Lance fails to convince 2 senators

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The two top senators of the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, Sen. Jacob Javits, R-NY, and Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., said Thursday they were convinced that the President's nominee for Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, Jesus I. Jara, was not qualified for the post.

In a joint statement, Javits and Humphrey said: "We have been convinced by the evidence of this investigation that Jesus I. Jara is not a qualified person to serve as Secretary of Housing and Urban Development and we therefore cannot support his nomination."

The senators said they would vote against Jara's confirmation and that they would continue to investigate the matter.

The senators were responding to a report by the Senate Committee on Governmental Affairs, which said Jara had brought misfeasance to the bank. The committee also said Jara had failed to pay his taxes and had engaged in other unethical behavior.

Jara, a former bank official, was nominated by President Joe Biden to fill the post left vacant by the resignation of Senator Mark Warner, D-Va., who had been appointed to the Senate by a former President, Barack Obama.

Javits and Humphrey said the committee's findings were not only a matter of personal conduct but also of national security. They said they would continue to investigate the matter and would consider any additional information that might be available.

In a statement released earlier, the committee said it had found evidence of misfeasance and had recommended that Jara be removed from the post.

The two senators said they would continue to investigate the matter and that they would consider any additional information that might be available.
And some said, ‘What game?’

Police Beat
by MARY HANSEN
Staff Writer

An impromptu pep rally began Thursday afternoon outside Wilson Stadium as thousands of fans gathered for a Kiskick Hawks goal post dedication ceremony.

The site was also the location of a police activity in which the crowd gathered to react to what was expected to be a long and slow-moving event.

The... (Continued from page 2)

“...after all we'll all miss each other more than ever.”

I think Bob Comings Jr. could manage three people. I don’t really care. Football is for all ages. I was four years ago, but I picked up on it when he was playing. I gues... (Continued from page 1)

Police Beat
by MARY HANSEN
Staff Writer

An impromptu pep rally began Thursday afternoon outside Wilson Stadium as thousands of fans gathered for a Kiskick Hawks goal post dedication ceremony.

The site was also the location of a police activity in which the crowd gathered to react to what was expected to be a long and slow-moving event.

The... (Continued from page 2)
UI expands handicapped services

By MARILYN RUDOLPH

In order to meet the needs of the ever-increasing number of people suffering from environmental and engineering handicaps, the hospital entrance, many of the homes and other health care facilities will be defined as handicapped proof. This move is being taken by several hospitals in the area, including the Community Hospital, Glenwood Hospital, and the Midwest City Hospital.

In the future, the entrance to the hospital will be designed to accommodate people in wheelchairs and other handicapped individuals. This will include elevators, ramps, and chair lifts. Telephones and low drinking fountains will also be available to handicapped individuals.

In addition to being accessible in the orthopedically handicapped, the hospital will also be accessible to the blind and other visually handicapped. The hospital will have braille instructions for the blind, and there will be a designated area for the blind.

Nursing homes are already handicapped proof. By the end of the year, all nursing homes will be handicapped proof. This move is being taken to ensure that all people, regardless of their condition, will have access to the hospital.

Mason City mayor locates waste oil disposal system

MASON CITY, Iowa (AP) - A new waste oil disposal system has been installed at the Mason City Co-op.

Mayor Ken Runyon said the user has located the system at the local hospital. The system includes a disposal unit and a final disposal system. The disposal unit is located at the hospital and the final disposal unit is located at the hospital.

The disposal unit is located at the hospital and includes a disposal unit and a final disposal system. The disposal unit is located at the hospital and includes a disposal unit and a final disposal system. The disposal unit is located at the hospital and includes a disposal unit and a final disposal system.

The final disposal unit is located at the hospital and includes a disposal unit and a final disposal system. The disposal unit is located at the hospital and includes a disposal unit and a final disposal system.
Contractor system adds to migrants’ exploitation

On the Editor's Page

The political maneuvering of a few industry magnates, with the approval of the general public, has placed the land development moguls in control of the very market which the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has determined to be a major threat to the nation’s environment.

