

The Daily Iowan/John Danicic Jr.

These ticket-bearing cars, parked at the corner of Clinton and College streets, are lined up behind an apparently amicable solution to a thorny problem: how to keep the cars off the sidewalk while allowing free movement for pedestrians and handicapped persons confined to wheelchairs. That area is being closed off, pending construction of the Dubuque-College street pedestrian mall.

"We had, in the past, a severe problem with cars driving over the sidewalk," Streets Supt. Craig Minter said. So early last week the city installed fences that blocked off not only the street, but part of the sidewalk, as well. But a local merchant, Bud Sueppel, told the Iowa City Council last week that his flower shop at 117 E. College was obstructed, too. The Council decided that those fences constituted a good idea carried too far, and had the city make modifications. Now the fences block off only the streets, and planters have been put in at the entrances of sidewalks "for both decorative purposes and secondly to discourage any cars from coming into that area," Minter said. Sueppel, having gotten rid of the obstruction in front of his business, also said he was pleased with the arrangement.

Council rejects ordinance, 5-2

By RHONDA DICKEY
Staff Writer

The proposed tenant-landlord ordinance was rejected Tuesday night by a 5-2 vote by the Iowa City Council and will now be put before the voters on the Nov. 8 ballot.

Because the ordinance has been so controversial, the councilors voiced their reasons for voting the way they did, at the suggestion of Mayor Mary Neuhauer.

Councilor Robert Vevera voted "no," and said he thinks the proposed ordinance "is going a little too far" in attempting to correct all the wrongs of the rental housing situation here.

Councilor Carol deProse, who voted in favor of the proposed ordinance, said she has supported the concept of a tenant-landlord ordinance, but opposed a previous tenant-landlord ordinance because the legal opinion issued then was so negative. "As late as last Friday I did indeed oppose the landlord-tenant ordinance," deProse said, but added that the legal opinion City Atty. John Hayek issued was not as strong as she had expected. DeProse later said the discussion of the proposed ordinance Friday had "deteriorated" and convinced her the legality of the ordinance would have to be tested in the courts, instead of being determined at this point. Councilor David Perret said he has "decided to approve with some reluctance" the proposed ordinance, and said he is not sure the city has the authority to adopt the ordinance. Perret said he opposed the provision of the proposed ordinance that allows for automatic renewal of leases, as well as the provision giving tenants the right to sublease.

Neuhauer voted against the proposed ordinance although she said many provisions of the ordinance are "things that just ought to be." However, she opposes automatic renewal of leases and some of the sublease provisions, as well as the provision concerning receivership. She added that she "has problems" with the provisions that allow a tenant to have repairs made and deduct the cost from rent.

"I would hope that because of what has come about, the apartment owners would adopt (for) themselves a code of ethics that would embody many of these provisions," Neuhauer said.

Councilor Max Selzer, who also voted against the proposed ordinance, said the legal opinion Hayek issued was a major reason for his vote. "I do not believe that this proposed ordinance is in the best interests of the citizens of Iowa City," he added.

Councilor L.P. Foster cast his vote against the proposed ordinance because, he said, the initiative process should complete itself at the Nov. 8 election. The initiative process was "put in the charter for just that purpose," Foster said. Referring to Selzer's discussion on the legality of the proposed ordinance, Foster said, "I feel as Max does — that the legality question will have to be decided by the courts."

Councilor John Balmer voted against the proposed ordinance, and said, "I believe we have vigorous code enforcement underway now." He added that he believed such enforcement would be "even stronger" under the proposed Housing Occupancy and Maintenance Code. "It's got to be remembered that rents are going to rise, (and) costs are going to rise" if the tenant-landlord ordinance is adopted, Balmer said. "I'm just afraid it's going to price certain people out of the market."

At Hayek's suggestion, following the vote the council voted to contact Tom Slockett, County Commissioner of Elections, to have him place the proposed ordinance on the Nov. 8 ballot.

In other action, the council voted to submit an application for the State Transit Assistance Grant. The council eliminated only one project from the application, the transit garage site feasibility study. Other projects, such as the projects for SEATS elderly and handicapped transit, and capital projects such as two-way radios, were included in the grant application.

The council also set a public hearing on an interim ordinance for a moratorium on issuance of building permits for new and expansion construction in two selected areas in northern Iowa City. The moratorium would exclude single-family residential housing, and would be in effect until May 31, 1978 or until a new zoning ordinance and map are adopted, whichever comes first. The council voted to set the public hearing for Oct. 25, and will refer the matter to the Planning and Zoning Commission for recommendations.

Soviet-U.S. relations reach 'downright slump'

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko told the United Nations Tuesday that Soviet-American relations had reached a "downright slump," and then flew to Washington to meet with President Carter and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance.

The surprise announcement that Gromyko and Vance were interrupting their U.N. visits to meet with Carter followed a grim Soviet warning in the General Assembly Tuesday that efforts to negotiate a new Strategic Arms Limitation treaty were stalemated over the U.S. development of the neutron bomb and the cruise missile.

Both were issues that Carter and Gromyko were expected to thrash out again at their second meeting in the past week.

While Vance met a string of European and Latin American diplomats in his hotel room, Gromyko strode to the podium as the first of the "superpower" speakers at the new U.N. General Assembly with a speech heavy on generalities and light on surprises.

Even his attack on America's weapons development lacked the old diplomatic warrior's sting. He dismissed the neutron bomb as one of America's "merciless types of weapons" and, predictably, blamed the cruise missile for delaying a new strategic arms limitation agreement.

"Unfortunately," he said in the second day of three weeks of U.N. general debates, "it has to be stated that recently Soviet-American relations have experienced certain stagnation if not a downright slump."

He spoke to a hall divided between delegates and empty seats.

Ordinance's costs an issue

By STUART TARR
Staff Writer

Potential cost increases to both Iowa City tenants and landlords because of the proposed Tenant-Landlord Ordinance will be a major campaign issue in the weeks prior to the Nov. 8 election.

The Iowa City Council did not pass the ordinance Tuesday, so it must be presented to the voters in the Nov. 8 general election.

Under Iowa City's home rule charter, public-initiated legislation must either be passed by the council or placed on the ballot for the public to vote on.

The Tenant-Landlord Ordinance is the first exercise of public-initiated legislation in Iowa City.

Opponents of the ordinance have said the ordinance will raise rents in Iowa City because it will cost more to enforce, it will prolong the housing shortage by retarding the flow of loan money for new units, and it will increase the cost of maintenance.

Proponents of the ordinance admit that it will cost the tenant and landlord some money, but they say the benefits far outweigh the costs. They also say some of the opponents' arguments "don't hold water."

Bob Hibbs, chairman of the Iowa City Housing Commission and a local landlord, said, "Regardless of how much the cost of this ordinance is, it will have to be borne by the tenant."

Iowa City is at the limit on property taxes it can assess, and the administration costs of the ordinance will probably come from licensing fees for rental units, Hibbs said.

Michael Kucharzak, director of Housing and Inspection Services for Iowa

City, agrees with Hibbs that the cost of administering the ordinance would be funded by an increase in licensing fees, but he termed the increase "insignificant."

Tenants United for Action, a group supporting the ordinance, disputes Kucharzak's budget estimates, but agrees that the increase would not be significant.

Kucharzak's estimate of the increase in administrative costs is $74,000 for the first year the ordinance is in effect, and $43,000 for subsequent years.

The $74,000 figure is a maximum, according to Kucharzak, and includes costs that won't be needed if room for two additional inspectors can be found in the city building.

Tenants United for Action states that the increase in administrative costs should be only $25,000 to $30,000 per year. Harry Baum of the Citizens Housing Center said that even if Kucharzak's figures are correct, the cost to the individual tenant should only be about 70 cents per month for the first year and 40 cents per month for subsequent years.

Hibbs said, however, it is the little things that add up and raise rents. "The people voting for the ordinance should be aware that they are voting directly to increase their rents."

"Five years from now, rents will be up due to an accumulation of these little things, and then there will be people asking for rent control."

The real reason for high rents in Iowa City is the housing shortage, Baum said, and although something like a fair rent board is a possibility, the city, federal government and local banks should create housing to help bring down rents.

Opponents of the ordinance have also said the ordinance would make it more difficult for developers to get financing for new units.

