyclone fans.

UI students who ordered their season tickets last spring may stop by the athletic ticket office after they have registered to pick up their tickets.

Yacht skipper canned

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — Enterprise skipper Lowell North was fired Tuesday in a major reorganization designed to improve the new 12-meter yacht's lackluster performance in the race to defend the America's Cup.

Independence, the other boat trying to catch the winning record of Atlanta Braves' owner Ted Turner and his 12-meter yacht Courageous, replaced its tactician.

"I've been fired," North said at a dockside news conference. "It's probably for the best interests of the yacht. I think she can win."

Halsey Herreshoff, grandson of famed boat designer Nathaniel Herreshoff, will take over North's job as tactician. Upwind helmsman Malin Burnham, a San Diego, Calif., real estate executive and seasoned yachtsman, will become skipper.

Burnham will get his first test Wednesday in a rematch with Courageous, delayed Monday by rain and Tuesday by a fog in which both yachts lost their way.

"I think he (Burnham) can do a better job," said North, an Olympic sailing gold medalist. "The reason I'm fired is that the tactics have been a mess. I've made mistakes. We're behind and we had to make a change. I don't begrudge it."

Stockton, Tanner advance

BROOKLINE, Mass. (UPI) — Fifth-seeded Dick Stockton and sixth-seeded Roscoe Tanner rolled to easy straight-set victories Tuesday to advance to the second round of the 50th U.S. Pro Tennis Championships at Longwood, Cricket Club.

Stockton, of Carrollton, Tex., combined excellent baseline play with a virtually errorless net game, taking 65 minutes to eliminate South Africa's Pat Cramer, 6-3, 6-3.

Tanner, of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., parlayed a booming serve with aggressive play around the net to banish Doug Crawford of Weston, Mass., 6-4, 6-4, in 75 minutes.

IM officials needed

The UI Recreation Services Department is in need of intramural flag football officials. Students officiating earn from $2.99 to $3.38 per game, which last approximately 50 minutes. A rules and organizational meeting will be Aug. 30 at 4 p.m. and Aug. 31 at 7 p.m. Both meetings will be in Room 201 in the Field House. Attendance at one of the meetings is required to become a flag football official.

Women's sports meetings

Anyone interested in playing field hockey should attend a meeting Thursday at 3:30 p.m. in Room W105 of Halsey Gym.

All players interested in joining the women's tennis, golf, volleyball and gymnastics teams should report to organizational meetings Friday. The tennis team will meet at 2:30 p.m. in Room W122 of Halsey Gym while the gymnastics meeting is scheduled for 3:30 p.m. in Room W105A of Halsey Gym.

Anyone interested in joining the UI women's golf team should report to Finkbine golf course at 4 p.m.

All persons interested in joining the women's volleyball team should show up at the Recreation Building at 4:30 p.m. wearing practice apparel.

Midday moves again

BOWLING GREEN, Ohio (UPI) — Mike Miday, whose promising collegiate basketball career has been up in the air for nearly a year, has landed at Bowling Green.

The 6-8, 215-pound Miday dropped off the University of Indiana squad shortly after last season began when he and Hoosier Coach Bobby Knight couldn't get along. When he could not get the required release from Indiana to transfer to another NCAA institution, Miday enrolled at Malone College, a small NAIA school in Canton, but stayed only through the rest of the past school year.

Several major colleges, including North Carolina-Charlotte and Nevada-Las Vegas, sought to "recruit" Miday, but he selected Bowling Green over Las Vegas. He will sit out the 1977-78 season under the NCAA transfer rule, but will have three years of eligibility remaining, beginning in 1978-79.

Foli's single foils Cubs

CHICAGO (UPI) — Tim Foli's single with one out in the 13th inning scored Jack Clark from second base Tuesday to give the San Francisco Giants their first victory in nine games against the Chicago Cubs this season, 4-3.

After Gary Tomasson opened the 13th by grounding out against the fifth Chicago pitcher, Paul Reuschel, Clark walked and stole second. Darrell Evans then walked before Foli's game-winning hit to right field.

Reuschel took his fifth loss against four wins while Charlie Williams, who worked three innings in relief for the Giants, giving up one hit, got his fifth win against four defeats.

The Giants' first three runs were unearned, one coming in the fourth when Clark walked, reached third on Evans' single and scored when Steve Ontiveros bobbled Foli's ground ball for an error. In the fifth Derrel Thomas singled and reached second when the throw on Rob Andrews' fielder's choice grounder was late allowing Andrews to reach also. Thomas scored when Ivan DeJesus bobbled Bill Madlock's grounder for an error. Andrews then scored on Willie McCovey's sacrifice fly.

The Cubs tallied twice in the second on singles by Jerry Morales, Ontiveros, Manny Trillo and Ray Burris, and once in the sixth on Morales' double and Ontiveros' single.

Mets slip by Houston

NEW YORK (UPI) — A single through a drawn-in infield by Len Randle with one out in the ninth drove home Leo Foster with the winning run as the New York Mets defeated the Houston Astros 2-1 Tuesday after the Mets had tied the game in the eighth on a pinch double by Ed Kranepool.

Foster singled to center to start the ninth, was sacrificed to second by winning pitcher Skip Lockwood, and went to third on a wild pitch by losing pitcher Joe Sambito. Randle then slapped a single to center for his third hit of the game.

Houston had broken a scoreless deadlock in the top of the eighth when Terry Puhl doubled off Nino Espinosa and scored on a two-out single by Jose Cruz. The Mets tied it in their half of the eighth when Steve Henderson singled, was balked to second by Astro reliever Tom Dixon and scored on Kranepool's two-out double to right.

Kranepool got his ninth pinch hit of the season in 20 chances and drove in his eighth run as a pinch hitter on a day when veteran scout Bubber Jonnard, the scout who signed him to a Met contract in 1961, died.

Lockwood relieved Espinosa in the eighth, retired all four men he faced, and ran his record to 3-6 with the victory. Sambito, the third Houston pitcher, took the loss.