The EPA, through its new contractor system, has established a mechanism to allow companies to buy their way out of environmental regulations. This system, known as the “contractor system,” has been partially in place since 1975, but has recently been expanded to include a variety of new and innovative programs.

The contractor system allows companies to purchase permits and licenses that permit them to engage in activities that would otherwise be prohibited by environmental regulations. This system has been criticized for allowing companies to engage in activities that are harmful to the environment, while at the same time providing companies with the ability to avoid paying fines and penalties for their违法行为.

The contractor system has been widely criticized for its lack of transparency and accountability. The companies that purchase permits and licenses under the contractor system are not required to disclose the activities that they are engaging in, and the EPA does not have the authority to enforce the regulations that are supposed to govern these activities.

The contractor system has been particularly controversial in the context of land development, where companies are allowed to purchase permits that allow them to engage in activities that would otherwise be prohibited by environmental regulations. This has led to a situation where companies are able to develop land in ways that are harmful to the environment, while at the same time avoiding fines and penalties for their违法行为.

The contractor system has been particularly controversial in the context of land development, where companies are allowed to purchase permits that allow them to engage in activities that would otherwise be prohibited by environmental regulations. This has led to a situation where companies are able to develop land in ways that are harmful to the environment, while at the same time avoiding fines and penalties for their违法行为.

The contractor system has been particularly controversial in the context of land development, where companies are allowed to purchase permits that allow them to engage in activities that would otherwise be prohibited by environmental regulations. This has led to a situation where companies are able to develop land in ways that are harmful to the environment, while at the same time avoiding fines and penalties for their违法行为.

The contractor system has been particularly controversial in the context of land development, where companies are allowed to purchase permits that allow them to engage in activities that would otherwise be prohibited by environmental regulations. This has led to a situation where companies are able to develop land in ways that are harmful to the environment, while at the same time avoiding fines and penalties for their违法行为.
Protesters defy gym work

BOKO, (UPI) - Protesters at Kent State University went on the war path Saturday afternoon after the university administration failed to meet demands for concessions in the last round of contract talks. The demonstration, in which about 1,500 campus workers and students took part, marked the first use of school funds for a protest since the 1969 campus antiwar demonstration.

Concessions on the list include scheduled to be held this week, possibly as soon as Monday, VKZ President Roger Griffin said, adding that the proposed contract to at least 120 is from the initial lineout of the negotiations.

Two protesters were arrested Saturday when they two were arrested after their the authorities removed trees from blank site. They protesting effort.

The university's response was in the form of a letter to the protesters, saying they would not be allowed to return to campus. The university also said it would not participate in further negotiations until the protesters had left.

Civil rights leaders, however, said they would not back down. "We will not be intimidated," said Rev. Jesse Jackson, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

Jackson and others have been critical of the university's handling of the protests, saying it has not done enough to address the workers' concerns.

The university has also faced criticism from the National Labor Relations Board, which has threatened to file charges against the university for violating the rights of the workers.

"The university has not shown good faith in these negotiations," said Abernathy. "We have been willing to work with them, but they have not been willing to meet our demands."

A university spokeswoman said the university would not comment on the protests, but that it was committed to working with the workers to reach a fair agreement.

The protests have been ongoing since November, when the workers first went on strike. They have been calling for higher wages, better benefits, and the right to bargain collectively.

The university administration has said it cannot afford to give in to the workers' demands, citing financial problems caused by the ongoing recession.
Jabberwocky -- gratuitous glore

BY GAYLE GOODMAN

If you haven’t already gotten into the forefront of the con in Monty Python’s “The Meaning of Life,” you’re in for a real treat. The film will be especially disappointing for those expecting the holy silly of Monty Python and the Holy Grail, since at one point the audience was asked to determine the meaning of life, the universe and everything. If you missed it, you missed the opportunity to experience one of the most memorable comedy films of all time.

The University Symphony Orchestra offered its first performance of the season Saturday evening at the Hancher. The program opened with a rousing performance of Wagner’s “Götterdämmerung,” directed by assistant conductor Mike Brien. The performance was a welcome treat after the summer, and provided a solid foundation for the remainder of the program.

