A student atop the Religious Center's gargoyle-dotted facade of Southern Illinois University, Carbondale, has been banned by the university from wearing his headgear. The student, who identified himself only as "Judy," received a verbal warning Monday for wearing a cowboy hat.

The student was not allowed to enter the building.

"Your name is Judy. What is your significance to the state?"

"You're a poor clown."

Judy replied, "I'm a philosopher."

"You're a clown out to pick on people."

"You're a bad name!"

"You're a sign that the state is leading people to a bad name."

The student was asked to remove the hat, but he refused. He was then told to leave the building or be arrested.

Grants larger, UI a lot richer

The UI received more than $46.4 million in grants and contracts last year, setting a new record for the university, according to the Office of Sponsored Research, which tracks grants. The figure is more than double the amount UI received in fiscal year 1995. The increase is due partly to an increase in funds received from the federal government.

The UI Foundation contributed $11.3 million, said UI President J. Donald Youngblood. Larry Beisel, executive director and treasurer of the UI Foundation, said he attributes the increase to the Capital Gains property increase and the Telephone Sales Fund. The UI Foundation also contributes financial aid and scholarship funds.

In 1995, UI foreign students contributed $42.3 million to the university, according to the UI Office of Sponsored Research. UI foreign students contribute $30 million to the UI budget yearly, said UI foundation President J. Donald Youngblood.

Students trained and enrolled at the universities. Last year, the UI Foundation contributed $42.3 million to the UI budget. That money was used for scholarships, grants and other university programs.

Two million dollars, according to UI foundation President J. Donald Youngblood, was contributed to UI by former UI students.

PAPER (1971) — A French experimental flying bee has now been seen with a red cilium for saving sweet Alphonse's fresh pears, it was announced today by Prof. Robert D. Lidman at the Annual Meeting of the French Academy of Sciences.

"The bee, which has a red cilium, is able to find its way from the flower to the fruit, which is rich in pollen," Prof. Lidman said. "This is a significant development in the field of entomology."
The death of black consciousness leader Steven Biko while in police custody in 1977 is still a cause for concern in South Africa today. The government's apartheid policies, which were demanding a special inquest into Biko's death, a demand that has been voiced by thousands of people attending memorial services on Sunday, 1977.

Perhaps this optimism is naive. The government may select a liberal or a constitutionalist to run the official enquiry, but other members of the government, like Minister of Justice, Dr. Pieter Botha, have expressed a more pessimistic view. They think that the government may be able to get away with the murder of Biko, and that the real story of Biko's death may never be told.

The government's official line is that Biko died of a heart attack, but many people believe that Biko was murdered. Some evidence suggests that Biko was beaten and tied up before his death, and that he was put into a sewer. This evidence has not been officially released, and it is not clear if Biko was even alive when the government said he died.

There was so much to do, so much going on that the "first picture" at the fair was a resource exchange, a living library, said Marla Campbell, fair director.

"There were no hot dogs, no fried chicken. The door prize was a fair, but not by the Iowa State Fair," said Campbell. "We were more like a living library, a resource exchange, a place where people could come in and find out what was available here," she said.

"We wanted people in Iowa City to see all the resources we have available," said Campbell.

"I think we've got a chance to do something with this," said Campbell. "We've got a chance to really get the community involved." She added that the fair was "not about making money, but about making people feel good.""11

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — The Australian, French and Swedes promise to return here in July and August to help defend their Olympic titles. But Turner won't promise anything. The situation for Turner's Olympic team is not as good as expected. The team is not fully prepared, and the athletes are not in top form. Turner is still considering the possibility of a complete withdrawal from the Olympics.

The Australian boat is now the best in the world, but Turner said he would consider withdrawing his team if the Australian boat wins a gold medal. The Australian boat has been training in a small, enclosed space and is not in top form.
