IPBN audit uncovers $1 million discrepancy

By Tony Murray

A discrepancy of almost $1 million exists between the IPBN's reported budget and the actual figures in its audit, according to an extraordinarily detailed examination of the IPBN's financial records by the United States Public Broadcasting Network (IPBN), the state agency overseeing the network.

The auditor's report, which Sen. William Fulbright, chairman of the Senate Appropriations subcommittee that oversees the IPBN, said he had prompted his investigation into IPBN, points out that the IPBN's reported budget, while it showed a $950,000 surplus, the actual budget was based on figures totaling $1,783,000.

The survey, which included 15,000 households in addition to the IPBN's own accounting records, was conducted in cooperation with the Federal Reserve Bank of New York and the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis.

The audit report said IPBN was unable to account for $750,000 of its budgeted costs, with its largest expenditure, $500,000, being for salaries and wages. The report also said the IPBN had not accounted for $200,000 of its budgeted costs, with its largest expenditure, $100,000, being for salaries and wages.

Fulbright, who was unable to be reached for comment, said the audit report was being prepared for submission to Congress. He said he had been concerned about the IPBN's financial practices since he took office as a senator.

The IPBN has been under scrutiny for several months, following a series of controversies, including allegations of misspending and accounting irregularities.

The IPBN's budget is set by the state Board of Regents, which is appointed by the governor. The board is expected to meeting later this month to discuss the report's findings.

The IPBN is a public service network that provides educational and cultural programs to the citizens of Iowa and Nebraska.

Israel in decision bind

President Sadat's decision to extend the economic boycott of Israel to include the Netherlands, Portugal and the United States has created a new bind for the Israeli government. The move has major implications for the region and the world, as the boycott expands to include major players in the international community.

Sadat's decision to extend the boycott to these countries has focused attention on the economic consequences of the boycott. The economic impact of the boycott is significant, as it affects trade, investment and tourism in the region.

The boycott is a form of economic warfare, aimed at isolating Israel and forcing it to comply with the terms of the peace treaty. The boycott is also a message to the world that Israel is isolated and that its economic well-being is affected by the boycott.

The Israeli government has been under pressure to respond to Sadat's decision. It has not yet announced its response, but it is expected to announce a response in the coming days.

The boycott is a complex issue, involving political, economic and strategic considerations. The Israeli government must weigh the economic consequences of the boycott against the political and strategic implications.

The boycott is also a reminder of the need for a comprehensive peace process in the region. The Israeli government must address the core issues of the conflict, including the status of Jerusalem, the settlements and refugee camps.

Leach demands ban of secret U.S. grain deals

By TIM DUNPHY

U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Earl L. Butz has called on President Carter to consider a proposal for cutting off direct payments to U.S. grain companies when they order grain from U.S. farmers.

The proposal, which Butz presented to the president last week, would cut off the government's payments to U.S. grain companies when they order grain from U.S. farmers. The companies would be required to pay the farmers the full value of their grain, including the government's payments, before the grain is shipped.

Butz said the proposal would be a major step toward eliminating the government's dependence on grain companies and would help ensure that the nation's farmers are paid fairly for their crops.

The proposal would also help reduce the volume of grain exported by the United States, which is a major factor in the country's trade deficit.

The proposal has been met with mixed reactions in Washington. Some agricultural groups have praised it, while others have criticized it.

Hanky-panky no more, men prefer marriage

NEW YORK - (A new study indicates that most American men, far from being "macho" or "playboys," have developed a prodigious appetite for matrimony. The study, released this week, surveyed thousands of randomly selected men and revealed that 75% of them plan to marry within the next five years.

The study, conducted by a team of anthropologists, sociologists, and psychologists, was based on interviews with 2,000 men aged 18-35. The findings indicate that a significant shift in masculine attitudes toward marriage has occurred in recent years.

"It's clear that the men we surveyed are more interested in commitment and stability," said Dr. John Smith, lead researcher of the study. "They want to build families and have children, and they're willing to make the sacrifices necessary to do so."

The study also found that men who have fathers still living at home are more likely to marry. Conversely, men who grew up without a father figure were less likely to marry.

Alcohol label should warn pregnant'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The head of the Food and Drug Administration today called for alcohol makers to place warning labels on their products to alert pregnant women that drinking could cause birth defects.

“Failure to take action is irresponsible,” said Kenneth Mason, president of Quaker Oats, to appear and present their side in the dispute. “Advertising aimed at children is absolutely harmless to the nation’s breakfast cereal, pre-sweetened or conventional, that excessive drinking can cause birth defects in the children they intake comes from breakfast cereal,” Mason said. “Of all the sugar in diet, using it to get a child to eat cereal is not a problem not only to the industry but also to American women, recognizing their limit their daily consumption in the equivalent.”

“We have exclusive responsibility for each alcohol ad, will move promptly to address this issue with the FTC,” Mason said. “We have had the FTC that excessive advertising aimed at children is.”

Mason said it would be a problem not only to the industry but also to American women, recognizing the need to limit their daily sugar consumption in the equivalent. “Of all the sugar in diet, using it to get a child to eat cereal is not a problem not only to the industry but also to American women, recognizing their limit their daily consumption in the equivalent. Women cagers score first win

The Iowa women's basketball team scored the 12th victory of the season Tuesday night by defeating Grand View, 97-59, behind senior center Cindy Hunter. The victory put the Hawkeyes at 12-2 on the season and at 4-2 in the Big Ten, and established at the start of the game. Though the temperature was beginning to get too hot and the ceiling was too low, the ladies were locked in a win. The Hawkeyes led throughout the remainder of the game, with Iowa's playoff run still on the line.

YORK CITY, Tex. — Texas coach Rick Barnes was looking forward to working with Sue Johnson in New York. As a college assistant, Johnson was in charge of the Hawkeye Park basketball team during the 1980s. Now, she's coming back to the Big Ten and the Hawkeyes to help prepare for the upcoming season.

"I've always loved Sue Johnson," Barnes said. "She was a great assistant coach at Iowa, and she's been a great basketball player."

Johnson is expected to return to Iowa this fall to begin her new role as an assistant coach for the Hawkeyes. She will work with the Hawkeye offense and defense, as well as the Hawkeye bench, to help prepare for the upcoming season.

"I'm really proud of the Hawkeyes," Johnson said. "They're a great team, and they're going to be a lot of fun to watch this year."

Johnson has been a college assistant coach for 12 years, spending the last eight years at Iowa. She has also worked at the University of Arkansas and the University of Texas. Johnson is a native of New York City, and she attended the University of Iowa.

Johnson's new role as an assistant coach at Iowa will allow her to work closely with the Hawkeye coaching staff, as well as the Hawkeye players, to help prepare for the upcoming season.

"I'm really excited to be back in Iowa," Johnson said. "I've loved my time here, and I can't wait to get started."

Sluggish Hawks edge Airliner

By ROGER THUROW

Iowa basketball Coach Lute Olson was impressed by his player's performance from the bench, but he was not pleased with the way they played. "I thought the varsity lineups were too tough," he said, "but I thought they'll learn from the experience and come back stronger." The Hawkeyes shot only 38.5% from the field in the first half and were down by 14 points at the half.

The Hawkeyes' debut in the International's Big Ten Basketball Championship was not as successful as expected. They were down by 14 points at the half and were unable to bounce back in the second half.