The original funky jazz fills Hancher: It’s 2½ decades for Crusaders

By Winton Barkey

Editorial Page Editor

The University Symphony Orchestra was a joyous feast for the eyes and ears this week as it performed a program of works, both old and new, that showcased the talents of its members and the creativity of its conductors. The program included a range of musical styles, from classical to contemporary, and featured performers such as soloists and groups who had previously performed with the orchestra.

One highlight of the performance was the premiere of a new work by local composer and musician Mark Wollert. The piece, titled “Jabberwocky,” was a playful and imaginative composition that showcased the talents of the orchestra’s members and the creative vision of its conductor. The work was well-received by the audience, who were impressed by its originality and skill.

Another standout of the program was the performance of “Don Quixote” by柴可夫斯基. The piece was a rousing and emotional work that showcased the technical prowess of the orchestra’s musicians and the musicality of its conductor. The performance was met with enthusiastic applause from the audience.

The University Symphony Orchestra continues to be a driving force in the local music community, providing opportunities for its members to perform with excellence and creativity. With the success of this recent performance, we look forward to the next, which promises to be just as exciting and rewarding.

UI Symphony Orchestra offers smack of theatrical extrazanzas

By Joe LeGere

Special to The Daily Iowan

The University Symphony Orchestra offered its first performance of the season at the Hancher Auditorium on Saturday evening. The program included a range of works, both old and new, that showcased the talents of its members and the creativity of its conductors. The performance was a joyous feast for the eyes and ears, and provided a solid foundation for the remainder of the season.

The opening piece of the program was “Jabberwocky” by Mark Wollert, a local composer and musician. The piece was a playful and imaginative composition that showcased the talents of the orchestra’s members and the creative vision of its conductor. The work was well-received by the audience, who were impressed by its originality and skill.

Another highlight of the program was the performance of “Don Quixote” by柴可夫斯基. The piece was a rousing and emotional work that showcased the technical prowess of the orchestra’s musicians and the musicality of its conductor. The performance was met with enthusiastic applause from the audience.

The University Symphony Orchestra continues to be a driving force in the local music community, providing opportunities for its members to perform with excellence and creativity. With the success of this recent performance, we look forward to the next, which promises to be just as exciting and rewarding.

The concert had its weak points, but overall it was a triumphant achievement. The music was uplifting, and the audience was delighted with the well-controlled display of melodies and bouncy bass lines rooted in the blues, but it’s a pity that earlier farce was overdone a little. However, the symphony continued its tradition of featuring prominent soloists, and this was no exception. The performance of the orchestra’s principal oboist was particularly impressive, and added a new dimension to the music.

The concert concluded with a rousing performance of “The Star Spangled Banner” by John Philip Sousa. The audience was on its feet, and the music was a fitting conclusion to a night of music that was both entertaining and educational.

In conclusion, the University Symphony Orchestra’s first performance of the season was a resounding success. The program included a range of works, both old and new, that showcased the talents of its members and the creativity of its conductors. The performance was a joyous feast for the eyes and ears, and provided a solid foundation for the remainder of the season. The orchestra continues to be a driving force in the local music community, providing opportunities for its members to perform with excellence and creativity. With the success of this recent performance, we look forward to the next, which promises to be just as exciting and rewarding.

UI Symphony Orchestra offers smack of theatrical extrazanzas

The concert had its weak points, but overall it was a triumphant achievement. The music was uplifting, and the audience was delighted with the well-controlled display of melodies and bouncy bass lines rooted in the blues, but it’s a pity that earlier farce was overdone a little. However, the symphony continued its tradition of featuring prominent soloists, and this was no exception. The performance of the orchestra’s principal oboist was particularly impressive, and added a new dimension to the music.

The concert concluded with a rousing performance of “The Star Spangled Banner” by John Philip Sousa. The audience was on its feet, and the music was a fitting conclusion to a night of music that was both entertaining and educational.

