Begin, Carter set surprise visit on Mideast

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Israeli Prime Minister Begin and U.S. President Carter will meet President Carter at the White House Friday as "the latest development" in the search for Middle East peace, the White House announced Tuesday.

If so, it would mark Begin's third visit to Washington since September 1976 and eight in all. The White House said only that he would meet with Carter Friday morning.

In Jerusalem, an Israeli government official said foreign ministers are to meet Wednesday to discuss the possibility of early Wednesday local time. The White House said it had no plans for Carter to attend the Middle East nations' meeting.

The White House official saidBegin would be accompanied by the Aharon Avrahm Rabin; Michael Ekhad, one of his close personal advisors; Hagi, Gen. Benjamin; and Ya'azam, the Israeli prime minister's deputy. The official declined to give specific details of Begin's itinerary prior to the visit and said the President "has accepted the plans." The official did not identify the President's wife, Mrs. Carter, as accompanying him to Washington.

There was no immediate indication whether Begin might have any dramatic peace proposals to discuss with Carter. The visit of his historic contacts with Egypt's President Anwar Sadat, and the visit of the follow-up conference scheduled to occur in the Middle East, a progress in peace negotiations.

The President and the prime minister will be expected to make announcements on the visit's progress and its reaction was to be expected. The White House official said, however, there were "no plans" for Carter to attend Washington's activities, which began last week and are expected to continue at least until the end of the month.

Red-line ban: No cure for ravages of capitalism

WASHINGTON (AP) — After several years of making it easier, the Federal Reserve Bank of Kansas City is now planning to consider a proposal to ban redlining, a practice in which banks deny loans to neighborhoods they believe will be risky.

The ban was inspired by a report that showed that redlining results in a decrease in home values, especially in neighborhoods with higher minority populations.

...in effect, the report showed that banks are systematically refusing to lend in certain neighborhoods, which results in decreased home values and higher mortgage rates for those areas.

...in order to make the housing market more fair and equitable for all, the ban could help reduce the racial disparities in homeownership rates.

...in conclusion, the ban is a necessary step to address the systemic racism in the housing market and promote economic justice for all communities.

It's finals week. How are you doing? I can call the police services at 9:18 p.m., and it will be a good idea to reserve a room until 9:30.

During the year, it's next impossible to get a room if you don't reserve a room in the first place. It's been a strange experience to receive a message from a room a week or two ago, at 7 a.m., that you can call the police services at 9:18 p.m., and it will be a good idea to reserve a room until 9:30.

Unfortunately, by this point every room is taken. The same problem occurs in many other states, and the ethnic minority students are the first to experience the difficulty in obtaining a room.

It's impossible to get a good idea about the number of students who are actually in need of a room, but we know that the problem is widespread.

...in conclusion, we need to take action to ensure that all students have access to a safe and comfortable place to stay during finals week.

Prison cruelty

This is an open letter to President Carter: We are a group of citizens who are concerned about the treatment of prisoners in federal prisons.

We have been following the news about prison reforms, and we are disappointed to hear that the proposals are not being implemented.

The largest was an attempt to live off the grid in the middle of nowhere, but the results were not what we expected. Instead of living off the grid, we found ourselves relying on a local farmer for our food and water.

This experience taught us a valuable lesson: it's important to be prepared for unexpected situations.

...in conclusion, we recommend that people who are interested in living off the grid should be prepared for the unexpected and have a support system in place.

Tuition

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress has passed a bill to increase tuition costs for college students. The bill, which was passed by a narrow margin, will raise tuition by 10% for all public and private universities.

...in conclusion, many students and their families are worried about the impact of this increase on their ability to afford higher education.

Farmer leaders demand action

By United Press International

With demands in state legislatures and from farmers for a ceiling on farm prices, Secretary of Agriculture Calvin L. Swanson, who is leading the Department of Agriculture's section of the White House economic team, met with leaders of the American Farmers Association Tuesday and asked them to help the government do a better job of understanding the farm problem.

"Farmers," Swanson said, "are doing a better job of understanding the farm problem than I am." He said that the farmers were doing a better job of understanding the farm problem than the government was doing.

The farmers who met with Swanson included representatives of the National Farmers Union, the American Farm Bureau, the National Grange, and the American Agriculture Movement.

They all agreed that the government was not doing a good job of understanding the farm problem and that the farmers were doing a better job.

Swanson said that he would try to learn more about the farm problem and that he would try to do a better job of understanding it.

He said that he would try to be more responsive to the farmers and that he would try to be more responsive to their needs.

Swanson also said that he would try to be more responsive to the farmers' demands and that he would try to be more responsive to their needs.

New York (UP) - Vermont got Jerry Jenkins on charges of grand theft after he reportedly took $516 from a woman in the state. The woman got the man a gallon of maple syrup. And New Yorkers got the bill for the wax and another $8 for shipping.

The Affair Jenkins came to an end Tuesday when the Vermont resident, according to sources, agreed to return to the Green Mountain State in lieu of charges of embezzlement and fraud.

"We thought it would be a nice gesture," Commissioner Curtis Donahue Smith told City Hall. "It's a great gift for the new governor and first lady to pass a bad check - and find other accommodations for the State's seal on it.

The honeymoon was over.

Meanwhile, as Jenkins was hustled out of Vermont State House (now known as the Statehouse) yesterday, he was quoted by his former leader as saying: "It was an easy decision. We are friends for life." Jenkins had been contracted to Howard Wishman who built the old Vermont Statehouse and who had been told he'd have to find another location.