Hibbs said a provision such as city receivership of property that a landlord fails to bring up to housing code standards is a strike against Iowa City developers in getting loans. "If the money can go to another market, the lender will probably loan elsewhere," he said.

If a developer has considerable net worth, he is probably still likely to get the loan, Hibbs said. "The bigger fellow has a better chance, and the little guy will be shoved out of the market. The big boys will be hurt the least, but the financing for the six-plex and eight-plex unit will be more difficult."

Curt Heidt, a loan officer for American Federal Savings and Loan, which has financed a majority of the new apartment construction in Iowa City the past year, said the ordinance would cause little problem for new dwellings because these dwellings would probably meet housing code standards.

Dave Peterson, a loan officer for American Federal's Davenport office, which handles larger loans for the Iowa City area, said, "The ordinance will probably have a dramatic effect on the older property that is beginning to wear in things like plumbing, furnace and electrical wiring."

Baum said the ordinance should actually help secure financing for new units since more people would want to live in Iowa City and be protected by the ordinance. In turn, he said, the vacancy rate would lower — one of the things a lender looks at in deciding on a loan.

Exxon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Exxon Corp. consented Tuesday to federal charges of paying more than $56.5 million in bribes and illegal political contributions in Italy and 15 other countries and keeping a Japanese parliamentarian on its payroll.

Exxon neither admitted nor denied charges filed by the Securities and Exchange Commission in U.S. District Court. But the world's largest corporation consented to an injunction which forbids the payments to continue.

Exxon's payments are the largest ever uncovered by the SEC in its four-year investigation of corporate bribery. Lockheed Aircraft Corp. had previously admitted taking more than $38 million in questionable payments.

The SEC said $55.25 million of the payoffs were made in Italy. Although Exxon claimed the payments were for political campaigns, the SEC alleged the bulk of the payoffs were commercial bribes in which Exxon was rewarded with Italian government contracts.

The SEC said the payoffs covered a period of 1963 to 1975 when the Senate subcommittee on multinational corporations subpoenaed Exxon's corporate records and forced company executives to disclose at least $46 million in payoffs, largely in Italy.

Energy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With some members grumbling and others in an almost festive spirit, the Senate Tuesday moved into what could be an all-night filibuster on energy — its first since the civil rights debates of 1964.

Both sides — those who want to deregulate natural gas prices and those who don't — were working behind the scenes to try to put together some compromise on which a majority could agree, to end the filibuster.

But so far neither reported success. "I'll be here all night," vowed Sen. James Abourezk, D-S. Dak., one of the leaders of the filibuster aimed at blocking deregulation of natural gas. Abourezk said that step would directly cost the American public $162 billion by 1990 in higher gas bills.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, was waging the filibuster with Abourezk by bringing up more than 500 amendments one after another in endless succession. He said deregulation would add $23 a month to the average American's gas bill by 1985.

Sterility

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — A U.S. District Court judge says he is considering letting the parents of three mentally retarded girls from different families have them sterilized.

"I'm inclined to give relief here," Judge M. Joseph Blumenfeld said Monday. But he said legal problems must be resolved first.

The parents have asked the court to order the University of Connecticut's John Dempsey Hospital to perform the operations.

During a hearing Monday, Blumenfeld ordered UConn attorney John McKenna and Judith Mears, lawyer for the parents, to write a proposed court order allowing the operations.

Bugging

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Investigations into alleged U.S. intelligence bugging during the delicate Panama Canal treaty negotiations and Panama's discovery of the operation took a new turn Tuesday night with reports of a double agent who worked both sides.

These were the developments in allegations that U.S. intelligence in 1975 and 1976 carried out electronic surveillance operations on Panamanian officials — including their personal and sexual lives — and that the Panamanians found out about it.

— Army sources told UPI that the FBI is investigating a former U.S. Army sergeant allegedly involved in the operation who has been subpoenaed by a Senate subcommittee which does not know his present whereabouts.

— Two other Americans, one possibly an intelligence officer to a communications and signal unit and the other an enlisted man, may be involved.

Abortion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House set the stage Tuesday for reopening its battle with the Senate over federal financing of abortions.

Anti-abortion forces in the House showed little inclination to yield on their proposed ban on use of federal funds for abortions except to save the mother's life.

The Senate has insisted abortions be allowed in cases of rape or incest or where a doctor determines it is "medically necessary."

Students still in temp housing to get permanent rooms soon

By BERNARD S. SMITH Staff Writer

As of Tuesday, of the 98 students who remain in temporary housing, 26 have been offered permanent spaces this week and more will be assigned to 44 spaces currently available in permanent housing, Livingston said.

In addition to spaces that open as students drop their registrations, Livingston said there are now 40 spaces available in the new Hawkeye Park mobile home court that are being offered to single students on a permanent basis. The mobile homes were originally intended for use as married student housing, but when the court was completed in late August, many families had settled elsewhere.

Livingston said that after this school year, the mobile home court will be returned to use for married students. Offering the homes to single students this year is "an attempt to have them rented for the year instead of having them standing open" as well as an aid to temporary housing, he said.

The Hawkeye Park mobile homes rent for $130 per month including water.

Over 600 students were placed in temporary housing at the beginning of the school year to await word on dropouts, no-shows and the opening of 100 new spaces at the Oakdale campus.

The UI Housing Clearinghouse is currently receiving about 15 requests a day for housing, according to Jean Kendall, Union faculty coordinator. She said some of those requests are from people who have housing "but are reshuffling," looking for a better place or one that is a little cheaper.

Kendall said the community was "very responsive" to appeals through service organizations, the media and area churches for both permanent and temporary housing listings. She said the clearinghouse still has about 300 listings and receives requests and new listings year round.

The clearinghouse was receiving over 4,000 inquiries per week during the height of the housing rush earlier this fall.

Promotion increases university enrollments

DES MOINES (UPI) — Enrollment is up this year at many of Iowa's small universities thanks to an increased interest sparked by promotion, an official for the Iowa Association of Private Colleges and Universities said Tuesday.

"There is no question but we were down in enrollment. But this year it is increasing at many of our schools, largely because we have been working at it, promoting ourselves," said Mary Harlan, association public relations coordinator.

"We are working hard," she said, "to try to get the message across that there's an alternative in Iowa to the regents' institutions."

The main thrust of the promotion is "to sell the idea that there is a private liberal arts education available in Iowa. We want people to know there are still places where they can go, receive a good education and that are small enough that they feel like an individual," Ms. Harlan said.

"Many people are finding they are dissatisfied with the large schools' emphasis. People like the small college atmosphere," she said.

The means to this has been a series of radio spots, releases and promotional appearances.

"We have received strong response from people. I think to some extent there is a return to some provincialism in the state — people like an area of the state and would like to stay there."

"Also the smaller schools serve portions of the population which might have problems in larger schools. There are terrific options for the student," Ms. Harlan said.

There presently are 28 private college and universities in the state, which educate 30 per cent of the state's students, she said.

This compares to the three regents' institutions, University of Iowa, Iowa State University and University of Northern Iowa, which educate the majority of the remaining students.

"This used to be reversed. We used to educate more than 50 per cent of the students in the state," she said.

The association doesn't feel it can totally turn the percentages around.

Rhodes: No evidence I caused Kent deaths

CINCINNATI (UPI) — In his first reaction to a court order that he must again stand trial in the Kent State shootings case, Ohio Gov. James A. Rhodes contended Tuesday there is no evidence he caused the deaths of four students on May 4, 1970.

Attorneys acting on Rhodes' behalf appealed the retrial order by arguing in court, "There is no evidence that any action, or omission to act, of Gov. Rhodes was the cause of any injury..."

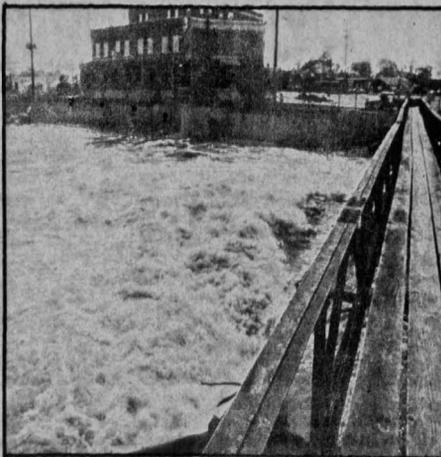

"There is no evidence that Gov. Rhodes misused any of his powers. There is no evidence that Gov. Rhodes took personal command of the National Guard at Kent or that he issued any order to the National Guard on May 4, 1970.

