A campaign is to fight the proposed Tenant-Landlord Ordinance by some tenants who feel the ordinance is too severe. The ordinance, if passed, may mean many hardships to the tenants in the Murray area. The ordinance states that the landlord may not raise rents without giving three months notice. The tenant, before the notice is given, must have the right to go to court to stop the landlord from raising the rent. If the tenant loses the court case, he will have to pay the extra rent. Tenant groups are opposing the ordinance, saying that it is too severe. They say that it will cause many hardships to the tenants and that it is not necessary. They would like to see a more moderate ordinance passed. The ordinance is to be voted on in the next election, and it is expected that it will be passed. However, tenant groups are working to have the ordinance defeated. They are planning to organize a large campaign to educate people about the ordinance and to get them to vote against it. They believe that if they can get enough people to vote against the ordinance, it will be defeated. The tenant groups are also planning to meet with their local representatives to try to get them to vote against the ordinance. They believe that if they can get enough support from the representatives, the ordinance will be defeated. The tenant groups are working hard to get their message out and to get as many people as possible to vote against the ordinance. They believe that their hard work will pay off and that the ordinance will be defeated.

Senator to vote on NFB recognition

By TOM WAPP

A vote in formal recognition of the local chapter of the National Federation of the Blind (NFB) as a student organization will be taken at the Student Senate meeting, and whatever the outcome will be said to be determined by the action of the Senate. If the recognition vote is to be held, the Senate must notify the University of the request in order to be able to have the matter put on the agenda.

Jack Cooper, chair of the Solidarity Committee, said, "We are voting on whether to recognize the NFB student chapter at the University" and if the recognition vote is passed, the council has already made plans to file an appeal, representing the NFB's position and their belief that the issue matters. The question is whether the NFB organization should be allowed to operate on campus, and the legislation is to be reviewed by the Senate committee for possible adoption.

The issue of whether the NFB organization should be allowed to operate on campus, and the legislation is to be reviewed by the Senate committee for possible adoption. The NFB is a non-profit organization, and it is believed that the issue is of sufficient importance to justify the extra effort required to pursue it.

Indian confab planned to charge exploitation

By DAVID REICHER

With the new semester underway, the University of Iowa Indian Students' Council is planning to charge exploitation and to support the rights of the Native Americans. The council is planning to organize a series of events to raise awareness about the issues facing Native Americans.

The council is planning to organize a series of events to raise awareness about the issues facing Native Americans, including a conference on Native American issues, a site visit to a Native American reservation, and a film screening of a documentary about the history of Native American struggles.

Breeders

In a recently leaked memo, the U.S. Senate voted to continue building the construction of nuclear breeder reactors. Explaining, "We do what we must do," congressional leaders argue that breeder reactors, as part of the President's plan, are essential to meeting the nation's energy needs.

While some argue that breeder reactors promise more, others worry about the inherent risks associated with operating them. While breeder reactors may produce more radioactive fuel than current reactors, they also create more problems. The weapons-grade plutonium produced by breeder reactors could be utilized for nuclear weapons, posing a significant threat to national security.

Many experts and activists, including members of the International Campaign to Abolish Nuclear Weapons, are calling for a global moratorium on the construction of breeder reactors. They argue that the risks associated with these facilities far outweigh any potential benefits. As the debate continues, it is clear that the issue of nuclear breeder reactors will remain a contentious one for years to come.

Kent State: Monument to conscience

To the Editor:

April is a time to mark for what's right, just and fair. Kent State University is the place to start. On April 12, 1970, thousands of students took to the streets, chanting, "We are the people. We are the world. We are the ones who will determine the fate of the world." They were protesting the Vietnam War and the presence of National Guard troops on campus. What began as a peaceful demonstration turned violent, and 4 students lost their lives.

It is important to remember this tragedy and the sacrifices made. We must not let the past be forgotten. The Kent State Massacre serves as a reminder of the importance of peaceful protest and the need for students to be heard.

To the Editor:

April 12, 1970, was a day in history that will never be forgotten. The Kent State Massacre was a series of violent events that took place on the campus of Kent State University in Ohio. The deaths of four students and the wounding of nine others shocked the nation and sparked a nationwide debate about the Vietnam War and the role of the military in higher education.

In the wake of this tragic event, the campus community came together to honor the memory of those who lost their lives. A monument was erected as a permanent reminder of the sacrifice made.

To the Editor:

April 12, 1970, was a day that will be remembered for years to come. The Kent State Massacre was a tragic event that had a profound impact on the nation. In the wake of this tragedy, the Kent State community came together to honor the memory of the four students who lost their lives.

Today, we pause to remember those who lost their lives that day. We honor their memory and commit to working towards a safer and more just future.

Sterility

Well, it's finally happening. Sterility has been officially acknowledged by the Chemical Co. in Lafferty, Conn. After nearly 10 years of scientific research and development, the new sterility product is finally ready for market.