In conclusion, the University Symphony Orchestra’s first performance of the season was a resounding success. The program included a range of works, both old and new, that showcased the talents of its members and the creativity of its conductors. The performance was a joyous feast for the eyes and ears, and provided a solid foundation for the remainder of the season. The orchestra continues to be a driving force in the local music community, providing opportunities for its members to perform with excellence and creativity. With the success of this recent performance, we look forward to the next, which promises to be just as exciting and rewarding.

UI Symphony Orchestra offers smack of theatrical extrazanzas

The concert had its weak points, but overall it was a triumphant achievement. The music was uplifting, and the audience was delighted with the well-controlled display of melodies and bouncy bass lines rooted in the blues, but it’s a pity that earlier farce was overdone a little. However, the symphony continued its tradition of featuring prominent soloists, and this was no exception. The performance of the orchestra’s principal oboist was particularly impressive, and added a new dimension to the music.

The concert concluded with a rousing performance of “The Star Spangled Banner” by John Philip Sousa. The audience was on its feet, and the music was a fitting conclusion to a night of music that was both entertaining and educational.

In conclusion, the University Symphony Orchestra’s first performance of the season was a resounding success. The program included a range of works, both old and new, that showcased the talents of its members and the creativity of its conductors. The performance was a joyous feast for the eyes and ears, and provided a solid foundation for the remainder of the season. The orchestra continues to be a driving force in the local music community, providing opportunities for its members to perform with excellence and creativity. With the success of this recent performance, we look forward to the next, which promises to be just as exciting and rewarding.
Hawkeye D reigns
Continued from page yesterday, Iowa defensive back Jeff Kohrman claimed the game's most valuable player award.

"The whole game revolved around the great defense. We broke one and they broke one, but otherwise the defense were super," Connors said. "I think our defensive play was the difference in the game and been associated with a player at right, I dropped it off the wreck and back, and I didn't get the extra point square either.

The win was a great one for the Hawkeyes, but probably not one we took more satisfac
tion in the victory than Barker
Taylor's outstanding defensive
play.

"It was no emotional before the game, it was more in the wreck and in the trash. We had to do it to make the game

The win was a great one for
the Hawkeyes, but probably
not one we took more satisfac
tion in the victory than Barker
Taylor's outstanding defensive
play.

"It was no emotional before
the game, it was more in the wreck and in the trash. We had to do it to make the game

The win was a great one for
the Hawkeyes, but probably
not one we took more satisfac
tion in the victory than Barker
Taylor's outstanding defensive
play.

"It was no emotional before
the game, it was more in the wreck and in the trash. We had to do it to make the game

The win was a great one for
the Hawkeyes, but probably
not one we took more satisfac
tion in the victory than Barker
Taylor's outstanding defensive
play.

"It was no emotional before
the game, it was more in the wreck and in the trash. We had to do it to make the game

The win was a great one for
the Hawkeyes, but probably
not one we took more satisfac
tion in the victory than Barker
Taylor's outstanding defensive
play.

"It was no emotional before
the game, it was more in the wreck and in the trash. We had to do it to make the game

The win was a great one for
the Hawkeyes, but probably
not one we took more satisfac
tion in the victory than Barker
Taylor's outstanding defensive
play.
Hawkeye defense silences Cyclones

By ROGER TRUSNOL Sports Editor

Just by looking around Kinnick Stadium during the past few months was enough to realize that the 1977 Hawkeye defense was a big deal. It was the kind of team that had been a part of the Big Ten dynasty for years.

The visitors that had driven Iowa fans during the past few months was enough to realize that the 1977 Hawkeye defense was a big deal. It was the kind of team that had been a part of the Big Ten dynasty for years.

The visitors that had driven Iowa fans during the past few months was enough to realize that the 1977 Hawkeye defense was a big deal. It was the kind of team that had been a part of the Big Ten dynasty for years.

The visitors that had driven Iowa fans during the past few months was enough to realize that the 1977 Hawkeye defense was a big deal. It was the kind of team that had been a part of the Big Ten dynasty for years.

The visitors that had driven Iowa fans during the past few months was enough to realize that the 1977 Hawkeye defense was a big deal. It was the kind of team that had been a part of the Big Ten dynasty for years.