"The uncontroverted evidence in the record can lead reasonable minds to only one conclusion: at all times Gov. Rhodes acted reasonably, in good faith and within the scope of his duties as governor."

Rhodes had ordered the guardsmen into Kent to quell an anti-Vietnam war demonstration.

Rhodes' appeal to the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals was the governor's first reaction to the court's order two weeks ago that a retrial be conducted in a $46 million lawsuit filed by relatives of victims against Rhodes and guardsmen.

New student ID's won't carry photos

Photographs will not be reappearing on student identification cards in the near future, despite a request made one year ago by the registrar's office, according to W.A. Cox, UI registrar.

Cox said the administration was asked to budget the cost of a new identification card process but did not. "There were apparently more important things that needed the money," he said.

The use of student photos was discontinued in 1974, after the cost was deemed to offset the benefits. Since then, several UI departments have requested that photos be included on student identification cards in the future.

"The photos were discontinued as an economic move. They weren't considered to be important," Cox said. "Since then, some services have decided they are important and should be reinstated."

One department Cox cited is the Department of Evaluation and Examination Services. He said the department is worried about security at tests. Without photos on the cards, students can have someone else take a test for them, he said.

Dick Fox, administrative accountant at the Union, said the Union is "not pushing" for the return of photo identification cards, although they can be useful.

"Photos wouldn't make that much of a difference," Fox said. "However, photos would help, especially in cashing checks and charging large purchases at the Union."

Legionnaire's case diagnosed in Illinois

MOLINE, Ill. (UPI) — A suspected case of Legionnaire's Disease has been reported by Moline Public Hospital officials. Hospital officials Monday declined to identify the patient suspected of having the ailment, but said a specimen from the patient has been sent to the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta for tests.

An industrial laborer from Silvis, Ill., died last week of Legionnaire's Disease in Moline Lutheran Hospital.

Officials said specimens from other patients with pneumonia-like diseases will be sent to the CDC because of the publicity surrounding last week's fatality.

Wooden walkways win bleachers bid

By LYNN PHILIPP
Staff Writer

A low bid of $30,800 on new stadium bleachers for the Iowa City School District submitted by Southern Bleacher was accepted Tuesday night by the Iowa City Community School District Board of Directors. The bleachers will have aluminum seats, wooden walkways and wooden footboards. An additional $1,100 was included in the bid for construction of a riser board to help keep trash accumulation under the bleachers to a minimum. Another bid submitted by Stadiums Unlimited was turned down by the board. A representative of Stadiums Unlimited said although their bid was higher, the all-aluminum construction would wear better than wood. The board decided that the durability of the wood was suitable. A Health Services policy was adopted by the board after its second reading. Board member Dr. David Cronin said the major objectives of the policy are to provide emergency care and to get school nurses involved with other staff members to promote health services.

However, Cronin added that with only seven nurses in the school district, they would have little time for promotional teaching. In a discussion of permanent records policy, several board members questioned the importance of retaining grade points and class rankings for release to employers at the students' discretion. It was decided that the board should have an annual review of the content of permanent records. In related discussion, board member Ruth Skelley questioned the wording of policy proposals. She said although it was not necessary for the board to approve all administrative regulations, the words with concurrence of the board "should be inserted into regulations we want brought before us. "I want those graduation requirements and methods of recording progress before the board," Skelley said. In other action, the board tabled Guidance and Special Services policies until the first meeting in November.

Ten years in the Iowa Men's Reformatory in Anamosa was the sentence given to Eddie Collins Tuesday after he was found guilty of his May 26 Johnson County jail escape.

Collins was serving a sentence in the jail after being found guilty in January of committing a larceny of over $20. Collins allegedly stole suitcases and other property from Lewis Straughn while Straughn was staying at the Wesley House in November.

Appeal bond for the escape charge was set at $5,000.

A $157,000 lawsuit was filed by Floyd Zook against Carla Kratz in the Johnson County court Tuesday based on an auto accident that took place Oct. 3, 1975.

Zook and his wife Arvilla claim that Kratz was negligent in failing to yield the right of way, resulting in the collision between the two cars. The accident occurred while both cars were driving north on Highway 218 a few miles south of Iowa City.

Zook is seeking judgment for the physical injuries he received and the damage done to his car.

Korean-born citizen indicted for bribery

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal grand jury indicted a second Korean-born businessman in its Capitol Hill bribery investigation Tuesday, charging he ran a covert influence peddling scheme called "Operation White Snow" with $600,000 in Korean CIA money.

Following up on its earlier indictment of fugitive millionaire Tongsun Park, the grand jury handed up a 25-count indictment for conspiracy to fraud and false declaration against Hancho C. Kim, a naturalized U.S. citizen now living in Lanham, Md.

Both indictments stem from the Justice Department's probe of allegations that the South Koreans, during the 1970s, plied members of Congress with cash, gifts, sex, lavish parties and other favors in an effort to win passage of legislation favorable to Seoul.

As in the Tongsun Park indictment, the grand jury accused Hancho Kim of direct links to the CIA and thus tied the alleged bribery effort to official South Korean government organs.

But unlike the earlier indictment, it did not name any of the congressmen who allegedly accepted money and gifts and said only that some of Kim's funds were intended for distribution to "members of Congress."

Tongsun Park, a millionaire rice dealer and former Washington socialite, is in South Korea and thus far has refused to return to the United States to face his 36-count indictment for conspiracy, defrauding the government, mail fraud, racketeering and making illegal political contributions.

Hancho Kim, however, is an American citizen residing in a Washington suburb. He is in the cosmetics business and is a former trustee of American University in the District of Columbia.

His Washington attorney, David Povich, declined to comment until he had seen the indictment, and said he had advised Kim to do the same.

The indictment charges him with conspiring with two former KCIA agents to defraud the U.S. government by conducting "a clandestine operation in the United States called 'Operation White Snow' for the purposes of increasing foreign aid to the Republic of Korea" and creating "a favorable attitude towards the government of the Republic of Korea and its officials."

Lawyer indicted in bombing

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — A grand jury has indicted an avowed racist Georgia lawyer for a 1958 black church bombing in Birmingham, and more indictments will be sought for other racial bombings in addition to a murder indictment already returned, sources said Tuesday.

Sources said the indictment was sent to officials in Marietta, Ga., to be served on J.B. Stoner, director of the National States Rights Party. There was confirmation from Georgia officials that the indictment had been forwarded.

Stoner was indicted Monday for the 1958 bombing of the black Bethel Baptist Church in Birmingham, sources said. No one was injured in that blast.

Stoner said he expected to be arrested shortly and would fight extradition to Alabama. "I'm not guilty," he said.

After his arrest, Stoner said he would file a habeas corpus petition, naming an undercover FBI agent and Birmingham police detective who allegedly tried to recruit him in 1957 for the bombing of Bethel Baptist Church, whose minister, the Rev. Fred L. Shuttlesworth, was a black civil rights leader.

"This same undercover agent wanted me to arrange for the killing of Martin Luther King (Jr.), this was about 1957," Stoner said. At the time, King, who was slain in 1968 in Memphis, Tenn., was pastor of a church in Montgomery, Ala. "He insisted that I find a good marksman to kill King — they wanted it done by rifle," Stoner said.

He said he didn't know why the men also wanted the Birmingham church bombed. "I know I didn't have anything to do with it," Stoner said.

Former Ku Klux Klansman Robert Chambliss, 73, was indicted by the same grand jury Monday on four counts of first-degree murder for the 1963 bombing of the Sixteenth Street Baptist Church. He was arrested at his home and held without bond.

But attorney Arthur Hanes Jr. Tuesday prepared a writ of habeas corpus to file in Jefferson County Circuit Court asking why Chambliss was being held.

Four young black girls were killed in the Sept. 15, 1963, dynamite blast.

"We're going to plead not guilty," said Hanes, whose father once represented James Earl Ray, convicted assassin of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Local restaurateur will run for council

Paul Poulsen announced Monday he will run for the Iowa City Council as an at-large candidate, challenging incumbents L.P. Foster and Robert Vevera.