Several women in the state's fourth district are reported to be experiencing sterility, but most are still recovering from the initial shock. The product has been tested extensively and is expected to be available later this year.

The sterility product, known as Sterility-Aid, is a safe and effective method for preventing unwanted pregnancies. It is a combination of a hormone and a contraceptive pill that works by preventing the release of an egg from the ovary.

In some Latin American countries, such as Colombia and Mexico, sterility is often used as a means of controlling population growth. However, the sterility product is designed to be reversible and can be discontinued at any time.

A cautious sigh of relief swept over Iowa yesterday as the resignation of Budget Director Bert Lance was announced. Although Democrats expressed their extremely sensitive decision for Lance's resignation, some expressed concerns about the impact it will have on the Iowa Democratic party.

SST ban would offer 'hatchet' best victim for Carter

SULLIED (UPI) - A government consultant said Wednesday the Carter administration plans to offer "hatchet money" in foreign policies to the states of the southern sunbelt.

The consultant appeared to be high selective in regard to these areas in which it seeks to enforce his high moral principles and values. - Minister Rowan Cronje.

The consultant's remarks were investigated by the FBI and the DEQ as a delegate back to his feet, what Mik asked, bravely.

Indeed, the men could see the jacket that had sagged before under the mid-section.

The proposals call for a British resident commissioner to be the likeliest in those areas in which he wishes to enforce his high moral values. - Mr. Carter.

The government must decide whether it will allow the pragmatic to operate the nuclear plant.

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Members of Congress who favor granting U.S. military right-of-way easements over federal lands in foreign countries have set a three-day showdown a few days before the Senate is to consider legislation to build up defense spending.

The showdown is expected to be the likeliest in those areas in which he wishes to enforce his high moral values.

The Western peace plan for Rhodesia, sponsored last month by U.S. Ambassador Andrew Young and British Foreign Secretary Sir Edward Craven, would result in a black minority military dictatorship and the military takeover of all areas in which he wishes to enforce his high moral values.

"The Japanese market is no longer the focus," said Minister Rowan Cronje.

The momentary refusal to respond and the reluctance to respond to the test is the likeliest in those areas in which he wishes to enforce his high moral values.

"It's not a question of being black and white," said Minister Rowan Cronje.

But when he succeeded at persuading President Carter and British Foreign Secretary Sir Edward Craven to allow the pragmatic to operate the nuclear plant, the most important on a permanent basis, not only the best, the likeliest in those areas in which he wishes to enforce his high moral values.

"It's not a question of being black and white," said Minister Rowan Cronje.

The ins to book collecting

BY JAY WALLIS

As an American book collector, I found the following tips useful:

1. Start small: Begin with a small collection and gradually build up.
2. Choose a subject: Specialize in a particular subject, such as literature, art, or history.
4. Stay informed: Read publications and attend book sales to keep up with the latest finds.
5. Network: Join a local book club or forum to share your passion and learn from others.

By following these tips, you can build a valuable and enjoyable collection of your own.
Edison water restrictor over the pipe in his house, he says, has made him more careful about the amount of water available at any one time. "I have been able to wash clothes in about half the time," he says. "Now we can do four loads in one half hour."

Those who exceed their limits are subject to having their water shut off. Those who do not use water are subject to having their water shut off. The restriction is in effect until further notice.

By the way we've come to learn about water, we've also learned about the importance of water to life. Without water, life as we know it cannot exist. So let's use water wisely and conserve it for future generations.

Smiley

By REBECCA GERBER

Chick Smiley swung off the outward picture of another woman. "Thank you," he said, "for a very beautiful girl. I am really glad you showed up."

"Yes, sir," replied Smiley, "my name is Gray." Gray was a handsome young man with a friendly smile. He was wearing a white shirt and a blue tie.

"I'm glad you're here," said Gray. "Would you like me to take your picture?"

Smiley nodded his head yes. Gray took a moment to focus his camera. Smiley sat perfectly still, his eyes looking directly into the lens. Gray snapped the picture and handed it to Smiley.

"There you are," he said. "Now, would you like to see the other picture?"

Smiley reached out to take the picture, but Gray held it up in front of him. Smiley looked at the picture and smiled. "Thank you," he said. "I'll take it with me.

Gray handed him the picture and Smiley walked away, his mind wandering to the other picture. He wondered what it looked like and if it was as beautiful as the one Gray had just taken.
By the time I got to Phoenix

By BARBARA DAVIDSON

The impression that one receives in Phoenix is of a sprawling, sunburnt, posh, yet somewhat small, somewhat drab, somewhat ordinary city. The heat and humidity are constant, the people are friendly, but one feels that there is a lack of depth and character in the city itself. It is a place where one can get a good suntan and enjoy the outdoors, but it lacks the charm and sophistication of a more cosmopolitan city.

It takes much more than just looking at the 20th century to realize the significance of the Civil Rights Movement. The struggles and sacrifices of that period are still felt today, as seen in the ongoing fight for racial justice.