Poulsen, who filed nomination papers last week, owns the Senor Pablos restaurant at 830 First Ave.

In a prepared statement, Poulsen said he is "concerned about the economy of the Iowa City government" and added that the city and the UI should have "closer harmony."

"Urban renewal is finally off and going and I am interested in seeing this property developed and put back into use as rapidly as possible" so it can be put back on the tax rolls, Poulsen said.

The primary council election is slated for Oct. 18; the four remaining candidates will advance to the Nov. 8 election.

'Costs an issue'

Peterson said, "You almost have to be assured of at least 97 per cent occupancy before an apartment building can be financed."

Hibbs said the ordinance will probably raise the maintenance costs for apartment owners. "The gross income from rents will be reduced and the landlord will have to recover that money somewhere else."

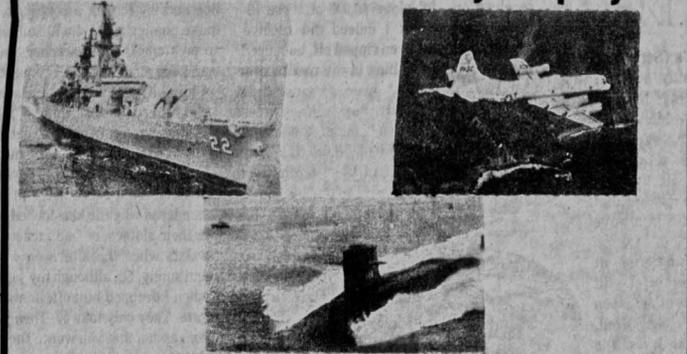

Enforcement of the housing code will not cost the majority of owners anything if they keep their units up to code standards, according to Baum. "A good apartment manager should have the costs of maintenance included in his budget," he said.

"Repair and deduct comes out of operating expenses. Things have to get done. That's one of the strengths of the ordinance," Baum said. "It's cheaper for the landlord to comply with the housing code promptly, rather than have the tenant or the city do it for him."

The Student Senate's refusal to certify the local chapter of the National Federation of the Blind (NFB) as a recognized student organization because of the NFB's "discriminatory" membership and office-holding rules is a classic example of the letter of the law confounding the spirit and intent of the law.

The NFB filed for organizational recognition last spring, hoping to gain use of UI facilities and to qualify for financial assistance through the student fees allocated by the senate. However, the Student Activities Board recommended rejection of the NFB petition because the NFB's rules require that its president, vice president and a majority of its voting members be blind. The board decided this provision was a violation of its antidiscrimination policies and the similar policies of the senate and the UI. This opinion was later upheld by the Student Judicial Court and was reflected by last Thursday's vote in the Student Senate. Although a 10-8 majority favored recognition of the NFB, the vote fell short of the two-thirds majority required to grant organizational status.

Senators opposed to the acceptance of the NFB petition argued that the organization is unfair to sighted people. Sen. Scott Paul asked, "Do you want to be discriminated against because you can see?" Other senators feared recognition of the NFB would set a dangerous precedent, opening a Pandora's Box of organizational discrimination. After the vote, Student Senate President Doug Siglin expressed satisfaction with the decision: "It is appropriate that senate should uphold something the university has been trying to do in the area of discrimination."

The opponents of NFB recognition, apparently unaware of how foolish their protest appears, believe themselves to be the guardians of principle, righteously defending the whole from the handicapped, the latest front in the battle against discrimination. They are correct to appeal to principle; unfortunately, they confuse derivative principles with first principles. The antidiscrimination regulations, to whose defense they rally, were predicated on the recognition of natural and social handicaps that prevent individuals from the realization of personal potential and full participation in society, and were devised to maximize the opportunities for the disadvantaged. Groups like the NFB are outstanding examples of the aspirations and dedication of the disadvantaged, and are an embodiment of the principles that formed the basis of the campaign for equal opportunity.

The senate indeed had the potential to set a precedent last week, a precedent for demonstrating the sound judgment and flexibility to recognize the exception that goes to the meaning of the rule and to act on that recognition with the confidence that it can tell the difference between the nature and purpose of the policies of the NFB and those of groups such as the Ku Klux Klan. Instead, the senate set a precedent for a narrow-minded, slavish adherence to the letter of the law, proving that there is more than one kind of blindness.

Whatever the eventual outcome of appeals reportedly planned in the case, the NFB will survive. The organization is a symbol of the determination of the blind not to be defeated by their handicap, certainly a more difficult obstacle than the folly of the UI Student Senate.

The regulations of the NFB that have been criticized by senators are not the result of malice toward or rejection of sighted people, but rather an expression of the pride of blind people in their abilities to cope with life and an encouragement to blind people to become self-confident and self-sufficient. These are goals that are legitimate and in harmony with the principles that are the foundation of the campaign for quality embodied in antidiscrimination policies.

The Student Senate should reconsider the application of the NFB and grant the group organizational status, recognizing the importance of the blind leading the blind.

Quota case

In another month, the U.S. Supreme Court will hear case 76-811, The Regents of the University of California v. Allan Bakke.

The importance of this case is tremendous; even Newsweek's cover story does not adequately represent its importance.

The Bakke case is expected to determine if affirmative action programs are unconstitutional if such programs discriminate against white males. Affirmative action programs are designed to improve the educational and employment opportunities of racial minorities and women.

The case raises the question of whether it is fair to discriminate against white males in order to reverse past and present discrimination against minorities and women.

Allan Bakke filed suit against the University of California at Davis, after he was denied admission to medical school and then discovered his college grades and aptitude test scores ranked above those of many students apparently admitted on the basis of their race or sex.

Americans take pride in the belief that this is the land of opportunity. In order to protect this belief, affirmative action policies were established to ensure that minorities and women were given a just opportunity to succeed. The problem arises when the fulfillment of such policies infringes upon the rights of other citizens to strive for success, equally protected under the 14th Amendment.

Although everyone is supposed to believe in success through hard and honest work, "the American way," it is still a fact of life that special treatment has and will continue to exist. The federal civil service gives special treatment to the hiring of veterans and, of course, children of alumni or wealthy contributors receive some form of special consideration at many colleges and universities.

Something is clearly wrong when the filling of a quota becomes the basis for selection. Such a system of selection prevents society from receiving the best possible abilities and services available.

The American ideal of equal opportunity is a commendable goal. However, the time has come to re-evaluate the methods by which equal opportunity is insured, when such methods actually deny another's opportunity to succeed.

Kent State no longer essential to the times

It is time to admit the obvious. The fight to stop construction of the Kent State gym is not a cause worth supporting.

For those of you who were not with us then, a brief history. On May 4, 1970, four persons were killed at Kent State when national guardsmen fired on students protesting the American invasion of Cambodia.

On May 5, America sat down to breakfast with Mary Ann DelVecchio. DelVecchio was a picture in our morning newspapers, a young woman kneeling beside one of the slain young men. We can never forget her face. It was palpable with grief, a mirror of our own shock and anguish. DelVecchio seemed to be looking at the worst of reality for the first time.

In the weeks following the slayings, this country shook with our anger. Seven hundred sixty universities were disrupted by student strikes. Just as importantly, our parents had their political consciences raised. It was no longer a matter of dirty girls and bearded, earringed boys being roughed up by police in Chicago. At Kent State they saw their own children dying on the lawns where they had sent us to meet our futures. Kent State and its aftermath proved to be the highpoint, the tragedy and the fulfillment of the politics of protest. Those were special years in our nation's history, and in our personal histories. Those years are gone and can never be repeated.

A group calling itself the Revolutionary Student Brigade (RSB) would have us think otherwise. They believe that the gym is being built by the rulers of this country who want to stamp out the lessons learned at Kent State. The tactics used by the RSB to stop this repression are a throwback to the instruments of resistance used during the protest years — occupation of property, defiance of court injunctions, the courting of mass arrests. And like any good protest group, they have their demands.

The first three of the RSB's demands are not surprising. They want the gym moved to another site, classes canceled permanently on May 4 and four buildings named after the four dead students. It is their fourth demand that is surprising because it seems so out of date. They want a statement from the Kent State administration admitting that the 1970 shootings were an injustice. It is a demand quintessentially sixtish.

The RSB would like the Kent State gym controversy to encourage re-radicalizing of the student population. They would have us believe that the causes and forces involved with the controversy are the same and that the emotions are the same. But all of us know differently. Kent State was yesterday's war.

We are living in the late '70s, and the political climate of America is simply different from then. There is no way to compare the importance of stopping the construction of a gymnasium with the importance of ending the war in Vietnam. And because the causes are different, there is no way to elicit the emotional commitment we felt then.

Some will say that yesterday's firebreathers are growing old, but it could be that they are growing new. Two weeks ago Mark Rudd surrendered to the FBI. Rudd, fugitive co-founder of the radical Students for a Democratic Society (SDS), had just turned 30 and did not feel he could go on being a revolutionary for the rest of his life. He wanted to start something new, he said.

It is a point that could be well taken by the RSB. Their rhetoric and demands are no longer essential to the times. Kent State is no longer essential. We are in new times; we have new demands; we need not commit our energies to memorializing entire bloodfields.

If it is a proper remembrance of the dead that the RSB is seeking, and not just inflated controversy, the group might arrange for four plain torches to be lit permanently outside the new gymnasium. The RSB might recall that in the Vietnamese culture a fire on a lake is the symbol of permanent revolution. The group might recall an old friend singing in the '60s that when it is all over we should strike another match and start anew.

It is time to strike the torches at Kent State and let the new gym be built. Past time.

Moral force of the slum provided by street gangs

It can be argued that, given the conditions and needs in urban slums, the gang offers a better educational bet than the school does. In addition, the gang "protects and serves" its members — which, curiously enough, is the motto of the Chicago Police Department.

A well-run slum gang will take in an ignorant

boy of 13 and teach him just about everything he needs to know for survival and sometimes supremacy in the world he inhabits.

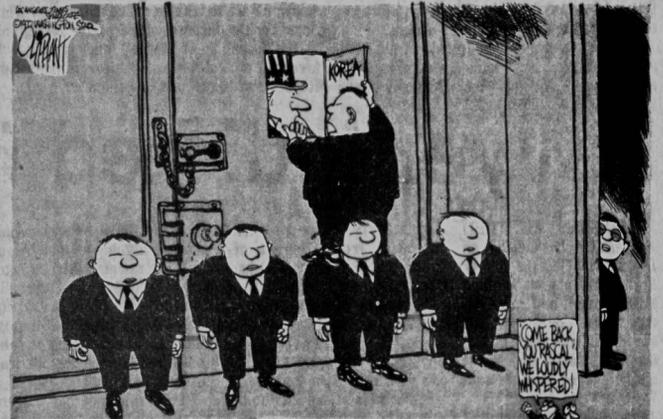

It sends him out to rob and steal, and it is amazing how fast even the dullest school pupil acquires proficiency in these street arts. If he gets caught and sent away, he is likely to find an active chapter of his gang — or one much like it — in the detention home, where he learns even more.

And should he make it into his majority and suddenly find himself in an adult prison, his gang connection offers as solid an entry to the prison elite as a Social Register listing at Bar Harbor.

What can school possibly do for a lad like this, if he lacks extraordinary powers of mentation or physical prowess? The school he sullenly goes to can at most ill-prepare him for a vocation he either despises and will be mediocre at, or one he cannot possibly attain.

It teaches him about the past, which he is content to remain oblivious of, and steers him toward a future that is highly problematic by the terms of his inheritance, environment and peer pressures. Almost nothing in the school curriculum appears as even vaguely realistic to him.

Meanwhile, the gang is often mother, father and big brother; the only focus for his latent feelings of loyalty and "belonging;" a buffer against the chill winds of indifference and downright hostility; and, perhaps most of all, a social institution that is practical in its functions and pragmatic about its goals.

"NO YOU CAN'T HAVE TONGSUN PARK — NOW, HAND OVER OUR AID CHECK AND KINDLY BUG OFF!"

How can the school in such areas compete with the gang? It is patently a lop-sided contest, and the gang is winning more year after year, because it provides what is needed and wanted. Pouring more money, equipment and teaching staff into such schools is like trying to irrigate the Sahara with a sprinkling can.

Nobody wants to recognize this truth. We fatuously expect our schools to be able to do what parents cannot do, police cannot do, churches and public agencies cannot do. They have lost their moral force, if they ever had any there, and without moral force no other force can prevail.

There is only one moral force in the urban slum, and that is the gang. It demands, and gets, trustworthiness, loyalty, helpfulness, obedience and all the other Scout virtues — but for itself alone. And why not?

Readers: accents, errors, concessions, searches

Mush mouths

To The Editor:

Dave McLure's cartoon in today's (Sept. 22) DI is distinctly unfunny. Apparently stricken with an amnesia for humor, McLure depicted Budget Director Bert Lance crowded into a phone booth conversing with David Frost (Lance obviously hot on Nixon's heels) in an insipid southern accent ("Mistah Frost? Bert Lance hea..."). McLure seems to have concluded that when all else fails, a southern accent is always funny.

It's not that I object to poking fun at southerners through the way they talk; I still chuckle when I recall an Oliphant cartoon depicting George Wallace saying, "Seig Heil, Y'all." But I don't think that the accent itself is intrinsically funny any more than some of these whiney nasal twangs I hear in the Midwest are funny in and of themselves. Why should people be either embarrassed or defensive about the way they learned to talk?

I spent the summer in a small, predominantly black, southern town. No doubt McLure would have a field day, Amos 'n Andy fashion, making fun of the way they talk. But then that would be considered tasteless — which it is — as tasteless as his cartoon today.

So come on, McLure, get your grits together and lay off us mush mouths (Doooh-dah, doooh-dah).

Fairy tale

To The Editor:

I am writing this in reference to the article that appeared in the Sept. 14 issue of the DI naming me as the erroneous recipient of the 16,000 Student Buying Power Cards. I would be very interested in knowing where Mr. Mapp got his information.

First of all, I am not now, nor have I ever been, an "instructor" in the French Department at the UI. I have been a "teaching assistant" in the French Department at the UI for the past four years. You were close, Mr. Mapp. Nice try! Then there was the matter of my supposedly having received 16,000 Student Buying Power Cards. Wrong again, Mr. Mapp! I have never even received one, let alone 16,000 of those ill-fated little creatures. If I indeed did receive them, then I must have been ripped off, because I have not discovered anything in my mailbox for the past two weeks that even resembled an SBPC. However, I'm only hazarding a guess there, for I've never seen one of the blasted things, so I don't know if I would be astute enough to recognize 16,000 of them oozing from my 8 by 3 by 4 mailbox. Oh, what I wouldn't give to see the postman trying to cram 16,000 of those "power cards" into my box! Quel spectacle! That would be a valiant effort, but futile I'm afraid.

So Mr. Mapp, I would be most interested in hearing about where you did get your information. Have you ever thought about writing fiction? You definitely seem to exhibit a knack and a penchant for it!

And just to let you know that there are no hard feelings towards you, mon cher Monsieur Mapp, I leave you with this line from one of my all-time favorite fairy tale films, "La Belle et la bete": "Que le diable t'emporte et te couvre de crottes."

Can't say hot dog

To The Editor:

This year my 13-year-old, eighth grade son decided that he would sell concessions at the football games for the UI home games. It would give him a chance to earn a little money and see part of the game all at the same time. So, he set about asking the "pros" in the field how you about it.

You get there early, fight for your position in line and try to pick a concession that is easy to make change for and will sell well. You also try to pick one that the workers in the backrooms can keep pace with. So I consented. I had visions of him having to be at the stadium at 11 a.m. or somewhere close to that.

I was wrong. In order to get a place in line you must be there at 5:30 in the morning and protect your post until they let the boys through the gates at 10:30. That's five hours in line, and I always wondered why the kids looked like they had slept in their clothes, or had jackets tied around their waists when the afternoon weather was warm and sunny. So, although my son was eighth in line when I dropped him off, he was 41st through the gate. They only take $2. Then you rush to get the concession that you want. Then load up and sell. But they aren't given any change, so unless you were smart enough to know that and plan ahead, your first few customers have to have the correct change.

My son chose to sell hotdogs. The containers, which have bunsen heaters in the bottom, hold 25 hotdogs. I think he gets about eight cents a dog, so he makes about $2 on every container he sells. Then, when the container is empty, he has to hustle back to the "kitchen" and load up again, plus paying for the batch he just sold.