Meantime, out at the Coralville Drive-In

A drive-in theater is a relic of a bygone era, offering a nostalgic experience for those who remember a time when movies were seen on a screen in the middle of a field. The Coralville Drive-In is still operating, offering a unique and enjoyable way to watch movies.

Star Trek: a gathering of the faithful

WATERLOO - They came here Sept. 9-11 to celebrate and remember. They were celebrating Star Trek's 40th anniversary, and they were remembering the glory that was Star Trek in the past. Besides the fans, merchandise dealers came to peddle their wares, and promoters came to peddle their programs. There were hundreds of people at the Star Trek Convention, and the spirit of the gathering seemed to be best expressed by two of them - James "Scotty" Doohan, the actor, and Karl Breese, the "Trekker."

It shall return

"Star Trek is returning to television," Gene Roddenberry, creator of the series, has announced. According to The Washington Post, "Star Trek" will be back on the air with thirteen episodes of Star Trek. It is a cost to Paramount of seven million dollars. Production will begin in November and the new episode will be broadcast in the fall of 1975.

It will return as "Star Trek II." The second episode of "Star Trek II" will feature the same cast of the original "Star Trek." Leonard Nimoy as Spock, Leonard Nimoy as Spock, and the search for new worlds will continue.

It is the return of a classic. Roddenberry told the Post that he is "very excited" about the new series. ""It's a chance to bring back the characters," he said. "We're going to do something really special this time."

Small Change

By BAY WALKER

"Small Change," released in the United States on March 10, is a film about a middle-class couple who struggle to make ends meet. The film is a realistic and moving portrayal of the difficulties faced by working-class families.

The actor

James Doohan was the hit of the weekend. The actor who played Scotty in "Star Trek" was in town for the convention, and he was the center of attention. Doohan told the press that he was "very pleased" with the response to the convention.

The Trekker

The Trekker, Ted Brown, was one of the many fans who came to the convention. Brown told the press that he was "very excited" to see his favorite "Star Trek" characters again.

Small Change is a new film by Stephen Frears, written by William Friedkin. The film is a realistic and moving portrayal of the difficulties faced by working-class families. The film is a powerful and thought-provoking piece of work.
Almonds with which water is used and spread, fourth of Phoenix. Water is to Phoenix as oil is to electricity. A single water molecule is capable of containing the equivalent of 1,000,000 volts of electricity. This makes it possible to use water as a powerful tool for controlling the flow of electricity. In fact, water is used in many industrial processes for cooling, cleaning, and even as a coolant for engines. The ability to control water flow is essential in maintaining the stability and efficiency of these processes.

The case against conspicuous water consumption

Table 1-1-1-1 has been tabled below. There is no river that has not a liquid in it. To a liquid there are no watermarks. Water is the only liquid in the universe. Water is the only liquid that cannot be contaminated by any other liquid. Water is the only liquid that can exist in all three states of matter: solid, liquid, and gas.

Welcome to Phoenix, the city that saved water.

"The case against conspicuous water consumption" is a title often used to refer to a book or essay that argues against the excessive and wasteful use of water. The book or essay often cites examples of how water is overused or misused, and makes a case for more responsible water use. It may also argue for the development of new technologies or policies to reduce water usage.

Classic cars — Iowa City style

By DAVID SEMINGWAY

We were running late to catch the last showing of Hunter's famous movie, so I was anxious to get out of town before anything happened. My heart sank as I spotted the huge sign advertising Llewellyn's Car Show at the local shopping center. But, to my surprise, the lot was mostly empty. As I turned the last corner, I noticed a small group of people standing around a car. I approached them to find out what was going on.

"What's the big deal?" I asked, sensing a bit of excitement. "Oh, this is the Llewellyn's Car Show," one of the people replied. "It's a monthly event where people bring their cars to sell or trade them. We have cars from different eras, and there's food and music as well."

"That sounds interesting," I said, preparing to head back to my car. "I think I'll check it out."

As I entered the lot, I was greeted by a warm smile from the owner of the black 1967 Porsche 911. It was a vintage car, and the owner seemed proud of it. "This is my baby," he explained. "I've owned it for over 30 years, and it's still in good condition."

I couldn't help but laugh. "That's quite a commitment," I said. "And it's not like you can just drive it around town like a regular car."

"No, but it's worth it," he replied. "I love driving it, and I love showing it off."

I walked around the lot, admiring the different cars. There were old favorites like the 1937 Packard and the 1958 Chevelle, as well as newer models like the 2000 Corvette. It was a great mix, and I enjoyed talking to the owners about their cars.

As the sun began to set, the氛围 grew more relaxed. I sat down on a bench and watched a group of teenagers admiring a classic car. "What are they doing?" I asked one of them.

"We're just checking it out," one replied. "It's a cool car, but it's a little out of our price range."

"That's true," I agreed. "But it's still fun to see."

As I drove home, I couldn't help but think about the car show. It was a unique event, and I'm glad I got to experience it. Maybe I'll check it out again next month.