I asked him when he came home if had gotten any tips. He said no, but one of the boys had gotten a dollar. Probably a parent, I thought, of a boy who had once sold hotdogs.

Zapped

To The Editor:

My husband and I attended the Frank Zappa concert in Des Moines, where we now live. It was the only major concert I have attended outside Iowa City. Since we lived in Iowa City from 1970 to 1974, I have experienced the Iowa gamut of attitudes from the insular, somewhat irresponsible, freedom of Iowa City during the early '70s to the opposite of a small, northwest Iowa town, whose hub is a meat packing plant.

What has never ceased to amaze me is the apparent driving force of human nature to judge and control the attitudes and actions of other human beings, especially when such behavior and thoughts have no negative impact upon others.

I have been on both sides of intolerance — both the disgustor and the disgustee. Upon reflection, both were equally unflattering.

So, when Des Moines police, under orders from the city council, harassed Zappa concert-goers with superficial "pat-down" searches, and Zappa expressed sympathy to the audience for being made victims of "someone's political aspirations," I was not surprised. Neither was I surprised by the number of concert-goers not being responsible for themselves, especially in the 10 to 16 year age group.

Frank Zappa was not surprised by his first visit to Des Moines, Iowa, which he said everyone ought to visit at least once to see if it really is there. It is here, and it's not the "surprising place" that the city motto suggests.

We have visited Iowa City many times since 1974, and each time my mental image of that fortress of social tolerance has become a bit faded. Zappa has delighted us by exploring our own particular intolerances in an unsurpassed musical medium...

Frank Zappa is to be commended for the quality and quantity of concert he gave in the face of the city's official attitude and threats to "pull the plug." Follow his example. For sure, "brown shoes don't make it," but give the people inside them a chance. He did that for the people in Des Moines who attended his concert, and I'm grateful.

Merit Sparks Low Tar Boom!

'Enriched Flavor' tobacco seen as major factor in unprecedented smoker move to low tar.

Since its introduction, MERIT has become one of the most popular new cigarettes in twenty years.

A popularity largely responsible for a significant growth in low tar smoking.

The reason: 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco. Tobacco that delivers extra flavor without the usual corresponding increase in tar.

The kind of flavor smokers can switch to—and stick with.

Here are the taste-test results which show why smokers are switching to MERIT. If you smoke, you'll be interested.

Tests Prove Taste

MERIT and MERIT 100's were both tested against a number of higher tar cigarettes. The results proved conclusively that 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco does boost taste without the usual increase in tar.

Overall, smokers reported they liked the taste of both MERIT and MERIT 100's as much as the taste of the higher tar cigarettes tested.

Cigarettes having up to 60% more tar! Only one cigarette has 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco.

And you can taste it.

Writers share in odd ritual

By DEBBIE BUNCH
Staff Writer

It is, after all, an odd rite. There is a room, a rostrum, some water, a few typewritten sheets to be shuffled, coughing in the auditorium, throat-clearing on the stage, and then words begin to fall into the silence.

This is a fiction reading. At such an event, writers stand before presumed readers and make the unusual attempt to reach them through their voices rather than through their publishers. It is, says Ian McEwan, "an exhilarating experience for the writer."

"It is a direct experience," he continues, "of how his work is received. Musicians have this, actors have this—but it is rare for writers. It's an opportunity for them to break out of their isolation."

McEwan is one of three authors who will have such an opportunity Wednesday evening. Along with Frank Conroy and Elizabeth Cullinan, he will be reading in Shambaugh Auditorium at 8 p.m.

Bergland advises pesticide cutback

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va. (UPI) — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland Tuesday endorsed efforts to move farmers away from agricultural chemicals and toward natural biological controls to combat pests.

Addressing a meeting of the National Agricultural Chemicals Association, Bergland said the bountiful American farm has been made even more bountiful by the use of hundreds of chemicals to increase productivity, protect crops and reduce labor requirements.

But he said more than one billion pounds of pesticide are being released into the environment each year, and the time has come to look at their environmental impact.

Bergland said the Agriculture Department itself failed to give pay adequate attention to eventual environmental and human consequences when heavy use of pesticides began. Their side effects and long-term impact have been unknown or ignored, he said, and little has been done to seek alternatives.

He said the department now will take the responsibility of finding other means of pest control and "show the American farmer that they work and are economically sound."

"For years," he said, "we have not offered American farmers much of an alternative to the technique of applying pesticides to crops at set intervals, whether the crops needed it or not."

"And the American farmer, in his drive to produce more for a world that almost always wants more, knows a good thing when he sees it."

Bergland said some crop insects have begun to build up resistance to chemicals.

uninitiated into the rites of fiction readings, may wonder what exhilaration such an event offers to the audience.

There is, as a beginning, novelty. You may encounter a new writer whose words will stir you, or you may be introduced to an old favorite in a new setting.

And, in this case, you will listen to the work of three people not only talented, but charming.

Frank Conroy, whose novel Stop Time is "an adult remembering childhood" in sharp, pure prose, pulled out The Red and The Black in his office and pointed to a starred epigram: "Everything I am telling you, I saw; and though I might have been deceived while seeing it, rest assured that I am not deceiving you as I tell it." He is concerned, he says looking out of his window, with creating imaginary worlds as real as those we live in.

"I write entirely from my head—600 or 700 words a day is fantastic for me. I try not to be too mechanical or conscious of what comes next in my writing...it's as if I'm a radio through which music is being played. I'm listening at the same time that I'm writing it down. Not that I'm totally passive—writing is not improvisation or totally spontaneous. I try to be controlled. But you can't limit what you write to what you rationally know."

He is wary of committing himself to a "philosophy" of writing or a statement about "function" of art. "In a sense, art is totally useless," Conroy concedes, "but in a sense, it is the only thing that makes any difference. Official writing creates a dismal state. The business of a writer is to write...what happens later to his work, what readers and critics find, is largely beyond his control."

"Few writers have a conscious philosophy," Ian McEwan, author of First Love, Last Rites and Between the Sheets, agrees. "It's a matter of taste and personal preoccupation. I suppose I'm looking for a fictional form that will allow the unconscious to speak through a structure still intelligible and coherent. I sit for long weeks, blank paper before me, in a sort of trance and wait for a sentence which has some urgency to materialize. Then I find whose voice speaks the sentence.

Elizabeth Cullinan communicates shyly that she is a writer and not a talker and says very little even about her books: House of Gold, The Time of Adam and Yellow Roses. She does offer a brief theory of writing: "Be clear. Say what you mean. Let a story shape itself within the limits of your personality." Like Conroy, she ventures a favorite line from another writer. "Yeats says that a writer need not seek for originality. Every tragedy has its own dimensions and is unique."

Suppose I told you that Frank Conroy lives on the island of Nantucket and plays jazz piano three months a year? That Ian McEwan received a fan letter from a 6-3 nightclub dancer who informed him that she had read no fiction since high school but that his stories had transformed her life? That Elizabeth Cullinan learned to write while working for a fiction editor at The New Yorker?

These anecdotal facts may not tell you as much as the reticence of these writers in defining their art and their purpose in creating, their refusal to indulge in aimless speculation about the concept of audience or the future of literature, their insistence upon writing that is clear and clean and tells a story that may be understood without being compromised or reduced to clichés.

These are real artists, not talk show celebrities. I begin to believe, however, that the point of the ceremony of fiction reading may well be to give us a more vivid sense of the artist who speaks personally through his or her writing. Considering Conroy, McEwan and Cullinan, that may not be such a strange ritual.

The Daily Iowan/John Danicic Jr.
Authors Ian McEwan (left), Frank Conroy and Elizabeth Cullinan will share their fiction with interested Iowa Citizens at 8 o'clock this evening in Shambaugh Auditorium. Each of the writers has produced several published works.

"Also, we've got to start being more realistic in these energy-short times about the use of oil and petroleum-based products," he said.

"And finally, there appears to be an opportunity to help ease this nation's unemployment by using 'people power' instead of only chemicals in our fight against pests."

Congress examines great American diet

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A member of Congress ground up a whole wheat breakfast for his colleagues. TV commercials flickered ads for foods with high sugar content.

And a long string of witnesses told a House agriculture subcommittee Tuesday Congress should do something about the American diet.

Subcommittee member Steve Symms, D-Idaho, fixed the breakfast for the subcommittee.

"It's simple and nutritious and it doesn't cost very much," he said, scooping whole grain wheat out of a big jar and dumping it into a hand grinder on the witness table. All you do, he said, is add water, heat, add milk, honey or butter and enjoy.

While his colleagues chomped on plastic bowlsful of cereal, Symms said whole wheat sells for about 10 cents a pound in Idaho but is hard to find in supermarkets.

"We are spending more than $70 million a year on a patchwork of more than 30 uncoordinated and unfocused programs administered by 11 different agencies which are going blithely about their business in splendid isolation from each other and the contemporary world in which we live," said Rep. Fred Richmond, D-N.Y.

Richmond asked the witnesses for concrete suggestions on what the government could do. The answers ranged from better education for professionals to incentives for food companies to turn out TV commercials stressing nutrition.

Nutrition activist Robert Choate, whose 1970 attack on the sugar content of breakfast cereals helped crystalize that issue, showed the subcommittee films of cereal and candy TV ads featuring animated figures and hard sell pitchmen promoting sugary products.

Choate suggested commercials aimed at children should include a cartoon figure during the last five seconds of the ad giving some clue as to the nutritional content of the product.

Farmers' future foretold at show

By R.C. BRANDAU
City Editor

Combining the talents of over 1,000 acres of prime Iowa topsoil, almost every commercial pesticide available and even hogs dressed in racing silks, the Farm Progress Show being held near Kalona could host up to 250,000 people today through Thursday.

The Farm Progress Show is held annually in either Illinois, Indiana or Iowa and is sponsored by Wallaces Farmer magazine. This year representatives from over 400 farm implement companies are in attendance to demonstrate their products on 700 species of corn, sorghum, soybean and alfalfa plants.

Daily demonstrations of discing, plowing, harvesting, terracing and crop drying will take place.

Due to the large amount of competition between the various companies in attendance, one firm, the Heindol Co., has initiated the sport of hog racing in racing silks to attract potential buyers to their display tent.

Twenty-five pigs, clad in racing silks, take turns sprinting from a special starting gate along a 40-yard sawdust track to a feed dish at the end of the course.

Roy Holding, advertising manager for Heindol, said he trained the hogs by not feeding them and then putting a feed dish at the end of the course.

"Within eight days they knew enough to get into the starting gate on command," he said. "One guy can't handle them anymore. They'll line up quick and if you're not ready they'll be down at the end again."

Heindol, an independent hog buyer, will permit visitors to bet on the races for promotional prizes. Holding said his only worry is that "some old codger farmers are going to sit around the tent all day, making book on the races."

Another exhibit at the show entitled "Agrifuture," sponsored by the Future Farmers of America and the White Farm Equipment Co., predicts how agriculture will be in the 21st century.

The narrator of the Agrifuture film said all predictions are based on "scientific observation and analysis" and can be accomplished with present technology.

The predicted farm of the future will be an average of 2,000 acres and produce enough food for 3,000 people. The film alleged that farmers will make up only one-tenth of 1 per cent of the U.S. population as compared to 6 per cent in 1975. Farmers will also have control over prices because of sophisticated world-wide co-ops made possible by the decreasing number of farmers.

Weather satellites will be used by farmers to obtain specific precipitation information for the week. Satellites will also relay an analysis of the market outlook conditions, indicate how much fertilizer to use and determine the best days to plant and harvest.

Through genetic manipulation and cross breeding, corn crops will increase in yield from the current level of about 180 bushels per acre to 400 to 500 bushels. The kernels will also be moved from the ear of the corn to the tassel.

All farm equipment will run on either methane gas or alcohol, both will be produced on the farm; methane from manure and alcohol from corn silage.

Planting will be done with biodegradable seed tapes which will contain not only the properly-spaced seed, but starter fertilizer, herbicide and insecticide as well.

Hovercraft that will not compact the soil while caring for the crop during the growing season will control weeds, insects and plant disease with applications of ultraviolet radiation and specially-developed bacteria and viruses.

Harvesting at a rate of 100,000 bushels a day, lasers will cut the straw and compressed air will do the separating. Quick spoiling crops, such as legumes, will be harvested, processed and frozen in the harvesting vehicle while in the field.

The Daily Iowan/Dom Franco

A pig farmers profit is largely determined by the length of time it takes to get the animal up to a market weight of about 210 lbs. Protein enriched food supplements increase the rate of the pigs weight gain.

The Daily Iowan/Dom Franco

Prospective buyers at the Farm Progress Show carefully observe the performance of one of the many combines, examining the field after the crop has been harvested to see how much was left behind.

FIRST LOVE (1970)
A beautiful love story by the masterful Russian author, Ivan Turgenev, has been made into an exquisite, internationally acclaimed film. Maximilian Schell (The Pedestrian) made a dramatic directorial debut with this bitter-sweet study of a sixteen-year-old boy who becomes infatuated with an impoverished princess during an era of social decay and impending revolution. Schell himself plays the boy's father, who overcomes all competition in winning the young beauty.

Top Cubs 15-9

Phillies wrap up title

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Philadelphia Phillies are National League Eastern Division champions for the second consecutive year and slugger Mike Schmidt feels it was harder the second time around.

The Phils captured the division title Tuesday when pitcher Larry Christenson hit a grand slam homer and drove in five runs to record his 18th victory, a 15-9 triumph over the Chicago Cubs. The win sends the Phils against the Dodgers in a best three-of-five series for the NL pennant starting in Los Angeles next Tuesday night. Philadelphia's last pennant came in 1950.

"We climbed a bigger hill this year than last year," Schmidt said after hitting his 38th homer and scoring three runs. "I feel we're a better club than last year's when we had a 15-game lead through most of the season. We had to come from behind this time."

Christenson was the star in the clincher as the right-hander paced the Phils' 16-hit attack off six Chicago hurlers. Christenson, 18-6, went seven innings and left during a five-run Chicago eighth. Tug McGraw mopped up for the Phils.

"It was one of the best hits I had but not the best," said Christenson of his third home run of the season. "I recall last season when I hit two off of Mickey Lolich in New York to help in a come-from-behind victory. It came at a time when the team was struggling."

With the Phils leading 4-2, Christenson's homer highlighted a seven-run seventh inning off reliever Dennis Lamp. The other runs scored on Garry Maddox's two-run single and Bob Boone's RBI double. Boone knocked in three runs altogether and Schmidt hit his homer in the eighth inning.

Philadelphia took a 2-0 lead in the second when Boone's single scored Richie Hebner, who had singled and gone to second on an infield out. Boone went to second on the throw home and to third on Ted Sizemore's single. Christenson's sacrifice bunt scored Boone.

Each team pounded out 16 hits. Chicago scored once in the third as Bonham doubled, took third on an infield out and scored when Greg Luzinski dropped Greg Gross' fly ball.

Philadelphia took a 4-1 lead in the sixth when Luzinski's single scored Larry Bowa, who had singled and gone to second when Schmidt was hit by a pitch. A sacrifice and an intentional walk filled the bases before Boone's infield out scored Schmidt.

The Cubs made it 4-2 in the bottom of the sixth. Steve Ontiveros doubled and went to third when Bake McBride overran the ball for an error. Gene Clines doubled in Ontiveros.

The Phils added three insurance runs in the ninth. McGraw walked, McBride singled and Bowa singled to load the bases. Schmidt's infield single scored McGraw, and Jerry Martin's single brought home McBride and Bowa.

Gross' triple scored Ivan DeJesus, who had singled, and Bobby Murcer's sacrifice fly scored Gross for the Cubs' two runs in the seventh.

Larry Bowa is doused with champagne as the Philadelphia Phillies celebrate their 15-9 victory over the Chicago Cubs which clinched the Eastern Division National League pennant Tuesday.

USC climbs to No. 1

NEW YORK (UPI) — Southern Cal and Oklahoma each received 14 first-place votes, but the Trojans edged out the Sooners by seven points to move into the No. 1 spot Tuesday in the United Press International Board of Coaches College Football ratings.

Southern Cal, with a 51-0 victory over Texas Christian Saturday, compiled 335 points to move from second to first while Oklahoma, with its stunning, last-second 29-28 upset over Ohio State, received 328 points and jumped from fourth to second. Ohio State dropped to seventh.

Michigan, which was ranked No. 1 the last two weeks, dropped to the third spot on nine first place votes and a total of 320 points. Like Southern Cal and Oklahoma, the Wolverines are 3-0. But they were not impressive in defeating Navy 14-7 Saturday and had a tough time overcoming Duke the week before.

Penn State moved from fifth to fourth following a strong 27-9 victory over Atlantic Coast Conference champion Maryland. Texas A&M, the only other team to receive a first-place vote, moved from No. 7 to No. 5 as the result of its 33-17 triumph over last week's No. 6 team, Texas Tech. The loss dropped Texas to No. 19.

Colorado extended its record to 3-0 with a 42-7 rout over New Mexico and climbed two positions to the sixth spot.

Texas, which did not play this weekend, moved up a notch to No. 8 and Florida moved from 10th to ninth with its 24-22 victory over Mississippi State, last week's No. 16 team. Mississippi State dropped out of the top 20 as the result of that loss. Nebraska, 2-1, moved into the No. 10 spot following its 31-10 win over Baylor.

Unbeaten Arkansas jumped from 15th to 11th, while Alabama maintained its No. 12 position. Defending national champion Pittsburgh moved to No. 13, while Brigham Young, which was tied with Pitt for No. 17 last week, took the No. 14 spot.

Four teams which did not make the top 20 last week surfaced on the list this week. California took over No. 16 by beating Missouri at Missouri. Houston moved into the 17th slot while Arizona State became No. 18. Wisconsin, with its victory over Oregon, rounded out the top 20.

Schembechler gets Big Ten reprimand

SCHAUMBURG, Ill. (UPI) — Michigan football Coach Bo Schembechler received a public reprimand from Big Ten commissioner Wayne Duke Tuesday for derogatory comments on officiating at the Duke-Michigan game Sept. 17.

Duke acted under a sportsmanlike conduct code which the Big Ten has had in effect for the past four seasons.

The code includes a paragraph that public criticism of officials would be cause for a public reprimand and a second offense cause for a one game suspension.

"I find it unfortunate that I must cite Coach Bo Schembechler ... for his public statement concerning officiating in the Duke-Michigan football game. I have made this finding pursuant to my responsibilities under conference procedure," Duke said.

The penalty was levied for Schembechler's comments after the Duke game which read in part, "I never have liked split crews and you can quote me on that. I certainly question the three delay of game calls against us. The ACC officials made those calls. They were helping their team while our Big Ten officials stood around like a bunch of goons."

"Our conference sends three nondescript guys here and they just stand around. I'm not saying they should call them for us, but they ought to tell those southern guys 'don't try to just hand them the game.'"

Stickers keep on winning

Iowa's field hockey team remained unbeaten after scoring a 2-1 victory over Northeast Missouri Tuesday.

The UI women jumped into the lead when Charlie McNally scored a goal with eight minutes remaining in the first half. Northeast Missouri, who came into the game sporting a perfect 4-0 record, came right back with a goal less than a minute after McNally's shot.

The second half saw more aggressive play as Iowa's McNally suffered a neck injury and was taken to UI hospitals. The Iowa stickers fired up at that point and charged back as Sue Smith put Iowa ahead for good on a goal just eight minutes into the second half.

The UI women fired 13 shots on the Northeast Missouri goalie while Iowa's Sara Jane Bove and Michelle Millang rejected eight scoring attempts. Iowa held the edge in penetration time in both halves: four minutes and eight seconds to Northeast Missouri's 2:16 in the first half. For the game, Iowa totaled 7:11 while limiting its opponent to 5:12.

"We played a good aggressive and hustling game," Coach Margie Greenberg said. "It was a good win especially after we split with them last year."

"I don't want to single out any players on defense because they all played well; it was really a team effort although M.B. Schwarze played a good defensive game," Greenberg added. "Offensively, we played well and Carla Seltzer was particularly strong. She had a number of fast breaks that really helped us."

Iowa's reserves completed the afternoon by scoring a 1-0 shutout over the Northeast Missouri reserves.

Suzanne Humphrey broke away on a fast break passing to Peggy Brown, who worked past the Northeast Missouri sweep and slammed in Iowa's only goal.

The UI reserves fired six of their eight shots on their opponent's goal in the second half while Karen Dowling rejected 10 Northeast Missouri shots. Iowa once again held the edge in penetration time, 5:44-2:03.

"I thought they did a super job," Greenberg commented. "The goal by Brown was a dream goal. That's the way it's supposed to look. The passing, the shot, everything was just beautiful," she added.

Yanks win in ninth

NEW YORK (UPI) — Thurman Munson scored from third base on Jim Bibby's second wild pitch of the ninth inning Tuesday night enabling New York to score a 2-1 victory over the Cleveland Indians, the Yankees fifth consecutive victory.

The triumph, their 11th in 13th meetings with the Indians this season, reduced the Yankees' magic number for clinching the American League East title to three games.

Munson led off the ninth with a single and moved to second on Bibby's first wild pitch of the inning. After Reggie Jackson drew an intentional walk, Lou Piniella advanced the runners with a sacrifice bunt. Then, with Dave Kingman at bat, Bibby, 12-13, threw a pitch into the dirt, for his third wild throw of the game.

Dick Tidrow started his seventh consecutive game for the Yankees since being inserted into the rotation for injured Catfish Hunter. He pitched 7 1-3 innings before giving way to Sparky Lyle, who pitched 1 2-3 innings to raise his record to 13-5.

Boston sweeps 2

BOSTON (UPI) — Bill Campbell, looking every bit like the million-dollar relief pitcher the Red Sox purchased last winter, notched his 30th and 31st saves Tuesday night in keeping Boston's flickering American League East pennant hopes alive with a 6-5, 5-1 sweep of the Toronto Blue Jays.

Campbell, who leads the American League in saves and has made 68 relief appearances, pitched 1 2-3 innings in each game to pass Dick Radatz for the Red Sox' club record for saves. He has been credited with nine saves in his last 10 games.

The victories stretched the Red Sox' winning streak to five games and eight of the last nine games.

The Red Sox built a 5-0 lead through six innings of the nightcap, getting two runs in the second off unlucky Dave Lemanczyk. George Scott and Fred Lynn hit one-out singles and Butch Hobson was credited with an RBI double when second baseman Dave McKay and rightfielder Otto Velez collided on the third baseman's fly. Lynn, who moved to third on Hobson's hit, scored on Denny Doyle's groundout.

Ailing Hawks improve

Iowa Coach Bob Commings Tuesday named freshman Bob Commings Jr. as the starting quarterback for Saturday night's contest against UCLA as the Iowa injury situation eased somewhat.

Tailback Ernie Sheeler, who was initially called out of action for three to six weeks with a shoulder separation suffered in last weekend's 41-7 loss to Arizona, returned to practice Tuesday and may be ready to play against the Bruins.

Fullback Jon Lazar, held out of action against Arizona after enduring an ankle injury against Iowa State, is "going full steam" according to trainer Ed Crowley, and defensive tackle Joe Willis is improving after suffering an ankle bruise in the Arizona game.

Sophomore tailback Tom Renn is still hobbled by an ankle sprain, however, and has been listed as questionable for Saturday's game.

Mason wins honor for beating Hawks

TUCSON, ARIZ. (UPI) — Arizona football coach Tony Mason is pleased to have been named United Press International's Coach of the Week but he's not sure why he was chosen for the honor.

"I'm flattered. It's never happened to me before and I'm not sure I deserve it now but I take anything I can get," said Mason, whose Wildcats shocked Iowa 41-7 last Saturday. "I just hope they don't have me as the ham of the week," said the 47-year-old Mason who is known for his candor and sense of humor as well as his coaching ability.

Arizona rolled roughshod over the Hawkeyes, who went into the game with a 2-0 record and ranked fourth in the nation defensively allowing only 80 yards rushing per game. Arizona ran up 242 yards against Iowa on the Hawkeyes home turf.

On The Line with the DI sports staff

Just to stomp everyone when they're down, the staff has once again drawn up a list of difficult games to keep everyone guessing.

Circle the team you predict will win, or circle both teams to indicate a tie. For the game designated "tiebreaker," you must circle a winner and then predict a score. We determine the winner on the basis of the score and not the point-spread. Send your entry (one per person) through the campus or U.S. mail by noon Thursday to On The Line, The Daily Iowan, 111
